OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE RAINY DAY

Cecily Perth turned round in her bed and lay with her face toward the window. The rain dripped down in drab filaments that apparently strung sky and earth together. And Cecily Perth watched it with sick eyes.

She had been sick a week and was getting better. An attack of acute bronchitis, the doctor called it when he had climbed grouchily up the two flights of stairs to her tiny bedroom. He had charged $2 for feeling her pulse, recommending a mustard plaster, and counting out a few brown and white tablets. It had cost Cecily another dollar to induce the hurried and worried Flora to make the mustard plaster and bring her home hot tea and toast when she felt like swallowing them. The $3 out of one's last remaining $10 occasions considerable anxiety when there is no possibility of more money coming in.

To be sure, she had two stories out which she had not yet heard from, but they were morally certain to be returned with the little pointed rejection slip which, however, often she saw it, never failed to break her heart afresh. And when these stories fared back they must rest with a great sheaf of other stories similarly unfortunate, which lay in her trunk along with her increasingly meagre belongings, because she could not afford to buy stamps when she must eat in order to live and pay her landlady if she would be sheltered.

Cecily had come to the city in the flush of springtime and youth and high courage, with her little bundle of wares and delightful confidence in her ability to become what she long to be—a great writer. At first she had lived well and had not been too cast down when editors appeared cruel. But time passed, and so had her money. There was none to say her yea or nay as to how she spent it, but she soon perceived she must give it better cherishing. She had cut down her expenditures and at last, with her wings clipped and heavy, had found herself in Mrs. Sweeney's top floor back. There sickness had assailed her and she had come face to face with a rain-swept window and the ultimate agony of failure.

For she was a failure—no mistake about that now. She was just a pretty, delicate little girl who had been foolishly tempted by impossible dreams, who had played the prodigal with the money her dead father left her and who had thrown away the happy chance of being her second cousin David's wife.

Out in the country where she had lived all her life David had seemed an unromantic lover, and while she had liked him well enough for some things she had not liked him well enough to live out her life on an old farm. She had wings and she wanted to use them. The city called her. Of course, David had followed her to the city and urged her to marry him and go home, but she had been sure enough of herself then to laugh at him and shake her head merrily. And then he had grown angry and told her that she would never see nor hear from him again. The occurrence gave her an inspiring idea for a short story and she had written it with the feverish haste of one obsessed.

That was five months ago and since then much had happened. The story had made four separate trips and was gone on its fifth. David had passed into absolute silence and invisibility and she had fallen ill wearing too thin a coat in the city's untoward breezes.

Her money was almost gone; she had failed in her undertaking. She was not of the stuff that writers are made of, and she had best admit that by going docilely back to Arles and taking a school to teach that winter no matter what David or anybody else would think.

"It's going to hurt terribly," she thought. "It's going to just about kill me, but I can't stay here and starve. And I know now that's what I'm coming to."

With that thought of starving it occurred to her that perhaps she now could drink the cup of tea Flora had promised to prepare for her. So she reached out and jangled her little bell clamorously.

Flora appeared immediately. She was not ill-natured, merely overworked. "What you want?" she queried. "Oh! Your tea. My sakes, I forgot all about it."

Cecily lay waiting for her tea. She smelt it coming before she had it in her hand. Flora had arranged a little tray with some toast, a pickled pear and a large, full cup. Beside the cup lay a letter.

"That came in the mail this morning. I forgot it," Flora said.

Cecily felt her heart twist. Left alone with the tea, which smelled like a scorched blanket, and the letter, she chose the tea first, lest when she had pulled out the inevitable little printed slip her thirst should have fled.

Bad as it was, the tea heartened her. She nibbled at the toast and tasted the pear. Then, fortified, she opened the letter. Her story had come back, but instead of the printed slip there was a little typewritten letter signed by the editor himself! He said that he would be glad to accept the story provided she could rewrite the last portion so as to make it end happily. It was her story about herself and David.

When Cecily got through crying she began to realize that she had really what amounted to an acceptance at last. She forgot the rain and her own weakness, and slipping out of bed she hunted up a pad and pencil. Then, creeping back to bed, she proceeded to marry her hero and heroine.

It was engaging business, this she was at. She let it all happen just as she wished. Now it might have happened to David and her—see?—and sometimes she cried and sometimes she smiled while her pencil flew.

She was far, far lost in the scene when she heard the door opening with its customary creeping.

"May I come in?" somebody asked. And, then, before she could move or speak, David entered—actually David, although Cecily started at him as if she was seeing his ghost or his shadow.

"I knocked three times," he said, "but you didn't hear, and they told me you were sick. That's why I came right up. And here you are writing."

"I'm getting ready for my first acceptance," Cecily said. She let go the pencil and held up a small thin hand for David's taking.

The skies seemed falling all about her—the leaden skies that had poured rain upon her heart so long. She felt David's hand about her's and David's eyes on her face, and she turned her own eyes away shyly toward the grey window. But the window had ceased suddenly to be grey.

"Why, there's a sunbeam!.. she murmured.

"Yes," David said, deeply. "I brought it with me—for you. I couldn't stay away always, dear."

Cecily gulped. "I was going back to-morrow, alone," she confessed in her smallest voice.

David laid his other hand over her's and patted it tenderly. He did not speak. But then he did not need to—David had a way of saying so much with his eyes.

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.
DR. WOOD'S
NORWAY PINE SYRUP
CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Elliff, St. John's West Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold I went to two doctors with him, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough.

I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being a consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge "Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

SAILORS' PETS.

British Bluejackets Keep an Amazing Variety of Mascots.

Sailors are well known for their love of animals, and the British bluejacket is no exception to the general rule, for there is hardly a moderate-sized creature in existence which has not, at on time or another, found a home on board a British man-o'-war.

Such common animals as cats and dogs are found in the greater number of vessels afloat, but monkeys, bears, deer, and even crocodiles are by no means unknown, though nowadays they are only usually found in ships abroad. The ship's company of one in the Mediterranean some years ago owned a remarkably fine bear, and on one occasion the ship in question was lying alongside the Mole at Gibraltar, just ahead of a cruiser which had lately arrived from England. Sunday afternoon, by a long established naval custom, is usually spent in sleep, and when everybody had settled down to his nap, the bear took the opportunity of breaking loose and leaving his own ship, ambled along the wharf, and went on board the cruiser astern. The petty officer and corporal of marines on watch did not like the look of their visitor, and promptly made themselves scarce, while Bruin walked unmolested over the gangway and proceeded on a tour of inspection by himself.

He presently came to a cabin door with a curtain drawn across it. Inside, one of the lieutenants lay on his bunk enjoying a snooze, but hearing a strange sound the officer woke up to see an enormous shaggy head, a long red tongue, and a pair of fierce eyes framed in the doorway. The gallant sailor lost no time in springing from his bunk and in looking round for a means of escape, for the ferocious look on the animal's face led him to believe that he was about to receive an affectionate hug. But escape through the door was most effectually barred by the bear's great bulk, and there was nothing for it but to clamber out through the porthole, which the officer proceeded to do without loss of time.

Diving into the sea he swam to the accommodation ladder, and clambered on board again, and searching out the marine sentry asked him to eject the unwelcome intruder, who meanwhile was amusing himself by destroying everything within his reach. The marine, naturally enough, did not see the force of being offered up as a sacrifice, and declined to enter, but after some parley the two of them succeeded in shutting and bolting the cabin door, thus making the bear a prisoner. Another man was then sent for the animal's keeper, and Bruin was led away in disgrace, but the unfortunate lieutenant never heard the last of the episode.

In another vessel on the China station there lived an ordinary white goat. There was nothing this creature would not eat. Old newspapers, fag-ends of cigarettes, tins of polishing paste, bits of canvas, and the contents of paint pots, all disappeared down his hungry throat.

In yet another ship there was an ibex, a species of large, shaggy-coated goat with long, curved horns, and when the bluejackets landed for drill the animal would march at their head with two packages of "First-aid" dressings strapped on his back. He, too, lived to a ripe old age, and when at length he did expire, he was accorded a proper naval funeral.

Couldn't.

TOHN FOLKS WHO WOULD BE FAT

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive powers must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the best strength giving, fat-producing elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food and turns the starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists every where and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money refunded.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

BUDGET IS LESSON

It Shows Canadians What to Expect, Says J. G. Turriff

HOUSE TAKES A HOLIDAY

OTTAWA, April 9. — The House adjourned yesterday for a week after hearing speeches by J. G. Turriff, the Liberal member for Assiniboia and W. F. Cockshutt, the Conservative member for Brantford.

"A raw cold deal for the farmers and the common people, with everything for the interests," was Mr. Turriff's description of the budget. "The manufacturers get everything, the rest of Canadians get nothing and pay more. However, I am not going to blame the Premier or Minister of Finance. They were not elected under false colors. They are protectionists and servers of the corporations. But the people are getting a serious lesson as to what it means to elect men of that ilk to handle their public affairs."

"The refusal of the Finance Minister to do anything reasonable or fair for the farmers in the matter of agricultural implements synchronizes with the party flap-over of Senator Jones. If there was any man in Canada who had good reason to stand by the Liberal party it was this man. When some years ago the Liberal Government decided to make some reductions in the tariff he was granted a drawback, and last year the Massey-Harris Company, according to the Auditor-General's report, received some $165,000 in drawbacks. But because Liberalism believes that the time has come to grant free implements to the farmers, this man, who has had all the favors, turns upon them. He was made Senator and knighted by the kindly offices of the former Government. I don't know that the present leader of the Opposition put the hyphen in his name, but he did almost everything else for him.

Then the storm broke. Several Government members shouted sentences inaudible for the noise.

There was an avalanche of expressions. "Selfish, spoon-fed sniker," was the alliterative comment of one western Conservative.

Mr. Cockshutt followed in defence of the national policy. He said the farmer was never so well off as he is to-day. Mr. Turriff and other western Liberals were continually talking about the grievances of the grain growers, and demanding free wheat.

They seemed to forget that eighty per cent. of the farmers of the country lived in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and were a unit against removing the wheat and the flour duties.

The Liberal party, Mr. Cockshutt declared, in conclusion, in attacking almost every industry, was following a policy of destruction instead of a policy of construction. At this time, of all others, it was important to steady our business enterprises and encourage capital to invest. If the factories ran full time and the railways had plenty of traffic to carry, the farmer would benefit from a splendid home market, and better times and greater prosperity would soon return to Canada.

Premier Borden has gone to Atlantic City for the Easter recess and will not return until April 20. Hon. Martin Burrell and Chairman Drayton of the Railway Commission have gone there also. Col. Hughes has gone south and Hon. C. J. Doherty will go to Winnipeg in connection with the St. Peters' Indian Reserve case. It is understood that C. F. Fullerton, K.C., of Winnipeg, who was to have handled the case for the Government finds himself unable to act.

Hon. J. D. Hazen will go to St. John, Hon. J. D. Reid to Prescott, and the others will be in Ottawa most of the week. Hon. T. W. Crothers is still in bed. He has been dangerously ill of erysipelas, but is now recovering.

Nationalist Move "Big With Danger."

LONDON, April 9. — The development of the Nationalist volunteers in Ireland is beginning to attract the attention of Unionist journalists.

After a tour of Nationalist Ireland one capable observer declares that the movement is "big with danger." The force has been organized since December by Sir Roger Casement, the consul who exposed the horrors of the slave traffic at Putumayo, and John McNeill, a professor at the Irish National University, who have spread the net so well that cities, towns and hamlets in all parts of Ireland are within its mesh.

"IS ABSOLUTELY MARVELLOUS AS A PAIN KILLER."

Mrs. Beatrice Cassey, of Swalecliff, England, knows what it means to be bed-ridden with pain. She also knows now how easily the tortures of Rheumatism and Lumbago may be overcome. She says, "My experience with KEPHALDOL as a pain-killer is absolutely marvellous. I had a fearfully acute attack last year of Neuritis, Sciatica and Lumbago, and suffered in bed for many days. Finally, I heard of KEPHALDOL, which did wonders for me, I shall always feel most grateful for what it has done, and I am most happy to let others know of its wonderful effects as a pain destroyer."

KEPHALDOL is the only pain reliever that does not affect the heart. It acts directly on the nerve centres, easing and quieting the pain. KEPHALDOL is the favourite combination of nerve stimulants and tonics prescribed by the famous Doctor Stohr, of Vienna, the great nerve specialist.

KEPHALDOL is now sold in Canada by druggists in 50c. tubes or may be had by sending 50c. direct to Kephaldol Limited, 31 Lemoine Street, Montreal.

MYSTERY UNSOLVED.

Local Police Have No Clue To Murderer of Robt. Hayde.

MIDLAND, April 9.—A post-mortem examination on the body of Robert Hayde, the grocer at Tomahawk Point who was found murdered, was held here yesterday. He was killed by a charge from a shotgun, the charge entering at the base of the skull at the back of the head, and lodging on the inside of his left cheek. The inside of his head was riddled in a frightful manner, and the left jaw was broken. An inquest will be held at Port Severn to-day. When the body was found the pockets were turned inside out, and the money all gone, which is an indication that robbery was the motive for the crime. His watch had not been meddled with. No clue to the assassin has yet been discovered, but a provincial detective has been applied for to work on the case.

ANALYSES TREATY.

Senator Works Spends Hours Speaking Against Repeal.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — Formal consideration of the administration bill to repeal the tolls exemption provision of the Panama Canal Act will begin on the Senate side of the capitol to-day, with hearings before the Interoceanic Canals Committee, to continue for 15 days.

While the committee preparations were under way yesterday, preliminary debate on the tolls issue occupied the greater part of the session in the Senate, where Senator Works of California held the floor for hours concluding his analysis of the treaties involved, and his argument opposing the repeal.

Asserting that the United States had the right under the treaty to prescribe such tolls as it sees fit for its own vessels, Senator Works vigorously criticised the position taken by the President.

PROVINCE GETS CONTROL.

B. C. Wins Suit for Ownership of Coastal Properties.

VANCOUVER, April 9. — Judgment favoring the Province of British Columbia, was handed down yesterday morning in the case of the Attorney-General of Canada vs. the Attorney-General of British Columbia, over the right to control the Spanish banks, by Justice Macdonald, in the Supreme Court. The case was dismissed with costs against the Dominion Government. In his judgment Judge Macdonald rules that English Bay is not a public harbor and is, therefore, under control of the provincial and not the Dominion Government.

The matter is of great importance to local fishery and harbor affairs and means that the valuable deposits of Spanish bank will not go to the Silica Sand Co., to which the Federal Government gave a lease.

NOTHING FOR MANITOBA.

Rates Decision Is All for Good of Sister Provinces.

OTTAWA, April 9.—The decision of the Railway Commission in the western freight rates case has elicited less comment and discussion than might have been anticipated. There was no reference to it in the House yesterday, and members of Parliament outside of the House were quite reticent.

Generally speaking, the judgment extends the principal established in the Regina rate case, and places the shippers of Saskatchewan and Alberta upon an equality with the shippers of Manitoba and main advantage distributing points, like Regina, Moose Jaw, Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge, which heretofore have been discriminated against by the railways in favor of Winnipeg.

But if some relief is afforded Saskatchewan and Alberta, no advantage is gained by Manitoba, which, indirectly at least, is injuriously affected.

The supply of cattle was small and the trade was quiet, owing to the fact that buyers generally provided for their Easter wants at the first of the week. The tone of the market was steady, with sales of choice steers at $8.50; good, at $8 to $8.25, and the lower grades from $6 to $7.50, while cows brought from $4.75 to $7, and bulls from $5 to $7.50 per 100 lbs., as to quality. Owing to the more liberal supplies of milch cows coming forward a weaker feeling has prevailed in the market, and prices have declined $10 per head, with sales of choice milkers, at $80 to $90, and the lower grades from $50 to $70 each.

THE OAR WENT OFF.

Unwary Lad Badly Injured by Harmless-Looking Tin.

TORONTO, April 9. — Peter John Bolahood, aged 13, of 122 York street, kicked a tin can in his back yard yesterday afternoon, and since then Peter John and all his family have been wondering what was in that can. Following the kick there came a tremendous explosion, which knocked the lad on his back, tore the left side of his face open, and cut open his leg from the knee half way to his thigh. He was conveyed to the General Hospital, where it is stated he may lose the sight of one eye.

Although careful search was made for any part of the tin can, not a particle remained to tell the police what had been placed inside. It is thought it contained explosive of some kind, but how it got there is a mystery.

Says Prominent Winnipeg Newspaper Man. "Before I Used The Second Box, The Pain Had Left"

"Manitoba Free Press"
Winnipeg, Jan. 15th, 1913

"I think it only right that I should tell you about the benefits I received the last couple of weeks by using GIN PILLS. I was troubled for over three weeks with a pain in my back, and tried a number of remedies without any benefit. One of the reporters had also been troubled the same way and he said to me, "Why don't you use GIN PILLS? I used a box and a half and the pain left". He said "You take this other half of the box and get another box, and you will be all right". I am glad to inform you that before I used all of the second box, I felt myself all right again and the pain had left. I certainly think GIN PILLS are wonders".

George Cave—a rising figure among the Unionists. He complains that the solution to which some of them looked forward was nothing so large as Federalism, but a moderate scheme of devolution. It is also worth noting that ten amendments to the bill's second reading have been tabled, suggesting the Federal solution.

LESS DYSPEPSIA NOW —HERE'S THE REASON

The fact that there is less dyspepsia and indigestion in this community than there used to be is largely, we believe, due to the extensive use of Ramall Dyspepsia Tablets, hundreds of packages of which we have sold. No wonder we have faith in them. No wonder we are willing to offer them to you for trial entirely at our risk.

Among other things, they contain Pepsin and Bismuth, two of the greatest digestive aids known to medical science. They soothe the inflamed stomach, allay pain, check heartburn and distress, help to digest the food, and tend to quickly restore the stomach to its natural, comfortable, healthy state.

There is no red tape about our guarantee. It means just what it says. We'll ask you no questions. Your word is enough for us. If Ramall Dyspepsia Tablets don't restore your stomach to health and make your digestion easy and comfortable, we want you to come back for your money. They are sold only at the 7,000 Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. Three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

EIGHTEEN YEAR TERM.

NEW YORK, April 9. — Eighteen years in Sing Sing was the heavy sentence imposed today on Edward Mendell, a prominent business man of New York, on conviction of robbing women acquaintances. The evidence disclosed the fact that for years, while living in Newark, as a successful business man, prominent church goer and all round good fellow, he had made frequent visits to New York, where he was guilty of several robberies with assault, and led much worse than a double life so far as domestic affairs were concerned.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

TORONTO, April 9—In an interview to-day, here, Norman Angell, author of "The Great Illusion," and apostle of peace, says, in his opinion President Wilson will find that he will have to call a Council of Nations to settle the affairs in Mexico, probably on the basis of withdrawing all financial support from that trembled republic.

JUDGMENT GIVEN FOR THE PLAINTIFF

Mrs. Mary Pierre is Awarded $166 as Result of an Action Against E. Sarazer

EVIDENCE CONFLICTING

His Honour Judge Huycke this morning delivred judgment in favour of Mrs. Mary Pierre, who on March 26th in County Court, brought an action to recoveg the sum of $304.25 from on E. Sarazen. The action arose out of a transaction that was consummated in September last, when Mrs. Pierre, it is stated, disposed of her grocery and restaurant business, and incidentally allowed the defendant to secure possession of the fixtures.

In giving his decision this morning, His Honour said:

"I do not suppose there is anything for me to do but to give judgment for the plaintiff, on the evidence I have before me. I should have been glad if the parties had arranged between themselves. I think that if the goods were in the same condition as they were when they left plaintiff's possession, she should have taken them back. This she declines to do, on account, as she says, of the condition they are in. That may not be true, but I will not say anything about that. I found that alleged agreement was proposd, and executed on Sunday, September 28, 1913, and it is therefore void on that account.

"The only thing left for me to dispose of therefore, would be the valuation of the amount of damages. At the trial defendant said, in fact admitted that he was really a trustee of these goods, in direct opposition to the position he had taken before. He, as a trustee, was hound to take reasonable care of these goods. The only difficulty I find is in finding the amount of the value of the goods. The evidence as to that, given on both sides, differs very widely. I think plaintiff's idea as to the value of the goods, was somewhat exaggerated. In this valuation, she is corroborated by some of her own household. I do not accept that statement. The only independant evidence, is that of Mr. Kidd, which I would certainly accept, only for the fact that the examination he made was but a crude one, being chiefly for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the goods were there, and not as to valuation. On the other hand, the value given by the defendant is too low, and so that it is somewhere between the two prices that the damages will have to be determined.

"I find the evidence for the defence is very unsatisfactoryfi for this reason. It is taken from the second-hand dealer's standpoint, which I consider is not a suitable one in this case. The greater part of these goods, I find, he converted to his own use. I do not think that any second-hand dealer's valuation should be put on such goods as these. There is no evidence whatever that the goods are in the same condition that they were seven months ago.

"The plaintiff has filed an exaggerated statement, and the defendant a minimized statement as to the value of the goods, and it is between the two that damages will have to be fixed.

"I place the value of these goods, at $166, and enter judgment for that amount."

CONTRACT IS AWARDED FOR CEMENT SUPPLY

Board of Works Opened Tenders Last Night and Gave Contract to Morgan Hardware Company

OTHER BUSINESS DONE

At the Board of Works meeting, held last night, contracts for the supply of cement and sewer pipes for the coming year were awerded. The Peterborough Hardware Company were awarded the contract for the cement at $1.43 a barrel of 350 pounds. The nearest tender was that of the Kingan Hardware Co., at $1.44 a barrel. H. B. Taylor and Sons' tender was $1.45 a barrel, and the Morgan Hardware Co's., $1.49. The Peterborough Hardware Co. offered storage at 2c a barrel which was a lower figure than offered by any of the competitors. Including storage, their tender was 2c a barrel lower than that of the lowest of the others.

H. B. Taylor and Son's tender for sewer pipes was the successful one. They offered to supply the pipes at 60 per cent. discount off the list price. The Toronto Pottery Co. were the only other bidders their offer being to sell the pipes at 65 and 66 per cent. off the list. Taylor and Son's tender was lower by four and five per cent. and they were awarded the contract.

The prices paid for the pipes are sightly in advance of those of last year, but the cement for this season is being purchased at a considerably lower figure than last year.

Post No Bills

Mayor Buller brought up the question as to whether the nailing of bills on the poles along the streets should be allowed to go on or be prohibited. He said that as the poles in the centre of the City were in the sidewalk the nails and tacks sticking out from them were dangerous. The advertisements themselves were unsightly and, in his opinion, all should be prohibited from tacking advertisements on the poles.

Ald. Duncan who said he had the sleeve of his overcoat torn on a nail projecting from a pole on George Street, supported the idea, and it was decided to write the Bel Telephone Co. and the Peterborough Light and Power Co., asking them to keep their poles free of advertisements.

A resident of Smith Street complained to the Board that the proprietor of a coal and wood yard at the corner of George and Smith Streets, was piling the wood out on the street. They objected to having the lumber pile constitute their "landscape' from the front windows and asked that the dealer be made to keep the lumber on his own premises.

On the motion of Messrs. Saunders and Green the Board agreed to ask the dealer to take the wood off the street.

A resident of Park Street, between Hunter and Simcoe Streets, asked to have a crossing put in, in that neighbourhood. On the recommendation of City Engineer Parsons, the crossing will be built.

A letter was received from Mr. Edgar, who resides just above Smith Street, saying that the water was running into his cellar from the street. The garbage collectors will be ordered to fill the hollows in the street with ashes.

Dangers and Cupid in "QUEEN ZEPORA"

The First Good Friday

And when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered Him to be crucified. Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto Him the whole band of soldiers. And they stripped Him, and put on Him a scarlet robe. And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon His head, and a reed in His right hand: and they bowed the knee before Him, and mocked Him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews! And they spit upon Him, and took the reed, and smote Him on the head. And after that they had mocked Him, they took the robe off from Him, and put His own raiment on Him, and led Him away to crucify Him. And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: Him they compelled to bear His cross. And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, they gave Him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when He had tasted thereof, He would not drink. And they crucified Him, and parted His garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, They parted My garments among them, and upon My vesture did they cast lots. And sitting down they watched Him there; and set up over His head His accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

All Protestant Churches Unite To-morrow

To-morrow being Good Friday a service of unusual interest will be held in our city. The Ministerial Association have arranged for a union service of one hour to be held at three o'clock in Murray Street Baptist Church.

Two brief addresses on "The Crucifixion of Christ" will b delivered and the congregation will be led in the singing by a large choir in which every member of the city choirs is asked to assist. The speakers will be Rev. R. G. Peever and Rev. H. J. Keith. The service will be conducted by Rev. F. J. Sawers, the president of the Ministerial Association, assisted by other city ministers.

Surely nothing could be more fitting than that this one hour from three to four o'clock should be set apart by all the Christian people of our city for such a solemn service on the day of Calvary's tragedy and the world's redemption. It is expected that the church will be occupied in every part.

All members of choirs are asked to enter by the Sunday School door.

Signal Bell Will Be Installed At Keene Crossing

Will Eliminate the Danger Which Has Resulted in Several Serious Accidents Lately

Mr. Tellet, of Montreal, Signal Engineer for the Grand Trunk Railway, was in the City yesterday and inspected the local signal equipment. Everything was found to be in perfect running order. Engineer Tellet inspected the signals in connection with the station, the diamond and the bridges.

As a result of Engineer Tellet's visit to this section of the Grand Trunk lines a modern signal bell will be installed at the Keene crossing. There have been several accidents at this crossing owing to the lack of proper precautionary devices and the large amount of traffic at that point. The signal bell is of the most up-to-date type available. A loud gong at the crossing will ring when the train comes within a certain distance of the crossing until it has passed it. Besides the bell a large sign, "DANGER" will flash out in red letters at night as the train nears the crossing. This device, it is thought, will afford ample protection for all who use the Keene crossing.

TWO DISTINCT TAX RATES

One For Public School Supporters and The Other For Separate School Supporters

This year's tax rate of twenty-six mills is levied on the assessment for 1914 and not 1913, as many suppose. The rate is based on the 1914 assessment, prepared in 1913.

Two Tax Rates.

There are two distinct tax rates—one from Separate School supporters, and the other for Public School supporters. The rate for the atter is 26 mills and for Separate School supporters it is two-tenths less or 25.80 mills. Separate School supporters are exempt from Public School rates, also the Protestant Home, hence the difference in the tax rate.

WHO'S YOUR FUNSMITH?

TWO WORKMEN ARE CRUSHED TO DEATH

CLEARING AWAY FIRE DEBRIS

TORONTO, April 9. — Two are dead, one is dying, and three workmen were seriously injured yesterday afternoon by the collapse of part of the west wall of the Independent Cloak Co.'s building on Richmond street west, near Bathurst street. The building had been gutted by fire in February and those killed and injured in the collapse of the wall were engaged in cleaning away the ruins before starting to tear down the walls.

The dead are:

The injured are: Benny Finkler, address not known; now at Western Hospital in a critical condition with terrible head and internal injuries; Antony Visconsky, at the Western Hospital, fractured left arm; Mike Kernitsky, at the Western Hospital, scalp wounds; Benjamin Blatarochky, at the Western Hospital, fracture of the knee cap and scalp lacerations; Max Najmal, at the Western Hospital, bone of the face fractured and other injuries about the body.

Part of the wall fell across a lane on the roofs of two adjoining houses, caving in the roof of 539 Richmond street west and filling the bath room with tons of debris. In a room at the rear of the house an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sniderman was sleeping on a couch and narrowly escaped injury from falling plaster. Mr. and Mrs. Sniderman were working in a room at the front of the house, but were not injured. Bricks from the falling wall flew through windows on the ground floor of the house.

The cause of the catastrophe is not known, although acting City Architect Price and his employes, who were on the scene shortly after the accident, are of the opinion that it was caused by careless workmen. The Saturday following the fire Mr. Price and his men spent many hours in the ruins. They placed timbers and guy ropes on the building to prevent such an accident as this. Mr. Price thinks that some of the workmen, none of whom were skilled laborers, must have pulled a joist from the ruins, causing the wall to cave in on them. His opinion is shared by members of the fire department.

On Tuesday eighteen men were employed in the building, and yesterday several more were taken on. They were all foreigners working on the third floor of the building save two who were on the east wall. But for a warning hoisted by Mr. J. A. Lendfeville, 618 Richmond street west, the toll of death might have been greater. He was standing in front of his house when he saw the wall swaying gently. He realized the serious position of those in the building and shouted to them. The workmen heard him and endeavored to escape. Many of them reached safety, but seven of the men were caught by the falling wall and carried into the basement when the charred flooring on which they stood was unable to stand the weight of the falling debris.

N. DULOFF,

The Bulgarian youth, who disappeared on December 6th last, and whose badly decomposed remains were subsequently taken from a pond at the rear of the C.P.R. sheds at Havelock. An investigation is being held. The medical evidence went to show that the deceased came to his death as the result of a blow behind the left ear from an instrument of some kind, which cut the scalp and fractured the skull, and that the body was placed in the water after death. Provincial Detective Boyd is working on the case.

PLAN OF SEATS OPENS

To-morrow morning at nine o'clock the seat sale for "Queen Zephra" opens at Grand Opera House. It would be advisable to secure seats at your earliest convenience as the sale promises to be a heavy one.

One hundred and sixty of Peterborough's best talent are perfectly trained ready to enact the pretty story of the piece.

The first act will represent "Zephra's" palace, with its balconies, etc., etc., a setting in every way suitable to a palace. Three scenes.

The second act represents the Golden Grotto of Ferns—four scenes—in which all the dances take place in honour of the "Queen" on her annual fete day.

Act 3 will be an excellent reproduction of the Ice Caves of Norseland and tribunal of the "Queen," where the treachery of King Decius is exposed and an insurrection nipped in the bud. Three scenes.

Act 4—The Grand Transformation scene, represents the home of the Fairy Queen. This setting is conceeded to be one of the most beautiful wherever it is seen. Scene after scene changing in front of your eyes until you wonder how much more is coming.

Altogether Queen Zephra will be the best offering of the theatrical season.

The dates—Next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 14, 15, 16. Matinee Friday, April 17th.

THURSDAY, APRIL 9, 1914

IT IS REVOLUTIONARY.

The Toronto News says there is "nothing revolutionary" about Mr. White's tariff proposals. Wrong as usual. It is all revolutionary; it revolves exclusively about the "big interests," the pivotal point; with the public interests centrifugally forced into peripheral nebulosity, invisible to unassisted sight.

ANOTHER DELAY DEVICE.

The devices of the Whitney Government to block the progress of temperance reform are not a few. When Mr. Rowell introduced his abolish-the-bar policy, it was side-tracked by a promise of the Whitney Government to introduce or pass a better law, according to their argument, in the interest of temperance—an anti-treating law. That this was but a subterfuge—a scheme to delay the evil day for the interests, protected by the Government, is shown by the fact that no such legislation has been introduced nor even spoken of. Now another device has been engineered by the party managers. The Toronto News prints a "portrait" of a monster anti-license petition, "bearing over 9,000 names and 200 yards long," asking the Ontario Government to pass an act abolishing "all liquor shop, bar and club licenses." This petition is signed by "Conservative members" of the Ontario Young Manhood Association. It is plainly another device to stay the progress of temperance reform. Mr. Foy, acting-Premier, told the deputation presenting the petition, that it would "be folly to proceed faster than the people desired." Of course the Government can claim that it is sincere in its opposition to temperance reform, when it turns down a petition of 9,000 "young Conservatives." This is a very pretty expedient for complicatitng the question and inducing delay. If the 9,000 "Young Conservatives" were anxious for temperance progress as they profess, they would have endorsed Mr. Rowell's policy, which is identical with theirs; would have refrained from injecting a new point of dispute, or new excuse for delay.

A MUNICIPAL PROBE WANTED.

Hon. J. W. Hanna, acting leader in the Provincial Legislature, has "turned down" the proposal for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report upon the system of municipal government in Ontario. There are commissions and commissions, and everything depends upon the character of a commission, but there is no doubt that a properly qualified commission would be able to do an immense deal of good in investigating the conditions of municipal government. There is no other field of usefulness so inviting for commission as this.

It will not be denied that our system of municipal government, however beautiful and beneficient it may be in theory, is, in practice, in application, full of defects—from comparative inefficiency to absolute failure. Sometimes observant citizens, who take an intelligent interest in affairs, feel forced upon them the idea that representative institutions are a failure. This comes from the condition of absolute inefficiency, seen from time to time in the management or mismanagement of municipal affairs. This is not confined to any municipality, but seems to be almost universally prevalent. No one municipality or no one council of any particular year can be selected as an example. The undesirable conditions have been going on for years.

For instance, in Peterborough this year we have a 26 mill rate of taxation, and it should be even higher if the people are to get the conveniences and civic equipment that should be enjoyed by a progressive city. The point is what have we to show for all this? What is the explanation of it all? No one can say that the condition of our streets shows an expenditure—that is an effective expenditure—that would even partially explain the advance in the taxation rate. Not so many years ago Peterborough had a taxation rate ranging as low as 10, to 15 and 16 mills on the dollar. What has the town of Brockville to show for a 30 mill rate? Why should Peterborough and Brockville have respectively a taxation of 26 and 30 mills? Why should Kingston have a 25 mills rate, Brantford 24, and Galt 26, while Toronto escapes with a 19 mill rate? It would be interesting to have information upon this point. It would be interesting to know what are the workings of municipal management that have contributed to their conditions. The only answer that can be given, the only explanation that could be arrived at, would come from an exhaustive investigation by a commission, clothed with full power and given full opportunity to dig to the bottom of things and show the underlying causes. These taxation conditions must come from something besides all those municipalities having had proportional benefits, in municipal service, representing the expenditure or waste that makes such big tax levies necessary. They have not, apparently, had the service, but they have the taxes.

One thing is certain, progressive municipalities must have civic conveniences and service to correspond with their advance, even if the taxation is high. What we want to know is, whether in the general management of municipal affairs these conveniences and services could have been possible without such great increase of rate. A commission of investigation might, and it is believed would, give an explanation and might and would, it is believed, show where the weakness lies, and suggest a remedy for the general ineffective application of our municipal system which has resulted in taxation rates such as those mentioned. There is no denying that our system throughout the whole province is defective, lacking in good business. There is no denying that, if any business enterprise or concern, industrial or commercial, were administered on the same principle as that of the average Ontario municipality, it would go to the wall in a few months. We want to find out what is the matter. There must be some reason inherent in the system or its application that brings about undesirable and, virtually disastrous, results to every municipality in the province. Almost invariably aldermen, councillors and other municipal representatives are honest, and give the best that is in them to the service of the municipality. They are not knowingly to blame; and the conclusion suggests itself that there is something inherently wrong in the system, or its mode of application. A thorough-going commission would find out, and if it discovered a remedy, no matter what its investigation might cost, it would be a thousand times worth it. Hence it seems that Mr. Hanna was not wise in refusing to have the searchlight turned on. There is no excuse for delay, for every year things are going from bad to worse.

THE STRENUOUS LIFE.

Some men are so busy that they cannot take time to eat. The Catholic Register says these men who live at high pressure save up a lot of time which they afterwards spend in the cemeteries.—Toronto Star.

NO RETRENCHMENT.

In his budget speech, Mr. White admitted that there was a proportionate decrease in Canada's trade, indicated by a drop of about six millions in the revenue. He acknowledged, in fact, if not in words, that the gross debt of the Dominion was greater than ever. As to annual expenditure, he did not, of course, say that it was nearly double what it had been under the Liberal Government, but he did admit that it had increased about fourteen and a half millions last year. And he further admitted that this increase was due to "liberal appropriations" for public works, and for the militia. Yet, with it all, he gave no indication that there was to be any retrenchment. It is true, he said, that the estimates should be kept within as reasonable bounds as possible, but that is a vague statement, which he might make, irrespective of what these estimates should be. He could always say they were "as reasonable as possible."

There was a report current some time ago that Mr. White was anxious to curb his extravagant associates. But if he made any protests against extravagance in sessions of the Council there were no echoes of these protests in the budget speech. He claimed no credit for having arrested the volume of expenditure, nor did he attempt to pose as an economist. Instead of showing any signs that his colleagues were to be checked, he encouraged them to go on and spend by assuring them that the "worst was over" so far as hard times were concerned, and that the after part of the year would make up for any falling off in revenue in the beginning. Mr. Rogers can go on erecting buildings in villages where they will do the Government the most good. Col. Hughes can go on building armouries and increasing his military expenditures. There will be lots of money; "dash away, and spend it." And in the meantime, the cost of living steadily advances. — London Advertiser.

A GRAND RECORD OF LIBERAL ACTION IN LABOUR INTERESTS

Whenever you find a Liberal Government in office you also find a splendid performance in the interests of Labour. This is true with regard to the measures passed by the Laurier Government, to the legislation of the Asquith Government, and to the proposals which are now being made by Mr. Rowell and his associates. On the other hand, with Conservatives in power, there is usually absolute sterility in the matter of labour legislation, and such measures of this nature as are produced are almost invariably due to the initiative and demands of the Liberal party.

The Toronto Star publishes a summary of the social reform measures of the Campbell-Bannerman and Asquith governments mostly affecting labour, and it is doubtful if any government of modern times has been able to achieve so much:

1906—Workmen's Compensation Act: Provides compensation for accidents for the first time for six million workers (including workers in workshops and in transport service, seamen, postmen, clerks, shop assistants, and domestic servants), and also makes compensation payable for injuries to health in certain dangerous trades.

Merchant Shipping Act: Applies to foreign ships using British ports the regulations applicable to British ships; amends the existing laws relating to passenger and emigrant ships and to deck loads; fixes a good provision scale for sailors; and provides for certificated cooks, for increased minimum space per man, and for shipowners being responsible for expenses when a seaman is ill.

1907—Small Holdings and Allotment Act: Gives complete powers to local authorities to obtain land for small holdings and allotments in England and Wales (including power to take it compulsorily), and provides a cheap and easy process of acquiring such land. By the end of its first five years of operation the act had resulted in the provision of no less than 155,000 acres for over 15,000 applicants.

Eight Hours Act for miners.

1909—Labour Exchanges Act: Helps to lessen unemployment by bringing employers and workmen together. Nearly 70,000 places are filled every month.

Trade Boards Act: Against sweating evil.

1909-1910 — The great Lloyd George Budget: By taxation levied on surplus wealth provides money for social reform. Rejected by the House of Lords, approved by the people in a general election, and became the law of the land.

Workingmen, whether in Great Britain or in Canada, are indebted to the various extensions of the franchise secured for them by the Liberal party for the political power which they possess, as well as for labour legislation. And yet, they are very frequently found in alliance with the party to which they owe so little, in opposition to their natural allies, often because the latter have not been able to grant the very extremity of their demands.—Brantford Expositor.

LATEST FASHIONS FOR MEN SHOW VARIATION

Peg Top Trousers Regarded as a Horror Beside the This Model-A Resume of New Tendencies

SOMETHING FOR EVERY MAN

Last night the slender girl we met,
This year the man's the silhouette.

In direct contract to the widening looseness of women's costumes for the spring is the tightness of the clothes for men. The while milady will this Easter don loose blouses and skirts draped out to fulness over the hips, mere man will have every line of his "figger" clearly defined.

The new suits for men this spring are all of them cut fairly narrow on the shoulder, with a well-defined waist line, while the trousers are straight and narrow cut. The fat man, is in fact, as out of style as the fat woman was last season, and the slender lad is to have his innings so far as the suit are concerned.

Light grey, rough worsted materials and hair line serges are all popular while the waistcoats remain cut fairly high and coats are single breasted.

The frock coat, while it has not entirely gone out of style, is relegated mostly to older men, while the cutaway and striped trousers with a top hat are most in favour for afternoon affairs. These new cutaway coats are edged with braid, and when combined with a grey waistcoat, grey spats and gloves, striped trousers and a grey or black tie, make a very smart costume for any man.

Rough soft hats of plaids and checked materials of all kinds are shown for country wear, while for town the plain soft brown or grey hat with a band to match is mostly favoured by conservative men.

The new evening clothes are much like those of last year except that they fit more snugly. The coats are edged, many of them with silk braid, while many boast velvet collars and cuffs and jet buttons. The use of the black vest with the dress suit is becoming more and more popular while the tuxedo, so much in favour with the younger men, is now recognized as being permissible at dinner dances, and the threate as well as stage affairs.

With the tuxedo, a turn-down collar and soft-bosomed dress skirt are worn, and a black bow tie, the white tie (which now comes usually in plaited silk) being good form only for full dress.

As for the overcoats for the spring, the light weight ones and storm coats alike are built like huge capes, the raglan sleeve and the width at the bottom of the coat tending to make them standout in a bell-shaped effect that is much in favour this season.

A man's suit and overcoat usually represent what his tailor thinks he ought to wear, but his shirts and ties express his own individuality and this year so wide is the variety in both that any kind of man is sure to find the particular scarf and shirt that strikes his fancy.

Of course, the vogue of the dance has struck men's fashions as well as women's, and has brought into high favour the dress skirt with a bosom of soft plaited silk.

With these soft silk shirts, tiny buttons, studs or pearl studs are worn, while the dress tie must also be of plaited silk, the white lawn ties being out of keeping with this type of dress shirt.

The well-dressed man, however, will confine himself to simple patterns and pale colours, while plain neckties of crepe de Chine in rich colourings are first in favour among fashionable men here and in London.

The figured scarf is, in truth, very little worn nowadays, for the younger men the gaudy striped ties are still in favour of the white-knitted silk four-in-hands, but the newest and smartest of the season's neckwear are the plain coloured rich silk ties, soft enough to make a very small knot close up under the collar.

These collars, by the way, are fitting very close about the throat and are higher than those of last season, though many varieties of shape and height are to be noted, fashions not having set any definite style for this part of man's attire.

The soft collars that are so comfortable to wear with the negligee shirt are not much in favour this spring, and while, undoubtedly the warm weather will bring them to the fore again, they are not correct for any place except the country, or an out-of-door sporting event.

Stiff turn-over collars are the most in vogue and are more popular with the well-dressed men than the stand-up collar, although the latter is correct for wear with the cutaway coat and top hat for formal occasions.

It is rumoured that silk dress shirts with turn down wide collars also of silk will be introduced for dancing, but so far these have been noted in this country, and they are not likely to become popular despite the comfort they suggest for the tangoist.

The vogue of wearing coloured socks, tie and handkerchief to match has gone out of style, and nowadays man sticks simply to socks, the colour of their shoes and handkerchiefs whose only note of colour is in the monogram in the corner.

For men this year there are smart patent leather pumps with elastic inside the top to hold them on snugly, while rubber soles and heels promise security from falls in the most intricate measures of the tango.

Low shoes of tan will also be much in favour, while patent leather low shoes and grey spats are considered in dernier cri in Paris. These spats should, however, be fitted the same as one would have a shoe fitted, and must cling snugly to the ankle or they lose their smartness.

For both men and women, the hosiery this year is very sheer and lovely Fewer colours are noted, but the black and white and brown of the silk is embellished with airy embroidery designs and for the women by insets of lace.

The new stockings are cut very snug about the leg, and have a semi-elastic finish at the top to hold them up without the array of garters which milady's former corsets supplied, but which in the new corsets are entirely lacking.

A SPLENDID SYSTEM

The Canadian Pacific is able to show a remarkable record in the matter of the integrity of its vast telegraph system during the wind storms which have prevailed more or less constantly for the past month. The telegraph system embraces some 100,000 miles all over the country. It may be said to have had its commencement before even the railway system itself. The original thought, in regard to the building of the mountain section of the company was that it would use the Yellowhead Pass, which was the recommendation of Sir Sandford Fleming. That route, however, was not used, but another. However, the telegraph has actually preceded the track laying along what was supposed to be the first named route, and has been maintained ever since, as have other stretches used in the inception of the system, like the advance posts of an army.

Only in one instance during the wind storms has there been interruption of the vast system, and that was between Halifax and Truro. This immunity is due, undoubtedly, to the efficiency of maintenance which marks the telegraph as it marks every other department of the system. The telegraph department is kept in the highest possible state of efficiency the year round. News wires are not spared, when these are needed, but the chief consideration is to have the service ready for use at all points, and at all seasons. It requires a large staff of men and the outlay of large sums of money to accomplish this efficiency, but the record is worth a good deal to the company.

The Canadian Pacific was on the ground with its telegraph system when the prairie was a wilderness, and it took two weeks for letters to pass from one part of the country to another. The system began when there seemed little hope of paying business along districts of country where the foot of a white man had never trodden. There was immense endurance, hardship and courage needed and practised to undertake and carry on this work in advance of civilization, as it might be said. The men employed in the early days had to sleep out in the open, live upon what they could get, live and work in absolute solitude. They penetrated forests, forded the rivers, carried their lines over inlakes, and, in a word, enacted their parts bravely and heroically under the most trying circumstances—aloof from human contact for months, in the depths of the forest primeval, on the wastes of the prairies—the avant couriers of civilization.

They commenced and others pertected—the best telegraph system in the world; best for the integrity that marks it. In the report recently handed in at headquarters the remark, which is at once modest and truthful, is made that no other system has shown, during the prevalence of the recent storms, anything like the security and uninterruption disclosed by this company's telegraph system.

HEMLOCK MAY BE SCARCE.

Lumbermen Report Low Water in Streams and Rivers.

TORONTO, April 9—The next article of commerce which may feel an increased prieis hemlok lumber for, acordingto the hemlock lumbermen who met in the Queen's Hotel last night, there is a serious outlook to the logging of this brand of wood duringthe coming season.

Low water in the streams and rivers is given as the cause and the logs have become tied up, as it is impossible to float them and unless conditions improve in the near future the tie-up will make hemlock very scarce and a general increase in the price may be expected. Even if the logs are brought down stream and at there is no prospect for a price reduction against those now quoted, as hemlock is reported to be in great demand with the dealers.

EVERY TOWN AND VILLAGE IN CANADA

Has Someone Cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mr. E. Handke Tells How They Sent Him Back to Work and Saved Him much Money.

Vanbrugh, Ont., April 8.—(Special.)—One more man has proved to his entire satisfaction that the one sure cure for sore back is Dodd's Kidney Pills. That man is Mr. E. Handke, a well-known resident of this place, and he is telling his friends that Dodd's Kidney Pills saved him much lost time, and suffering as well.

"I was laid up with sore back," Mr. Handke says. "At times I was not able to get up in the morning. But by the time I had taken one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills I found that the pain was getting less, and by the time I had taken six boxes I was all right and able to go to work again.

"I want to say to any man who suffers from sore back that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy I would recommend. They saved me a large doctor's bill and much lost time."

Sore back is one of the symtoms of Kidney Disease. The natural way to cure it is to cure the sick Kidneys. Dodds Kidney Pills cure sick Kidneys. If you haven't tried them yourself, ask your neighbours. Every neighbourhood in Canada has some man or woman who has been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

To permit a person to drink from an ordinary faucet easily a semi-circular trough to be fastened into position when wanted has been invented.

Hot Cross Buns

"Good Friday comes this month; the old woman runs
With 'one a penny, two a penny, hot cross buns,
Whose virtue is, if you believe what's said,
They'll not get mouldy, like common bread."
—From Poor Robin's Almanic, 1733.

Thousands of hot cross buns are eaten every spring on Good Friday by persons who attach no meaning to the custom but only know the hot, sweet currant and raisin filled buns are very good indeed. Originally these buns were made by Egyptian, Greek and Roman priests in honour of the spring equinox, when the worship of the moon and iDana, the goddess of the moon and Diana, the goddess of the were made round to represent the full moon and the square cross was marked upon them to show the four quarters or seasons of the year.

The custom of eating these buns was so general that the early Christians indulged in it as well as the pagans. It is said that St. Paul, unable to stop it had he so desired, said: "Let the round roll represent the earth, and the cross the four corners of it into which the Gospel should be carried."

There are many legends about hot cross buns and it would seem true that at one time they were made from the dough kneaded to make bread for the Sacrament and sold only by the monks. Now every family make their own to suit their particular taste; the only qualification really necessary is that they have a distinguishing mark across the top.

On Thursday night, set a sponge made of three cups of milk, a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in a little tepid water, and flour enough to make a batter. In the morning add half a cup of melted butter, one cup of sugar, half a teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon of salt and flour to knead. Let this rise until light, then pat out half an inch thick and cut in rounds with a biscuit cutter, lay the buns in rows in a buttered pan, and let rise again, make a deep incision on each one and brush it over with butter. Bake about twenty minutes and if liked sweeter dip in egg frosting when done. The London hot cross bun is unsweetened, but contains raisins.

Italians say that if each member of the family eat one hot cross bun on Good Friday the home and its inmates will be preserved from fire and accidents all through the year. The German frau hangs up one of the buns over the kitchen range to give her luck in cooking, and in France it is thought that crumbs from these rolls must be sprinkled on the door steps for the birds on Easter morning to ensure good luck to the household.

There is an old rhyme which used to be sung by the itinerant vendors of these articles on Good Friday morning in the Old Country which runs thus:

Hot cross buns,
Hot cross buns;
One a penny,
Two a penny,
Hot cross buns.

If you have no daughters,
Buy them for your sons;
One a penny,
Two a penny,
Hot cross buns.

SEEKS TO REGAIN HER LOST BABY

Special to The Examiner:

CHICAGO, Ill., April 9.—Mother love, stronger than fear of the worlds scorn, prompted Miss Vida Hagen to file a petition for a writ of habaes corpus in the United States District Court, in an effort to regain possession of her child, taken from her three years ago. Federal Judge Landis listened to arguments on the petition to-day. According to the petition the baby was born in a local hospital in May, 1911. The mother alleges that a few hours after the baby was born it was taken from her and given, without her consent, to one of the attending physicians. The petition further alleges that the physician gave the baby to another physician and that the latter gave the infant to a couple named Thompson. The Thompsons are said to live in Montana, but the mother's search

LOCAL TRAPPERS GETTING READY

Local trappers are getting busy making the preparation for the usual spring catch of rats and minks. The season for muskrats lasts from the first day of December to the first day of May, and for mink from the first day of November to the first day of May.

Section 3 of the act states definitely that "No muskrat shall be shot during the month of April or speared at any time, nor shall any muskrat house be cut, speared, broken or destroyed at any time."

To obviate the danger to the lungs from inhaling dust a new rock drill is so constructed that it catches all the dust in a bag.

WEDS ACTRESS THREE HOURS AFTER DIVORCE

LONDON, April 7—Within three hours after his American wife, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill, had been granted an absolute decree of divorce, George Cornwall-West to-day married Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the famous actress.

The marriage of Mrs. Campbell and Corwallis-West came as a complete surprise to friends of both parties as it had been expected that the second bride of the divorced man would be a prominent society leader of London.

Mr. Cornwallis-West, then a lieutenant in the British Army, was married to Lady Randolph Churchill in 1900. The match created unusual interest in society because the groom was about twenty years younger than his bride.

When Mrs. Cornwallis-West brought divorce proceedings she alleged infidelity but the name of the co-respondent was not divulged.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell has been known to English and American theatregoers for many years. She was first married to Patrick Campbell in 1884 and six years after her husband was killed in South Africa. Mrs. Campbell played a vaudeville engagement in the United States three years ago.

Mr. Cornwallis-West and Mrs. Campbell were married at the registry office and immediately left on an automobile tour. They said they would spend their honey-moon motoring.

LT.-GOVERNOR IS ON TRIAL

Examiner Special:

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 9—The case of Lieut. Governor Theodore G. Bilbo, who arrest and indictment, some time ago, on a charge of receiving and soliciting bribes in connection with pending legislation, created a profound sensation in Mississippi, came up in court here today for trial. The trial will be followed with keen interest because of the important bearing the outcome will have on the political situation in this State.

The arrest of Lieut. Governor Bilbo in the early part of last December, came as a climax to a series of events that had stirred Mississippi for months. More than four years ago the Legislature undertok to investigate charges of bribery. Bilbo, then a State representative, sprang into the limelight by confessing that he received an alleged bribe of $640. He was exonerated of the charges on the strength of his statement that he had accepted the money to entrap the supposed bribers.

During the 1912 session of the Legislature an attempt was made to create a new County in the "delta." According to charges and counter-charges published from time to time, in Mississippi newspapers, efforts out of the ordinary course were made to bring about the passage of the bill. Detectives were employed to investigate the charges and telephonic devices it is known were freely used. As a result of the investigation, Lieut. Gov. Bilbo was indicted on a charge of receiving $200 and agreeing to receive $2,000 more to use his influence to secure the passage of the bil creating the new County, G. W. Hobbs, a prominent member of the State Senate, was indicted jointly with Lieut. Gov. Bilbo. Hobbs has already been tried and acquitted.

Both Bilbo and Hobbs declare that the charges against them were inspired by politics. After Bilbo was exonerated, in 1910, he aligned himself with what is known as the Vardaman faction, headed by Earl Brewer, the present Governor. Moreover, Bilbo is an avowed candidate for the governorship at the next election.

HIS INJURIES FATAL.

Chas. W. Roberts Fell From Bridge, Unconscious on Ice All Night.

BELLEVILLE, April 9.—After lingering for weeks, Charles Wilfrid Roberts, who fell from a bridge in Trenton last month and lay unconscious on the ice all night, and suffered from frost-bites and exposure, passed away in Belleville Hospital. Everything possible was done to alleviate his sufferings, but without avail. He was a farmer by occupation, nearly 37 years of age, and was born in Murray township.

Relatives are expected from Trenton to take charge of the remains.

WAS COLD IN SPRING OF 1907

Seven Inches of Snow Fell on The 4th of May Last Year

Mr. J. Throop, who kept a record of the weather that spring, informed the Examiner today that there were hard frosts all through April in 1907. On the fourth of May snow fell to the depth of 4 1-2 inches before 7 a.m., and 7 inches before 9 :30 a.m. Very little sowing was done up to that time. The morning of the 12th of May there was ice half an inch thick. Heavy snow fell on the 27th of May and there was a hard frost on the night of May 28th.

Portable motors and aerial propellers have been placed on the market for bicycles, canoes and ice craft.

REPRIEVE FOR THE GUNMEN

Singer Talks

Have you ever wondered why it is that dealers in other makes of sewing machines talk price to emphasize their claim that their particular machine is "just as good as" the Singer.

Or why it is that more than 2,000,000 women buy Singers every year—more than all other makes combined?

Or why Singer sales have spread all over the world, in every civilized country?

The Singer has so long represented the highest degree of excellence that it is to-day everywhere recognized as the standard of perfection.

It is easy to own a Singer. Ask in any Singer store—they're everywhere.

Mad Dog! Mad Dog! Bites Four Persons

Four Guelph Citizens Bitten Before Dog Was Shot by Constable--Dogs To Be Tied Up

Special to The Examiner:

GUELPH, April 9. — A mad dog created considerable excitement in that part of the city known as Brooklyn to-day. It was a large collie, and had been acting strangely for several hours, but nobody had an idea it was mad until it attacked Miss Gaughan on Bay Street, as she was going uptown. The beast bit her quite severely in the left forearm, and was only warded off the second time with difficulty. It was frothing at the mouth in a manner which left no doubt as to its being mad.

After leaving Bay Street it attacked and bit Mrs. Reid and tore on up to the Ontario Agricultural College, where two students were also attacked. It was finally shot on Forbes Avenue by Constable McElroy, and the body taken to the police station, where the head was severed and shipped to the Health Department at Toronto for examination. Dr. H. O. Hewitt, Medical Officer of Health, intends to take every possible precaution, and is insisting that the by-law regarding the tieing of dogs be strictly enforced all over the city.

EASTER MESSAGE FROM THE POPE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 9.— In the Easter message of the Pope to Catholics, His Holiness gives the usual Easter greetings of Christ's peace and good will and says: "In our minds there rises, first of all, the thought of two regions of earth which most of all, at the present time stand in need of the blessings of peace, the Balkans in the old world, and Mexico in the new world. May Easter bring them peace. May all who control the destinies of nations work to this end."

SEEKING REVENGE ON CARSON

Special to The Examiner:

BELFAST, Ireland, April 9. — Because of Sir Edward Carson's refusal to lend his support to the suffragette movement, the militants to-day burned the historic country mansion, Orlands, near here. Orlands was formerly in the possession of Carson's family. Literature scattered about made it evident that the suffragettes believed Carson still occupied the place when he came to Ireland.

PUPILS WERE BOTH RIGHT AND WRONG

That it is possible to be right and wrong at the same time, was illustrated this morning in the Queen Alexandra school. One of the sentences for dictation, for the Easter promotion examinations, was—"and the descendants of Ham were bred and mustered there." The majority of the pupils wrote it this way—"and the descendants of ham, were bread and mustard there." Shouldn't the pupils get full marks? They made no errors in spelling—they were right from their point of view, and should not be penalised for having, with the end of the Lenten fast in sight, taken the ham sandwich view of the situation?

A Presentation

On Tuesday, March 31st, Miss Annie Deyell was very much surprised and delighted to receive from the members of Bethel Methodist Church, Otonabee, an address expressing the appreciation of her services as Organist during the past few years, accompanied by an acceptable gift of $10 in gold. Although Miss Deyell, as a member of the Church, considered it only a pleasant duty to help in the Church services, it was quite gratifying to know that her efforts have been appreciated.

Local Man Is In Hazleton, B.C.

Was In All Probability an Eye Witness of Recent Tragedy

Mr. Frederick H. Collins, formerly of this city, and son of Mr. J. D. Collins, 224 McDonnel street, is in Hazleton, B.C., where the bandits who attempted to rob the bank were fired upon by the citizens and two of their number killed. Mr. Collins is in the office of the Hudson Bay Co there, and it is more than probable that he was an eye-witness of or participated in the tragedy which resulted in the death of two of the robbers.

Since the robbery, which occurred on Tuesday, Mr. Collins has not heard from his son. But the same bank was robbed some time ago and in connection with that Mr. Frederick Collins wrote home saying that the inhabitants of Hazleton expected that the thieves would attempt it some future date. In preparation for such an event they were going to keep weapons in readiness so that they could get the upper hand of the robbers. It was thought at the time that they were hiding in the dense woods that surrounded Hazelton.

Events have proved that the precautions as outlined in his letter were justified and the raid on the bank a couple of days ago was unsuccessful.

On the previous occasion when the bank had suffered a considerable loss the citizens kept up a watch for suspicious characters for some time after the robbery. One of them suspected a man leaving the place a few days after, and covering him with a gun asked him to halt. The man refused to stop and was wounded. It turned out that he was an innocent man and in no way connected with the robbery.

ACTION WAS DISMISSED

Carter-Bourse Case Settled by Judge Hoyeke This Morning

"The conclusion I have come to is to dismiss the action, and counterclaim, without costs." Such was the judgment that His Honour Judge Hoyeke gave in the Carter-Bond case.

It will be remembered that the case was heard before His Honour on Tuesday last, occupying the time of the Court all day. Mrs. Harry Carter of Havelock claimed from Harry Bound of the same illage, the value of one horse, a buffalo robe, one set of single harness, and part of a set of harness, which she caimed, belonged to her, to settle the estate of her son, deceased.

In delivering judgment, His Honour said that the chief cause on which the action was brought, was the ownership of the horse. On this count he would find entirely in favour of the defendant, and therefore, of necessity the same would apply to the robe and harness.

Re the buggy, he said that it was plainly evident, from evidence deduced, that the buggy was in good condition before the death of Harry Carter. Mr. Bound subsequently drove to see the plaintiff in this buggy, and it was then noticed that it was in bad condition. "I think there is some truth in that," said the Judge.

"In connection with the partnership accounts, the plaintiff claims her share of these, namely $86.12. Defendant said that he collected these from time to time, as part of the going concern. There are considerable collections that defendant has not made, amounting to somewhere in the neighbourhood of $100 which, I think, should be divided among the parties. I think the defendant is responsible for some of the money, but how much, it is hard to determine.

"The chief storm centre was the ownership of the horse, which, I hold in favour of the defendant, but the conclusion I have come to is to dismiss the action, and counter-claim, without costs."

THE INABILITY OF VICE COMMISSIONS

To Deal With Betterment of Conditions of Poor, Outlined by Former Canadian Minister

The following on "vice commissions" appears in the quarterly police magazine, "The Canadian Police Bulletin":

"It is many years since the Rev. W. S. Rainsford of St. James' Cathedral, Toronto, became Rector of St. George's Church in New York, but his remarkable personality is still a cherished memory with the older residents of this country. In New York, his sturdy common sense has also made him an important man, and what he says is listened to with respect, and serious attention. Recently he wrote a very powerful letter to Mayor Gaynor (since deceased) protesting against the appointment of a vice commission, which has been strongly urged in certain quarters.

"Since Dr. Rainsford has, from his earliest days, as a clergyman, been indefatigable in his efforts to better conditions of the poor, his protest is all the more worth heeding. He states that he has seen a great deal of these commissions, and recalls their inefficiency, bigotry, partiality and lack of intelligence; their incapacity to see and understand what should be said could be for the good of a great city's life, that led them often into mistakes of judgment, and intrigues so gravely as to be almost if not actually, criminal.

"In the name of our social, common sense," said Dr. Rainsford, "let us stop creating commissions, stop endowing groups of excited and irresponsible people, with power they have not the sense and training to use aright. Such powers must finally be entrusted to only appointed and responsible officials. Let us aim at orderly government for our great cities, and do away with the vigilance committee".

Series Of Bible Lectures

"Beyond the Grave" Subject of Opening Discourse

The International Bible Students' Association, whose headquarters are at Craven Terrace, London W., is arranging for a public mass meeting for Christian people of all denominations, at which the first of a series of instructive Bible lectures will be delivered. "Beyond the Grave" is the subject of the first lecture. It will be held on Sunday at 3 p.m., in the Royal Theatre, by Pastor T. P. Yates of Hamilton.

The speaker of the occasion is said to be a very able Bible student and expounder. He is well known on the lecture platform and, being a man of the broadest sympathies, he has won for himself a warm spot in the hearts of thousands who have heard him. He has devoted much time to the study of the condition and significance of death, the nature of the resurrection and what lies beyond the grave, not only for the Christian, but the non-Christian, the heathen, and the wilfully wicked. Any desirous of hearing an explanation of the Scriptures concerning these important related subjects are cordially invited. It is especially urged that any who expect to attend this Bible lecture course should not miss the opening lectures. The doors will be opened free to all and no collections solicited.

POLICE SHOT TWO DOGS THIS MORNING

P. C. Hayward this morning shot two dogs, and deposited their remains in the garbage incinerator. These are the first two victims of the new by-law, and any that are now found, without the tag, will be dished up in the same way. The large number of dogs that are running at large in this city, are becoming a nuisance to a large extent. People should see that their dogs are provided with tags, or they will miss their canines, and no matter whether it be mongrel or thoroughbred, they all will share the same fate.

A REAL LIVE TAXI MEETS THE TRAINS

More signs of cutting adrift from the slurr town notions! The cab service at the stations has quite a rival now in the taxi which began business a few days ago as unostentatiously as if taxis were common around here. "Taxi sir," "Taxi Lady," are greetings that mingle with "hack sir" and somehow or other there is a blase sound—if such is possible—to the taxi salutation. An examination of the car failed to reveal the meter, and it is understood that the tariff is similar to that charged by hacks.

Local Man, Recommended as Indigent Patient for Treatment in Nicholls Hospital, Celebrates By Getting Drunk

At police court this morning, before Magistrate Dumble, Dennis McGrath was charged with being found drunk in a public place. He pleaded guilty and was fined $2 to be paid forthwith, or in default of payment ten days in jail.

Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, received a communication from Dr. Carmichael yesterday, recommending this man for admittance to Nicholls Hospital for treatment. Mr. Miller could not locate his man, but later found that he was lodged in the cells of the police station. The man is much attached to "Pain Killer."

A local man was charged with supplying liquor to a prohibited man, knowing that he was on the black list. His counsel pleaded 'not guilty,' but an adjournment was made at the instance of Chief Thompson until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

POTATO PULP A FINE CLEANSER

Grate raw potatoes to a fine pulp in clear water, and pass the liquid through a coarse sieve into another vessel of water. Let the mixture stand until the fine white particles of the potato are precipitated, then pour the water off and preserve for use. This liquid will clean all sorts of silk, cotton, or woolen goods without injuring them or spoiling the colour. Two good-sized potatoes are sufficient for a pint of water, says the Dalas News.

The article to be cleaned should be laid upon a linen cloth on a table and, having provided a clean sponge dip it into the potato water and apply it to the article to be cleaned until the dirt is entirely separated; then wash in clean water several times.

The coarse pulp, which does not pass through the sieve, is of great use in cleaning wool draperies, carpets and other coarse goods.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS, P.C.I., AND NORMAL SCHOOL CLOSED FOR HOLIDAYS

To-day at noon the Public schools and Collegiate Institute closed for the Easter holidays. They will re-open on Monday, April 20th. The Normal school will close at four oclock this afternoon, and the students will be expected to be on hand again on Tuesday, the 21st of April.

Examinations have been in progress at the Collegiate Institute in all forms during the past week. The Public school and Normal students have also been given the regular Easter tests. For some of the students at the Normal school to-day will be their last one in that institution if they are successful in passing the examinations.

LADIES WHO ARE LADIES

In the dining room of the Young Women's Christian Association, the prohibitory placard, "no smoking" frowns down from the wall upon the diners, who are invariably female. A placard like this in such a place seems as superfluous as "no talking aloud" in a deaf mute dining room; for the Y.W.C.A. ladies are still ladies, not having adopted the mannish habit of smoking practiced by "ladies" who are not ladies.

EASTER REFLECTIONS

(Editorial in Los Angeles, Cal., Journa).

In a sermon preached in this City on a recent Sunday from the pulpit of one of the orthodox churches, the announcement was made that Christian Scientists and Unitarians are en route to hell. We hope some mistake has been made by the learned gentleman who voiced this view of the matter.

The argument is made that Christian Scientists and Unitarians are Christless, and hence that they are spiritually outlaws. This, of course, assumes the correctness of the premises from which the gentleman draws his sweeping deductions, and at the same time, excludes entirely from consideration the possible correctness of any other view of the matter. But is Christ to be comprehensively and intelligently understood from any one exclusive point of view? There are wide differences of opinion among thinking people as to the correct doctrinal interpretation of the teachings of the New Testament. To be of Christ a part, is to be so influenced by completeness of faith in the superiority of his leadership over that of all others as to act and move and live in loving obedience to al the behests of that leadership. To some his crucifixion has one meaning, and to others it has stil another meaning. To some it means vicarious atonement for the sins of the race. To others it symbolizes the fact that in the sacrifice of the flesh, the yielding up of all allegiance to error in human life, is to be found complete redemption from the bondage of sin. Again, in the crucifixion of Jesus is to be seen in its most complete and august expression, demonstration of the fact that good and evil—God and sin—are absolutely and eternally irreconcilable, and that in order that our daily lives may be truly interpretative of the Christ, of the meaning of his message, it is as inexorably mandatory on man to destroy, crucify, the evil, the sin in his life, in order to be in harmony with the will of God, as it was inevitable that Jesus should submit to be crucified in the flesh rather than yield one iota in his allegiance to Truth.

Accepting Jesus in a sense that enables one to meet the facts and experiences of every-day life in the same spirit that determined his attitude toward the sin, the misery and the joy of this world, is to become endowed with power to overcome the temptations which are ever crowding upon us to yield to the debating influences of ife. Can it be justly said of a man who so accepts Christ that he is Christless because, forsooth, he may not believe in the doctrine of the vicarious atonement?

Christian Science and Unitarian teaching no more deny the sovereignty of the Christ in the life of man, than does that of Methodism. In the teaching of the latter the supreme event is in the fact of the crucifixion, but for which, it is claimed, man would be irreclaimably in the perpetual bondage of sin. In the teaching of the former the supreme fact lies in the absoluteness of God, in His infinite, neverchanging love; and the argument is that in exemplification of the sublime and perfect attributes of God and in order that man might realize the fact of the entire possibility of his own complete reconciliation with Him, came Jesus, the perfect type of the divine man; and in this view, his crucifixion becomes a demonstration of the absolute supremacy of mind over matter. In the one view of the matter, but for his crucifixion man would be hopelessly lost in sin. In the other view of it, his crucifixion was the supreme event in his life; but his power to keep us in the way of light and lead us unto God continues unabated in spite of his crucifixion, and not because of it. We think it can be truthfully said that both Christian Science and Unitarian teachings have wrought a mighty work in demonstrating, as they have, to the world that the Gospel of Jesus is addressed with as much force to the mental, the intellectual, as to the emotional side of man.

Membership Tickets For The Lovers Of Lacrosse

The executive committee of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club at a meeting last night decided to issue membership tickets at $1.00, and several hundred will be placed in the hands of the lacrosse missionaries in the city. It is expected that the former players and enthusiasts of a former day will lend their support in this direction. The executive fully appreciates the fact that after the lapse of years it will not be an easy matter to rehabilitate the game. It therefore behooves all the workers to put forward their best efforts. There is ample material for an intermediate team this year, and it is hoped that Peterborough will be given a district with other eastern teams.

The question of popularizing the game among the boys was discussed but this matter is in the hands of a special committee which, it is understood, will take up the question right away. Among the members present last night were: Ed. Dillon, Ed. Manning, L. LeBar, F. C. Weber, Geo. Robertson, R. J. Begley, Paul Trebilcock, A. Rose, George Mein, W. J. Koster, and the secretary.

Already five dozen junior sticks are in sight, and it is practicaly assured that there will be no trouble in getting the number necessary to qualify for the medals. The officers have been assured of support from many directions, and there is a strong feeling around the city that wants to see the game revived.

President Dillon and Mr. E. B. Boswell will attend the annual meeting of the O.A.L.A. to-morrow, and with the first of next week considerable reserve enthusiasm will be turned loose.

Club Rooms For The Peterboro' Athletic Club

Further progress in the establishment of the Peterborough Athletic Club was made last night at a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. with Dr. McPherson presiding. Reports from those who have been collecting subscriptions were presented, showing that the public had very favourably received the new enterprise. Enough money had been collected to make the opening of club rooms feasible, and the matter will be taken up at once.

A committee consisting of Grover Halpin, Roy Smyth, Egbert Kelly, A. Cranfield and F. D. Craig was appointed to secure information as to rooms, furnishings, etc., and to report at a general meeting of the club to be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening next at 7:30 o'clock. Several locations are being considered and the committee will meet to-morrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at The Examiner Office to go into the question.

Every club member should be on hand on Monday night to act on the report from the committee.

SEASON OPENS IN TEXAS LEAGUE

Special to The Examiner:

HOUSTON, Texas, April 9—The Texas Baseball League opened its twelfth season today, with Beaumont playing at Galveston, Fort Worth at Austin, Dallas at Waco, and San Antonio lining up against last year's champions, in this City. The League has undergone a thorough renovation since the close of last season and never before has it begun a pennant race under conditions that rendered the outcome so uncertain. The circuit is the same as last year, but every team is in charge of a new manager and has an unusually large number of new men in the line-up. Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Beaumont appear, on paper, to have the strongest aggregations, but it would cause no surprise if all the present calculations and predictions of the critics would be upset before the season is a month old.

ATTRACTIVE SCORE CARDS

Souvenir Programmes at Riverside Park This Season

An attractive score card, along the lines used in big baseball cities, is being arranged by Business Manager M. L. Dobson, of the Peterborough Baseball Club. The card, or rather programme, will be an interesting souvenir of sixteen pages, containing among other things the season's schedule, pictures of the Peterborough players, last year's records and other interesting features. Other seasons the score cards in use in Peterborough were not very ambitious affairs, and the new souvenir programme will doubtless be appreciated by the fans.

Mr. Thos. Brightman President Of The Curling Rink Co.

At a meeting of the Peterborough Curling Rink Company on Monday night the officers of last year were re-elected with Mr. Thomas Brightman as President. Nothing definite was decided in regard to the proposed changes in the furnishings to the Rink, except that plans have been asked for and a man engaged to lay out the extra rons that will be placed at the disposal of the Company, as the result of the new building.

DOPE ON THE BIG LEAGUES

Big Show is to Be a Three Ring Affair This Season, the Federals Claim

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, April 9.—"Score cards!" "Peanuts, five a bag." "Get the correct batting order." "Cigars, cigarettes and chewing gum."

The old familiar spiels will be heard again in the major league cities when the "greatest baseball show on earth" opens next week for the season of 1914.

The big show is to be a three-ring affair this season, if the confident predictions made by the Federal League promoters are fulfilled. The American and National League magnates intimate their belief that it will be the same old two-ring exhibition with a side show as an added attraction.

The baseball public seems inclined to credit the Federal League with possessing big league qualifications. The new organization certainly has shown itself to be a husky infant and the way it has trundled over major league territory and tagged the major league players has rather caught the fancy of the fans.

With an utter disregard for the very elements of superstition the Federals have decided to open their first season on the thirteenth day of the month. The curtain-raising stunt will be staged at Baltimore, where the Buffalo team will line up against Otto Knabe's Terrapins. A day or two later the other teams of the new league will get under way.

In the Federal League there is no dope in the way of past performances on which to base a prediction as to the outcome of the pennant race. Consequently all such predictions and forecasts could be little better than guess-work.

A slant at the Johnson and Tener combinations is sufficient to start the calculating machines a-rattling. To begin with, nine out of every ten of the fans probably pick the Athletics to run away with the American League flag, and the Giants as the winners in the National League race. There is no denying that so far as the Athletics are concerned the dope looks good, although the Washington team, with the great Walter Johnson doing the bulk of the twirling, may upset the beans.

The chances for the Giants to romp in a winner this year are considerably lessened by Shafer being out of the game. The Pittsburg Pirates are generally picked to give the Giants a hard tussle for the rag. With Konetchy, the former Cardinal star, at first, Viox at second, the wonderful Wagner at short, and Mowrey at third, the Pirates appear to have a combination that will make the Giants step some from the first tap of the bell.

With Shortstop Heine Wagner and Pitcher Joe Wood on the hospital list, the Boston Red Sox will start the season under a serious handicap. When the two stars are again able to play the Red Sox doubtless will give a good account of themselves.

The Brooklyn Superbas, under the management of the veteran Wilbert Robinson, are being touted as a real surprise package. "Robbie" has had the experience and it will be up to him to show the Brooklyn fans what he knows about creating a winner.

The White Sox rooters expect the Callahan crew to keep well up among the pennant contenders. The early recovery of Ray Schalk and Larry Chappell, the spectacular work of Hal Chase and the return to form of "Big Ed." Walsh form the basis for their calculations. Without the services of these brilliant performers it is hard to figure the Sox in the running.

With a new president, a new manager, a new captain and a new second-baseman, the famous old Cub machine has become a thing of the past. Hank O'Day has succeeded Johnny Evers as Manager, and Bill Sweeney is expected to show the goods in Evers' old position at second-base.

Charley Herzog has a likely looking bunch of Cincinnati Reds and may be able to land his team in the first division. The loss of Chapman, who is out of the game nursing an injured leg, is likely to handicap the Cleveland Naps at the getaway.

Though nearly shot to pieces by the desertion of players to the Feds., the Phillies have a number of promising youngsters who may be able to bring the Dooin Daisies into the limelight.

Manager George Stallings has his Boston Braves all tuned up and will make a strong bid for a place among the first four teams.

Unless Manager Chance can develop one or two real ball-tossers among his recruits the Yankees will be up against it again this season. And how about St. Louis? Well, the tip has gone forth that the Browns and Cardinals are prepared to put over anything short of homicide to break out of the cellar.

Begging the Question.

"I have come to consult you," she said to the prominent lawyer.

"What is the trouble?"

"I have received three proposals of marriage, and I do not know which to accept."

"Which man has the most money?"

"Do you imagine," she asked, "that if I knew I would consult you or any other lawyer?"

Hamilton Spectator: Jack White's contract was received this morning. White is the former Peterborough player and former Berlin manager. He is to be given a trial for an outfield job.

Toronto World: Never before was there so much hustle and bustle throughout the Canadian Baseball League circuit. With the opening of the championship race just one month off, all the clubs are on their toes, seeking the best men available, either in trade or by purchase. The training camps open next week and hundreds of candidates will try out for places. Just now Erie and London look the most dangerous, but Peterborough will make them all step some, and "Rube" Deneau may change things about at Brantford. The Toronto youngsters will, of course, be a factor, as they will be well protected through having first call on the surplus material from the International Leafs.

The St. Thomas club has offered Pitcher Ray Clements in trade. They tried to get Louie Bierbauer, the first-sacker of the London club, but London turned it down, though it is still whispered that Bierhauer will not be with London when the flag falls. Erie has offered to trade a firstbaseman for a pitcher. Gygill, who was transferred to Erie by the St. Joseph's club of the Western League, will surely hold down the initial cushion for the Yankees and Manager Smith has offered to give St. Thomas Owen Harris, a first-sacker from Baltimore, in exchange for Clements.

Connie Mack is getting ready to unload his "rookies," and the fans are busy figuring where the axe will fall. Two Canadian Leaguers are now with the Mack men, and both are making good. McAvoy, the catcher, with Berlin last year, and who was drafted by the Athletics, will be carried. Mack has made the statement that McAvoy is one of the best young backstops that it has been his good fortune to see, and that he will be carried all season. McAvoy caught something like twenty games for the Athletics in the latter part of last season, and made good with a vengeance.

The second Canuck Leaguer with the world champions is Boardman, who did good box work for Guelph in 1912. The correspondents with the Athletics in the south speak well of his work, and he will likely be carried. Boardman has a nice change of pace and is rapidly learning all the big league tricks.

FOOTBALL

The opening of the football season is scheduled for to-morrow (Friday) at 10 o'clock, when the "Monaghan Shinscrapers" and "Transformer Roughnecks" will clash in a sudden death game. It will undoubtedly be a terrific struggle from beginning to end, as the "Rough-necks" have their reputation to uphold and the 'Skin-scrapers' will stick to their motto, "If you kill me, I'll kill you." An ambulance brigade has kindly promised to be in attendance. Excitement is running high and the betting odds are 2 to 1 on the 'Skin-scrapers.' After a lengthy discussion the promoters have decided not to charge admission as the date clashes with one of Matthews-Laing's parlor days and also regret they cannot provide the spectators with hot cross buns, as they would get cold in transmission, but nevertheless a good time is assured. Players are specially asked to be on hand at 9.45. Kick off at 10 o'clock sharp.

At a meeting last night of the syndicate which has taken over the Peterborough Ball Club, Mr. W. H. Denham was elected chairman and Mr. E. G. Patterson, vice-chairman. E. T. Carr was chosen as secretary-treasurer. Mr. L. Dobson was again appointed business manager of the club. Details in connection with the coming season were discussed and plans formulated for the campaign which is to open in a few weeks.

"Why—er—until my bill is paid."

Stock Markets

A. H. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-day developed a dragging holiday market. The general list displayed a good under tone during the big break in C.P.R. On reaction of moderate extent we believe discriminating purchases will produce good results later. Attention is directed to the copper producers statement, showing a still stronger statistical position in the red metal. The coalers are being favoured by the torcadors blow, on account of the Laokawana victory. Reading, Lehigh Valley and Erie are reported better absorbed. The break in C.P.R. follows the reference made that the bull days of this stock were over for the time being. High grade roads like Union Pacific and others should be bought on recessions for turns.

A young lady, walking north on George street, a few nights ago, was knocked down by a young man riding a wheel, and sustained some bad bruises. The by-law will be enforced more strictly than ever this year.

OBITUARY.

MISS MARGARET McFADYEN.

HARTLEY, April 8.—The death of Miss Margaret McFadyen occurred on Sunday, March 29. Deceased was the only daughter of Mr. Ronald McFadyen, east of Hartley. She had been in failing health for some time and her death was not altogether unexpected, though the end came suddenly. She was well-known and very highly esteemed for her noble and upright character. She was of a most cheerful nature and throughout her illness did not murmur or complain, but remained cheerful to the end. She will be greatly missed not only in the home but in our social circles also, as she was a lady having splendid ability and was ever ready to lend her assistance. The funeral on Tuesday was very largely attended in spite of the unfavourable condition of the roads. The impressive service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. S. Steel. Beautiful flowers were placed on the casket. A bouquet was sent by Flenarm Orange Lodge as a slight token of their sympathy to Mr. McFadyen, who is one of their most respected members; also a handsome bouquet from a Toronto friend. Deceased was only twenty-four years. Her mother and two sisters predeceased her several years ago, and scarcely three years have passed since two of her brothers were laid side by side on the same day. She is survived by her loving father and two brothers, Ronald of Saskatchewan, who was unable to be present, also Lorne who is attending Peterborough Normal school, also her stepmother and sister. The deepest sympathy of the entire community is extended to the family in this their hour of sad bereavement.

MAY BE THE MISSING WOMAN

MIMICO, April 8.—Mrs. Edward Bailey of Symons Street, left home Monday evening, about 9 p.m., and has not been heard of since. Her husband had gone out to the woodshed to cut a supply of wood for the following day and when he returned his wife was missing. He thought she had probably gone to a neighbour's house for the evening, as they had had a little quarrel. When he returned from work last night and found that she had not been seen since, he immediately became anxious. Enquiries among the neighbours failed to obtain any information and the matter was placed in the hands of Constable Waltes, who is making investigation. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have only been married six weeks.

The above report in the Toronto Telegram may refer to a woman who arrived in Peterborough after midnight on Monday and to a poice officer stated that her name was Bailey, that she had left her husband in Toronto, and was returning to her parents in East City.

It must have been well past one o'clock when the lone woman was seen coming up George Street. It is so unusual to see a woman alone at that hour that the curiosity of an Examiner reporter was aroused. She turned at Simcoe Street and went east to Water Street and turned north. To a policeman she stated that she was Mrs. Bailey and that she had left her husband because he had not been taking care of her as she wished. One particular was that $4 a week were not sufficient to run the house and meet all expenses. The woman arrived on the 1 o'clock (C. P. R.) train, apparently, and on her explanation, was not detained by the officer.

WAS BURGLAR GANG IMPLICATED

Theory is Advanced in Lindsay—Burglars Carried Rifles

LINDSAY, April 9.—The shooting of Robert Hayde a grocer at Tombawk Point near Midland, on or about the night of March 27th, has aroused the suspicion of some Lindsay citizens, who have ventured the opinion that the gang of burglars who operated through the northern towns are guilty of the crime. The fact that the man was shot with a rifle bullet connects the gang in this point, as they carried such firearms. The burglars caught in Lindsay carried a short rifle which could be secreted in an overcoat pocket unobserved. With a weapon like this Hayde could have been murdered, as he would not suspect such a deadly gun could be carried concealed on the person. Had a man approached him with a rifle he would have been more cautious and would have endeavoured to protect himself, as he would know the party had criminal intent. The theory advanced is feasible.

GOOD FRIDAY IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Bishop O'Brien Officiates This Morning in the Sunday Thursday Ceremonies

Yesterday was celebrated Holy Thursday in the various Catholic churches of the city with special ceremony at St. Peter's Cathedral, where His Lordship Bishop O'Brien officiated for the first time at the blessing of the holy oils and at the memorial ceremony of the washing of the feet, commemorative of Christ's washing the feet of his disciples before the eventful last supper. Quite a number of the priests of the diocese were present.

Morning, afternoon and evening services will be held on Good Friday.

Sudden Demise Of A. A. Vickers

Is Received in Fort William—Deceased Was Formerly a Resident of Peterboro

The Fort William exchange has the following to say of the death of the late A. A. Vickers, who a short time ago married a former Peterborough girls:

Twin city citizens were shocked on Monday morning by the news of the sudden death of A. A. Vickers, one of Fort William's most prominent men both in commercial and social circles, who was found dead at four o'clock Monday morning in a room in his residence on the corner of Ridgeway and Catherine Streets, death being due to a gunshot wound in the head, which those in the best position to know the circumstances state was accidentally inflicted. The deceased was not only one of the most widely known business men at the head of the lakes, but was a popular citizen who won the lasting friendship of all classes. His death is sincerely mourned equally by high and low, one of the saddest features of the case being that he leaves a young wife who was only a bride a few months ago.

Arthur Algoma Vickers was born in Toronto forty-three years ago, and was the youngest son of J. J. and Catherine Vickers, who were associated with this district in the pioneer days, and acquired large tracts of land in what now is the city of Fort William and in the township of Neebing, lands which have since become exceedingly valuable.

After spending the early part of his life in commercial pursuits, Arthur Vickers came to Fort William about eleven years ago and arranged for the subdivision of part of the estate, which is onw the Vickers addition. Soon after that he built for himself a residence on one of the best corners in this addition, which became known as one of the most hospitable homes in the city.

After a number of years of bachelor life, he married, a few months ago, Marcelle Finn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Finn of Port Arthur, and formerly of Peterborough. After a long honeymoon in the eastern states they returned and took up their residence in Fort William.

Besides his widow, Arthur Vickers leaves three brothers, W. W. Vickers, of Toronto; J. J. Vickers, who is connected with the American Express company in Chicago; and Victor Vickers of Montreal; and five sisters, Mrs. Ewing of Montreal; Mrs. McMurrich, of Toronto; Mrs. Sewell, of Denver; Mrs. P. E. McKenzie, formerly of Kenora, and now of Saskatoon; and an unmarried sister, Miss Jettie Vickers, who is an artist in Paris.

Slept In Cellar Of Local Store

Very Insanitary Conditions Unearthed by Relief Officer Miller

Chinamen have been known to sleep in their shops, Italians have been known to huddle together, many in a room, for their night's repose, but the latest revelation is, that people of our own race use cellars for their abode. Such a condition was unearthed the other morning, by Relief Officer Miller. He was sent to investigate an indigent case. He found his man, sleeping in the cellar of a George street business house, on an old camp bed, and covered with old clothes.

After communicating with the Medical Health Officer, Sanitary Inspector Spence made it known that these conditions could not exist, and ordered the occupant to quit the premises. It was then that he was secured, and taken to the hospital.

To know that such conditions existed in Peterborough, was no pleasant information to the Health authorities, and a betterment of conditions will be made immediately.

STILL A VACANCY

There is still a vacancy on the local police force owing to the resignation of P. C. Blade, which was found necessary for private reasons. It is likely that an appointment will be made within a few days.

ON GOING COURTING.

In Boston they talk about "limiting by law the length of courtship." A bill fixing two years as the maximum legal limit of a "courtin'" is, says the despatch, scheduled for appearance in the Great and General Court of that great and eloquent Commonwealth. Everyone knows that the proportion of males to females is peculiarly inadequate in Massachusetts—hence the stir on Beacon Hill over the term of wooing. "If they can't marry all of us," one seems to hear some philandering minister explaining in the lunch room of the Industrial and Educational Union in Boylston Street, "they can anyway give each of us a turn at being engaged." It is, all the same, a grave subject. Being engaged is in some ways more serious than being married. Personally, we reckon two years rather too long a time to allow by law.

Mrs. Kathleen Norris, author of "Mother," thinks six months long enough—"if a young man calls two or three times a week during that period." But is it possible that marriages ever result when he calls so often? It is risking a good deal—letting one's sweetheart know one that well before it's too late. But that is a side issue. Engagements were never all of man's making, and are less so than ever at the present time. Though the parental referendum has passed into innocuous desuetude, the girl in the case has initiative nowadays, just as she has always had the recall. Perhaps the high cost of amusements may, in our larger cities, serve to shorten such courtships as it does not wholly wreck. Certainly a new law is not called for here—new light being quite another matter. By the way, at just what stage does courting begin anyway?—Collier's.

An easy name to remember. A hard tea to forget.

Chatham Again Visited by Fire.

CHATHAM, Ont., April 11.—Starting from an explosion, the cause of which is unknown, fire yesterday morning completely destroyed the plant of the Canadian Wolverine Brass Co. on St. Clair street, causing a loss that is estimated by officers of the company at from $25,000 to $30,000. The fire is the most disastrous that has occurred in Chatham since the Planet disaster almost a year ago, but unlike that catastrophe, no lives were lost.

TREATY IS RENEWED

Arbitration Between Britain and U. S. Goes On Five Years

NO ALTERATION IN TEXT

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Secretary Bryan and Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador, yesterday exchanged ratifications of the arbitration treaty which will continue for another five years.

The original form of the treaty of 1908 was preserved without change.

Great Britain advanced the suggestion that there be incorporated in the terms of the treaty a provision similar to that contained in various commercial treaties by which the life of the treaty continues until one year after notification from one or the other of the contracting parties that that party desires to terminate the agreemen. This proposition was not objectionable to this Government, but the necessity of sending the treaty to the Senate for ratification and the possible entanglements likely to arise in the present stress of feeling over the tolls question dictated the wisdom of adhering to the old form and not trying to attempt any new arrangement.

Secretary Bryan signed the treaty for the United States and Ambassador Spring-Rice performed the same function for the British crown.

RIOTERS ARE LIBERATED.

Twenty-Two More Vancouver Island Miners Get Freedom.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C., April 11.—Twenty-two Ladysmith miners, sentenced to varying terms in jail for participation in the riots on Vancouver Island last August, by Judge Howay, at Nanaimo, have been released from the Burnaby prison farm at Oakalla, orders to that effect having reached the warden from the Department of Justice at Ottawa.

With the release of these men the last of those convicted of participation in the disorders are at liberty, save Joe Angelo, who was given a penitentiary term by Justice Morrison at the close of the special assize here a fortnight ago, and five given penitentiary sentences by Judge Howay at Nanaimo.

BABY ALL COVERED WITH ECZEMA
Could Not Sleep Day or Night. Itched and Burned Terribly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured in a Month. Also Cured Mother of Salt Rheum.
Quarryville, N. B.—"For a month after my baby was born he could not sleep day or night with eczema. He was all covered with small watery pimples which would break in a day or two and leave a humoury scab and would itch and burn terribly. He scratched so much that he made sores. His skin burned all the time and when the scab came off it left little marks like chicken-pox. At last I saw Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertised. After the first application he rested easier. I applied the Cuticura Ointment lightly and after an hour I would wash him with Cuticura Soap. After a month's treatment he was cured.
"I was greatly troubled with salt rheum on my hands. They broke out in little watery pimples and would be so itchy I could tear them to pieces. Then they would dry up and crack and bleed and when I put them in water the disease would eat in to the bones. They were so painful I had to keep them tied up with cotton rags. I could not do any work. One box of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap cured them." (Signed) Mrs. Grattan, July 31, 1913.
Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

STRIKERS TO RETURN?

Referendum of Calumet Copper Miners Will Be Taken.

CALUMET, Mich., April 11.—Copper country locals of the Western Federation of Miners decided yesterday to take a referendum vote next Sunday on the question of calling off the strike which has been waged since July 23, 1913.

The action of the locals resulted from reports of the district officers which were submitted to five meetings held in various parts of the strike zone. It was said that the district officers informed the men that no more concessions could be expected from the copper mining companies. It was also stated that the union rank and file was told that the companies have established a substantial eight-hour day and have arranged to hear grievances once a week. Recognition of the union, they said, had been steadily refused.

It was reported that some of the union members criticized the officers for not proposing the referendum a month ago when there was better chance of obtaining work.

Suffragette on Rampage.

LONDON, April 11.—With a butcher's cleaver, which she had concealed under her cloak, a suffragette started Thursday afternoon to demolish a glass case and its contents, consisting of valuable porcelains, in the Asiatic gallery of the British Museum. At the time there were few visitors in that section, and on this the suffragette doubtless counted for long enough freedom from interruption to complete the work of destruction.

But the sound of splintering glass carried far, and before she had struck many blows two attendants reached the spot and seized her and turned her over to the police.

Pennsylvania Mines Closed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11. — Bituminous coal operators representing 85 per cent. of the output of Central Pennsylvania decided yesterday by a vote of 30 to 2 to close their mines pending the signing of a new wage agreement with their employers. It is expected the operators will order their mines closed to-night.

STOP SLAUGHTER OF WILD DUCKS

Two Hundred Birds Now the Limit of One Bag

A RADICAL AMENDMENT.

Fish and Game Committee of Legislature Makes Important Change.

Market hunters of wild duck are pretty well ruled off the map as far as the Province of Ontario is concerned by a radical measure adopted by the fish and game committee on Thursday. Hereafter all bags for a year must be limited to 200, and there is a strong possibility that the export of this high-class game bird will be completely prohibited. The committee did not go this far Thursday, but Hon. Dr. Aeaume will confer with the federal government as to the right of the province to retain all birds slaughtered within its limits.

The discussion centred about the bill of C. N. Anderson of Essex, which would set the bag limit of ducks at 100, but in the opinion of many this was ridiculous, although there was no doubt it would stop the pothunters. The chief advocate of the stringent legislation was W. H. Doherty of St. Thomas, who spoke with authority on the game problem from the Western Ontario standpoint. He produced statistics to show that the duck was going the way of the wild pigeon, and that unless preventive measures were adopted the species would become extinct.

Other Laws.

He stated that British Columbia had set a limit at 250 for a season and Alberta at 100 for certain kinds of fowls. From freight and express records he showed that between Port Dover and Port Royal fifty market operators had slain 1,500 ducks apiece, while 18 men at Long Point had killed 25,000. More figures were given which showed a tremendous slaughter going on every year on the St. Clair River flats and Ontario marshes.

Col. Hendrie of Hamilton stood strongly for game law enforcement but questioned the feasibility of getting after the market hunters. Findlay McDirmid of Elgin wanted the 100 limit enforced, but after much discussion the bill carried with the bag limit of 200 inserted.

KEYS TO THE BASTILE.

The Port Hope Guide says:

Our policemen, when out of office, seem to have a strong desire to retain the keys. It took several weeks to persuade A. W. Gummerson to loosen up, and now acting Chief Richards is without keys. Thursday morning he had to wait about the corridors of the Town Hall until Mr. Chesher arrived and opened the jail. Mayor Bush will take the matter up with Mr. Boyce.

OKUMA RECOMMENDED.

Japanese Elder Statesmen Propose Him For Premier.

TOKIO, April 11.—Count Shigenobu Okuma, former Minister, was recommended to the Emperor yesterday by the elder statesmen for the office of Premier, in place of Count Gombei Yamamoto, whose Cabinet resigned in consequence of the naval scandals connected with the receipt of illicit commissions by officers.

The coronation of the Emperor, which had been fixed for Nov. 10 next, has been postponed until 1916 owing to the death of the Dowager Empress.

The reason for the prolonged delay of the coronation is that the seed of the rice used in the sacred ceremony must not be ripened during the period of national mourning.

Shinbones Come In Handy.

NEW YORK, April 11.—News of two remarkable operations at the Post-Graduate Hospital came out yesterday.

Arthur Lang, a Brooklyn boy, was cured of spinal curvature by the insertion of a ten-inch strip of shinbone. This operation was performed by Prof. F. H. Alves.

The other operation was upon Ambrose Duffy, a Yorkville boy, who when a baby, had his skull fractured and had been a constant sufferer. This condition was corrected by the insertion of a piece of shinbone.

In both cases the operations were successful.

FEDERALS BEATEN

Villa Reports Another Victory at San Pedro, Near Saltillo

GUILLOTINE AT THE FRONT

JAUREZ, April 11.—As a climax of the second campaign of the Coahuila country the Federals, under De Moure and Maas, were driven out of San Pedro de Los Colonias and back to Saltillo. This information was relayed from the front last night by Gen. Villa, who has sent his chief commanders to San Pedro to overwhelm the Federal forces. After an eight days' battle between the Federal reinforcements from Monterey and Saltillo and the joint commands of Ortega, Hernandes and Benavides, the Federals were driven from the streets of San Pedro after the most severe hand-to-hand fighting, back into the desert beyond the irrigated district of San Pacio to the east. The losses on both sides were heavy, and the rebels suffered from lack of supplies and ammunition.

Ortega and Hernandes were twice forced to withdraw to their base at Sacramento, but renewed the attack with the receipt of supplies from Torreon, and finally drove the Federals out of their well-fortified positions.

Velasco, in command of the Torreon column, and Hidalgo, who commanded at Saltillo, have formed a junction, and are now near Saltillo, having slipped around the San Pedro command of rebels before the battle started. They are preparing for an offensive campaign against Torreon, and will make an effort to drive Villa out of the town. They have the necessary elements, and with the supplies that are at Saltillo they can accomplish much against Villa's exhausted army.

The compaign against Saltillo has not yet been undertaken by Villa, who is holding his main column in Torreon and Gomez Palacio.

Torreon's Fall Admitted.

MEXICO CITY, April 11. — The first admission that Gen. Villa and the rebel army have occupied Torreon was made by The Mexican Herald on Thursday. The newspaper, however, states that Gen. Aucreliano Blanquet declares that Gen. Jose Refugio Velasco, the Federal commander, has not evacuated the city in the full sense of the word. The Minister of War says the Federal commander has made a strategic move which is expected to give the best results on the arrival of the Federal columns now on their way to Torreon.

Will Use Guillotine.

ELPASO, April 11.—Gen. Eulalia Gutierres, who is in command of the San Luis Potosi district, held by the rebels, and is now in Juares conferring with Carranza, was advised yesterday that his troops surrounding the city of San Luis Potosi Thursday killed 200 Federals, who attempted to make a sally out of the city against him.

Gen. Gutierrez yesterday described a guillotine which he has constructed for use on Federal prisoners when captured. "We tested it on sheep," he said, "and it worked beautifully."

Asked if he had used it yet on a human being, he said, "No, not yet, but there are plenty of Federals and there is plenty of time." He said the machine was portable and would be carried on a flat car with his army.

Two Huertists Executed.

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, April 11.—Standing blindfolded on the brink of their open graves, Francisco Fimbres and Jose M. Canoba, members of a Huerta junta on the American side of the line, were executed in the cemetery yesterday. Fimbres was captured several days ago while carrying a message from the junta to Canoba, who was then at Montezuma.

TWO KILLED IN FALL.

Aviator and Woman Passenger Fall 200 Feet.

DRESDEN, April 11. — The German aviator, Reichelt, carried a woman passenger with him on a flight last evening. At a height of 200 feet the motor exploded and the monoplane shot blazing to earth. The woman was dead when extricated. Reichelt died in a hospital.

On several previous occasions the deceased aviator had narrow escapes from death. Once, in 1913, with a passenger aboard, when at a height of 6,000 feet, his motor stopped and he had to plane downward through a heavy fog in the darkness. He landed on a house, crushing the roof, but he and his passenger escaped injury.

Coin In Letters Permitted.

OTTAWA, April 11.—The recently issued order by the Postoffice Department that all letters containing coin which were transmitted through the mails were to be sent to the dead letter office unless registered has been suspended.

The new regulation caused much adverse criticism in the country, and a day or two ago the deputy minister, Dr. Coulter, stated that amounts up to one dollar would be accepted unregistered. An order has now been given out that letters containing coin are to be forwarded in the regular manner.

TO BREED REMOUNTS.

Canadian Government Rents Land and Contracts For Horses.

OTTAWA, April 11.—An important arrangement has been made by the Minister of Militia with the National Live Stock Exchange, Limited, whereby the latter will lease for twenty-one years 65,120 acres of crown lands in Alberta, south of the Red Deed river, and will breed thereon cavalry remounts for the Canadian militia and the British army. The annual rental will be two cents per acre, and the exchange undertakes to raise not less than 1,500 horses per year, the price to be paid by the Militia Department and the British War Office not to exceed $250. The exchange has agreed to purchase as far as practicable such half-bred yearlings as it may require from the smaller breeders throughout Canada, the purpose being to distribute the purchase money over as wide an area as possible and assist the smaller breeders.

The Government of Canada is to have right of pre-emption in respect to all these horses raised by the exchange, and the company must hold and mature until the age of three and a half years all horses which the Minister of Militia may desire for military purposes.

It is further agreed that the War Office of Great Britain may have pre-emption rights at the same prices and terms in respect of such horses as remain "after the Minister has made his choice." The exchange must have the right, however, to retain fifty fillies and fifty colts each year for breeding purposes.

Col. Hughes submits that the lease "will be in the interest of the public, as it desired that every encouragement should be given for the production of horses for cavalry and other war purposes."

Trappers at Work.

LINDSAY, April 11. — Local trappers are getting busy making due preparation for the usual spring catch of rats and minks. The season for muskrats last from the first day of December to the first day of May, and for mink from the first day of November to the first day of May.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"Yes, you are right," repeated Mr. Steele more energetically. "People do resent such insinuations against a woman, though I remember one case where the opposite effect was produced. It was when Collins ran for supervisor in Cleveland. He was a good fellow himself, and he had a wife who was all that was beautiful and charming, but who had once risked her reputation in an act which did call for public arraignment. Unfortunately, there was a man who knew of this act and he published it right and left and—"

"Olympia!" Mayor Packard was on his feet, pointing in sudden fury and suspicion at the table where the matches lay about in odd and, as I now saw, seemingly set figures. "You are doing something besides playing with those matches. I know Mr. Steele's famous cipher; he showed it to me a week ago; and so, evidently, do you, in spite of the fact that you have had barely fifty words with him since he came to the house. Let me read—ah!—give over that piece of paper you have there, Steele, if you would not have me think you as great a dastard as we know that Brainard to be!"

And while his wife drooped before his eyes and a cynical smile crept about the secretary's fine mouth, he caught up the sheet on which Steele had been playing tit-tat-to with the child, and glanced from the table to it and back again to the table on which the matches lay.

"M," suddenly left the mayor's writhing lips; then slowly, letter by letter, "E—R—C—Y. Mercy!" he vociferated. "Why does my wife appeal for mercy to you—a stranger—and in your own cipher! Miserable woman! What secret's here? Either you are ——"

"Hush! some one's at the door!" admonished the secretary.

Mr. Packard turned quickly, and, smoothing his face rapidly, as such men must, started for the door. Mrs. Packard, flinging her whole soul into a look, met the secretary's eyes for a moment and then let her head sink forward on her hands above those telltale matches, from whose arrangement she had reaped despair in place of hope.

Mr. Steele smiled again, his fine, false smile, but after her head had fallen; not before. Indeed, he had vouchsafed no reply to her eloquent look. It was as if it had met marble till her eyes were hidden; then ——

But Nixon was in the open doorway and Nixon was speaking:

"A telegram, your Honour."

The old man spoke briskly, even a little crisply—perhaps he always did when he addressed the mayor. But his eyes roamed eagerly and changed to a burning, red colour when they fell upon the dejected figure of his mistress. I fancied that, had he dared, he would have leaped into the room and taken his own part—and who could rightly gage what that was?—in the scene which may have been far more comprehensive to him than to me. But he did not dare, and my eyes passed from him to the mayor.

"From Haines," that gentleman announced, forgetting the suggestive discovery he had just made in the great and absorbing interest of his campaign. "'Speech good—great applause becoming thunderous at flash of your picture. All right so far if—'" he read on, pausing abruptly at the "if" which, as I afterward understood, really ended the message. "No answer," he explained to Nixon as he hurriedly dismissed him. "That 'if' concerns you," he now declared, coming back to his wife anad to his troubles at the same instant. "Explain the mystery which seems likely to undo me. Why do you sit there bowed under my accusations? Why should Henry Packard's wife cry for mercy to any man? 'Because those damnable accusations are true? Because you have a secret in your past and this man knows it?"

Slowly she rose, slowly she met his eyes, and even he started back at her pallor and the drawn misery in her face. But she did not speak. Instead of that she simply reached out and laid her hand on Mr. Steele's arm, drooping almost to the ground as she did so.

"Mercy!" she suddenly wailed, but this time to the man who had so relentlessly accused her.

The effect was appalling. The mayor reeled, then sprang forward with his hand outstreteched for his secretary's throat. But his words were for his wife.

"What does this mean? Why do you take your stand by the side of another man than myself? What have I done or what have you done that I should live to face such an abomination as 'this?"

It was Steele who answered, with a life of his head as full of assertion as it was of triumph. "You? nothing, she? everything. You do not know this woman, Mayor Packard; for instance, you do not know her name."

"Not know her name? My wife's?"

"Not in the least. This lady's name is Brainard. So is mine. Though she has lived with you several years in ignorance of my continued existence, no doubt, she is my wife and not yours. We were married in Boone, Minnsota, six years ago."

CHAPTER XXII.

The Wife's Tale.

Ten minutes later this woman was pleading her cause. She had left the side of the man who had just assumed the greatest of all rights over her and was standing in a frenzy of appeal before him she loved so deeply and yet had apparently wronged.

Mayor Packard was sitting with his head in his hands in the chair into which he had dropped when the blow fell which laid waste his home, his life, the future of his child and possibly the career which was as much, perhaps more, to him than all these. He had not uttered a word since that dreadful moment. To all appearance her moans of contrition fell upon deaf ears, and she had reached the crisis of her misery without knowing the extent of the condemnation hidden in his persistent silence. Collapse seemed inevitable, but I did not know the woman or the really wonderful grip she held on herself. Seeing that he was moved by nothing she had said, she suddenly paused, and presently I heard her observe in quite a different tone:

"There is one thing you must know—which I thought you would know without my telling you. I have never lived with this man, and I believed him dead when I gave my hand to you."

The mayor's fingers twitched. She had touched him at last. "Speak! tell me," he murmured hoarsely. "I do not want to do you any injustice."

"I shall have to begin far, far back; tell about my early life and all its temptations," she faltered, "or you will never understand."

"Speak."

Sensible at this point of the extreme impropriety of my presence, I rose, with an apology, to leave. But she shook her head quickly, determinedly, saying that as I had heard so much I must hear more. Then she went on with her story.

"I have committed a great fault," said she, "but one not so deep or inexcusable as now appears, whatever that man may say," she added with a slow turn toward the silent secretary.

Did she expect to provoke a reply from the man who, after the first triumphant assertion of his claim, had held himself as removed from her and as unresponsive to her anguish as had he whom she directly addressed? If so, she must have found her disappointment bitter, for he did not respond with so much as a look. He may have smiled, but if so, it was not a helpful smile; for she turned away with a shudder and henceforth faced and addressed the mayor only.

"My mother married against the wishes of all her family and they never forgave her. My father died early—he had never got on in the world—and before I was fifteen I became the sole support of my invalid mother as well as myself. We lived in Boone, Minnesota.

"You can imagine what sort of support it was, as I had no special talent, no training and only the opportunity given by a crude western town of two or three hundred inhabitants. I washed dishes in the hotel kitchen—I who had a millionaire uncle in Detroit, and had been fed on tales of wealth and culture by a mother who remembered her own youth and was too ignorant of my real nature to see the harm she was doing. I washed dishes and ate my own heart out in shame and longing—bitter shame and frenzied longing, which you must rate at their full force if you would know my story and how I became linked to this man.

"I was sixteen when we first met. He was not then what he is now, but he was handsome enough to create an excitement in town and to lift the girl he singled out into an enviable prominance. Unfortunately I was that girl. I say unfortunately, because his good looks failed to arouse in me more than a passing admiration; and in accepting his attentions, I consulted my necessities and pride rather than the instincts of my better nature. When he asked me to marry him I recoiled. I did not know why then, nor did I know why later; but I know why now. However, I let this premonition pass and engaged myself to him, and the one happy moment I knew was when I told my mother what I had done, and saw her joy and heard the hope with which she impulsively cried, 'It is something I can write your uncle. Who knows? He may forgive me my marriage when he hears that my child is going to do so well!' Poor mother; she had felt the glamour of my lover's good looks and cleverness much more than I had. She saw in him indications to which I was blind that I was going to marry a man of mark, and was much more interested in the possible reply she might receive to the letter with which she had broken the silence of years between herself and her family than in the marriage itself.

The cause of headache as you know, is the stoppage of the circulation resulting in pressure on the delicate nerves of the head. In time nature will start the blood going again, but meanwhile we suffer and are unfit for duty.

Assisted by two ZUTOO Tablets, which by the way are as harmless as the soda they contain, nature will remove the pressure and stop the headache in twenty minutes. Why continue to suffer? Why be unfit?

It is really remarkable how many people now use ZUTOO to cure their headaches. Do you? If not, why not?

WOULD COUGH SO HARD
Would Turn Black In The Face.

A cough cold is one of the most dangerous kind. It leaves the throat or lungs, and sometimes both, affected if not taken care of immediately.

Obstinate coughs and colds yield to the grateful soothing action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree.

Mrs. C. J. Selig, Dartmouth, N.S., writes:—"My little boy, six years old, had a dreadful, hard cough. At night time he would cough so hard he would turn black in the face, and at times he would cough nearly an hour before he would stop. I tried different cough syrups, but they did him no good. The little fellow was wasting away, as he could not eat or sleep, the cough troubled him so. I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and it did him so much good I got another. Now I am only too glad to be able to write this to tell how thankful I am, and to tell every mother to use nothing else."

Be sure you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. See the trade mark; the three pine trees.

How Many Steps to a Mile?

How many steps do you take to the mile? If you think a moment you will probably reply, "Seventeen hundred and sixty," but that I take leave to doubt.

Should you be an infantryman of the British army your pace will be the longest of any infantryman in the world. The Russian pace is the short est, being only twenty-seven and a half inches; the French, Italian and Austrian soldiers manage twenty-nine inches; the Germans do thirty-one inches and the British thirty-one and one-half inches. But your own pace, what of it? It depends upon whether you are a "highbrow" or not.

Put a stick across your eyebrows and see how long the piece of string is which reaches from that level to the floor. Half the length of this string is the length of your pace, and that length you will find to be between thirty-one inches and thirty-two inches, so that between 2,000 and 2,100 paces are needed to walk a mile.—London Chronicle.

Some Satisfaction.

During the staging of a series of Shakespeare's plays in one week at Stratford-on-Avon not only were the performers tired out, but the heavy shifting and many changes had also wearied the scene shifters and property men. One night just after a strong death scene, when F. R. Benson as one of the English kings had drawn his last breath, one of the stage hands was heard to observe in a growling undertone to one of his fellows, "Well, Bill thank heaven there's another bloody king dead!"

King Finds Husbands.

When a Siamese girl attains the age of thirty-five without marrying, she is labelled and placed in a privileged class under the special care of the King, who binds himself to find a husband for her. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in any one of the Siamese jails may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the maidens. Whether he is already married or not is of no great consequence, for in Siam a man is not restricted to one wife.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

ASCENDING THE ALPS

THRILLING ADVENTURES OCCUR IN SWITZERLAND.

Presence of Mind and a Little Good Luck Have Prevented Many a Terrible Tragedy in Snowclad Peaks—Prof. Tyndall and Party Had a Hairbreadth Escape When They Rode on an Avalanche.

Every climbing season has its terrible crop of disasters on the Alpine slopes, stories of lost foothold and a consequent dash to death. But occasionally presence of mind, a clear head, perhaps, with a dash of what most people would call sheer luck, have saved a climber just in the nick of time, perhaps from a fall of a thousand feet.

A recent case illustrates this. A party was saved by the instant action of a guide from a certain swift descent to destruction. On the top of the Weissbern, one of the well-known Zermatt Peaks, there is a razor-edged ridge of snow. The party, which were of course, roped together, had reached the summit and were just beginning to descend.

In fact, all but one of the party had actually strung themselves out down the steep slope of snow. Without warning a part of the narrow crest broke beneath the weight, and the whole party would have fallen with it, and nothing could have saved them from a terrible death had not the guide at the upper end of the rope instantly thrown himself down the slope at the farther side of the ridge, opposite to that of the fallen men.

The rope stretched itself like the "e" string over the bridge of a violin, the single guide on one side, and the rest of the party on the other, neither having a chance of regaining a foothold unaided. If the knife-like edge cut the rope death was still certain. But there they held until they were rescued by another party, who heard their cries and hastened to their assistance.

The late Professor Tyndall used to go year after year to Switzerland while he was engaged in his interesting investigations as to the nature and movements of glaciers, had one of the most thrilling experiences on record in connection with an avalanche. It happened in the Engadine, and his companions were Messrs. Hutchinson, Lee Warner, and two guides named Jenni and Walter. The party were all roped together, and were descending a gully of ice with snow resting upon it. They had not got far down when Jenni turned round and said, "A false step here may cause an avalanche. Be careful." He had scarcely spoken when the false step was made.

Professor Tyndall was second in the line, and he saw his friends and the guide Walter, who brought up the rear, whirled past him. He did his best to check the downward rush, but in vain, and all five found themselves riding downwards on the back [illegible] and started.

The Professor, being an old mountaineer, knew what to do in an emergency, and, keeping his presence of mind, he strove to thrust his alpenstock through the moving snow into the ice beneath. This break, however, failed to act, and they were carried downwards with incredible velocity, and all in a tangle, and a few minutes later were actually carried by the avalanche clear over a crevasse, the velocity being so great that it did not give them time, as it were, to drop into the frightful rent in the mountain.

Very soon a second crevasse was reached, and the guide, Jenni, seeing that they were approaching it, did a magnificently brave act, for he deliberately threw himself into the chasm, feeling sure that the others would be carried over it as before, and hoping that the strain of his weight on the other end of the rope would balance the party, as were, and check their downward course. So tremendous, however, was their velocity that, although it was an exceptionally heavy man, the weight of the other four jerked the rest of the snare, and the slide continued.

Jenni was now the hindermost of the sliding group, with the Professor next to him, and the three foremost men riding, as it were, on the back of the avalanche. As they were travelling the glacier became precipitous, and at the base there was quite a series of terribly deep chasms down which they must inevitably fall and be buried under the thousands of tons of snow composing the tail of the avalanche. Both the Professor and Jenni had lost their alpenstocks, but the former strove with might and main to drive his heels into the firmer surface beneath the snow. Now or never they must be brought to rest. Let the Professor now relate how the adventure ended:

"Looking in advance I noticed that the slope for a short distance became less steep, and then fell as before. Now or never we must be brought to rest. The speed visibly slackened, and I thought we were saved. But the momentum had been too great; the avalanche crossed the brow, and in part regained its motion. Here Hutchinson threw his arm around his friend, all hope being extinguished, whilst I grasped my belt and struggled to free myself. Finding this difficult from the tossing, I suddenly resumed the strain upon the rope. Destiny had so related the downward impetus to Jenni's pull as to give the latter a slight advantage, and the whole question was whether the opposing force would have time to act. This was all arranged in our favor, for we came to rest so near the brow that two or three seconds of our average motion of descent would have carried us over. Had this occurred we should have fallen into the chasm and been covered up by the tail of the avalanche."

Titles to Land.

On what just basis can I claim exclusive right to a part of the limited surface of the earth? "No man made the land," said Mill. "It is the original inheritance of the whole species." No matter how far we delve into the past, we can find no just title to the private ownership of land. Blackstone admits that "there is no foundation in nature or in natural law why a set of words upon parchment should convey the dominion of land." "Whilst another man has no land," says Emerson, "my title to mine, your title to yours, is at once vitiated." And Herbert Spencer maintains that the titles all rest on force, fraud, or cunning. When Edward I. sent his commission to inquire into the existing judicial franchises in 1278 Earl Warenne flung a rusty sword on the table and cried: "This, sirs, is my warrant. By the sword our fathers won their lands when they came over with the conqueror, and by the sword we will keep them."—F. W. Garrison in Atlantic.

This Boy Had Fits For Six Years

Two best doctors gave him up
Wonderful Cure effected by Dr. Chases Nerve Food

This Letter Tells the Story

Mrs. J. D. Palmer, 38 Park Street, Amsterdam, N.Y., writes:—"When six years of age my boy began to have fits. They came on in the night. He would make strange noises, stiffen out, froth at mouth, face would twitch and sometimes turned purple. After the fit he could not talk.

"The family physician said all he could do was to keep them down somewhat. The second physician pronounced trouble Jeffersonian epilepsy, but could not cure him. He suffered for six years and before beginning the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had three fits in about five days. Our druggist recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He has taken seven boxes and has not had the symptom of a fit since beginning this treatment five months ago. His color has greatly improved; he is not nervous and irritable like he used to be, and we consider his cure a most remarkable one."

Makes Puny Children Strong and Robust

Epilepsy is a form of nervous exhaustion and disappears when the vigor of the nervous system is restored. Such symptoms as headache, dizziness, ringing in the ears, irritability of temper and specks before the eyes give warning of danger ahead. It may be paralysis, epilepsy, or some other form of nervous collapse. The warning tells you that such restorative treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is necessary to revitalize the feeble, wasted nerve cells, to fill the system with vigor and ward off dangerous disease.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so mild and gentle in action and at the same time so powerful in its reconstructive influence that it is admirably suited as a means of restoring pale, weak, nervous children to health and vigor. Such ailments as Rickets and St. Vitus' Dance are overcome and vitality is so increased that trouble from indigestion, headaches and weak eyes disappear.

This famed cure is a wonderful help during the growing period when physiological changes are taking place and when school work is particularly trying on the nervous system. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box; 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Write for free booklet on "The Nerves."

OUR FOOT AND YARD

STANDARD FIXED AFTER CENTURIES OF CONTENTION.

The Latest Official Measure Was Decided on In 1855, But Prior to That Time Confusion Reigned—Hercules' Foot Was Traditional Greek Standard—In One Case the Measure Went Over 28 Inches.

Foot rules and yardsticks are so common nowadays that not one person in a thousand ever stops to think of their origin. Yet the length of these common articles was settled upon only after centuries of correction and contention, and after thousand of years of unsuccessful effort to find an unchangeable unit in nature.

The foot has been used in many nations, both ancient and modern, that scientists believe it was meant to be the length of the human foot. The Greek foot, for instance, was supposed to be the length of the foot of the hero Hercules. However, Hercules was a very large man; so their unit was measured 12.14 of our inches. The Macedonians probably took their unit, according to our authority, Mr. Fred Telford, whom we quote, from the foot of some giant leader, for it was 14.68 inches in length. In the middle ages the foot in Geneva became 19.21 inches, and one foot has been discovered actually 23.23 of our inches in length. On the other hand, the foot was 9.72 inches in Phythia, and only 8.75 in Sicily.

The Germans, a few centuries ago, attempted to secure a better unit by taking the average of a number of feet. A surveyor of the sixteenth century prescribed this rule: "Stand at the door of a church on a Sunday, and bid sixteen men to stop, tall ones and small ones, as they happen to pass out when the service is finished; then make them put their left foot one behind the other, and the length thus obtained shall be the right and lawful rood to measure and survey the land with, and the sixteenth part of it shall be the right and lawful foot."

The foot thus selected, though undoubtedly capable of considerable variation, was less elastic than the inch of our early ancestors. It was provided by law in 1324 during the reign of Edward II., the inch should have length of "three barley corns, round and dry, laid end to end." Barley corns differ much in length, even if round and dry; therefore it must have been possible to vary the inch at will. Strangely enough, however, this old unit based on the barley corn persists to this day in some parts in the numbering of shoes. Number three shoes are a third of an inch—that is, one barley corn—larger than number two; and so with sizes.

Our yard represents another unsuccessful attempt to find a satisfactory unit in nature. In the twelfth century, Henry I. decreed that the yard should be the distance from the end of his nose to the end of his thumb; we are not certain, however, in what position he held his arm and head when the measurements were taken. He went so far as to have a metal bar of the proper length made; had then copies were prepared, stamped, and declared to be royal measures.

The earliest yardstick now in existence was prepared near the end of the fifteenth century in the reign of Henry VII. This stick, made of bronze, measured 35.975 of our modern inches in length, and was used as the English standard until 1588.

The new British standard of 1588, was called the Winchester yard. It was made of brass, and remained the legal standard until 1826. The bar is in existence to-day, and offers ample evidence of the truth of the report made by a commissioner who examined it in 1742: "A kitchen poker, filled at both ends, would make as good a standard. It has been broken, and repaired so clumsily that the joint is nearly as loose as that of a pair of tongs." Nevertheless the officials worried with it until 1826, for the simple reason that they could not agree upon a new standard.

The belief became common in the eighteenth century that such perishable things as the king's arm made unsuitable standards; but it was thought that a unit in nature might be found in the pendulum. Therefore a committee of Parliament, in 1760, caused John Bird to prepare a standard of measure based upon the seconds' pendulum. This standard, which measured 36.00002 of our inches, was not adopted for more than sixty years. Finally, in 1824, it was provided that Bird's yard should become the legal standard on the first day of January, 1825.

The British had not yet learned, however, that accurate standards are hard to make, and that, once made, they are worth careful attention. In the great London fire of 1834 the newly adopted standard was so badly damaged that it seemed worthless. Moreover, it soon disappeared completely, and was not found until 1891. No copies had been made, and we were again without an accurate measurement of the yard.

Bird had left directions for replacing the standard, if it should ever be lost, but different scientists following these directions produced sticks varying widely in length. Therefore a new standard was prepared, as nearly like the old as possible. In 1855, Parliament adopted the standard yard that remains to this day in England. It is provided that "The straight line or distance between the centres of the transverse lines in the two gold plugs in the bronze bar deposited in the office of the Exchequer shall be the genuine standard yard of 62 degrees F." Accurate copies were deposited in widely separate buildings.

At Portsmouth's Docks.

Portsmouth dockyard, where a serious fire has recently occurred, can boast of a good long history. For it was established as long ago as 1540, and even before then it was an important station for the King's ships. Portsmouth's convenience as a landing place was soon realized, for there in 1101 Robert, Duke of Normandy, landed to dispute the throne with Henry I., and later in the same century the Empress Maud chose it as the spot at which to begin operations. This is by no means the dockyard's first fire. In 1776, for instance, it was fired by one Jack the Painter, who, being captured, and sentenced to death, obligingly pointed out to the authorities several excellent fire-preventive ideas.

A PAGE OF THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

Costly Sentiment.

In a subway crowd not long ago a New York man was "touched" for his watch. The watch was not intrinsically valuable, but the New York man wanted it back for sentimental reasons, and inserted divers advertisements in the papers, offering $50 for the return of the watch and "no questions asked."

The "dip" who had "lifted" the watch saw the advertisements and concluded to take the $50. He called on the New York man, handed him the timepiece and demanded the reward.

The owner of the watch was only too happy to give it to him. After examining the watch, he returned it to his pocket and handed over five $10 bills. The "dip" pocketed the money and departed. There was little said.

A few minutes later the New York man reached for his watch.

But it was gone.—New York Tribune.

Unfortunate.

The New Yorker was descanting on the glories of Broadway.

"The streets are ablaze with light — a veritable riot," he said. "Why, there is one electric sign with 100,000 lights."

"Doesn't it make it rather conspicuous?" asked his English friend.

Woodwork.

"Samantha, what's that chune the orchestry's a-playin' now?"

"The program says it's Chopplit', Hiram."

"Waal — mebbe — but ter me it sounds a deal more like sawin'."

An Inventor of Noise.

It is strange to think that there are noise inventors, but, then, the truth is always strange.

The noise inventor's chief task is the invention of new noises for automobile horns. An automobile horn should act like a hammer blow on the head. It should make the foot passenger jump, as a smart hammer blow would do. It should make him look in a frenzy of terror to see whence the noise came, just as he would look to see who had hit him with the hammer. It should make him run like a rabbit out of the automobile's way, even as he would run out of the way of the hammer that had struck him.

The automobile horn does all these things, but it only does them so long as its sound is new and strange. Its long, siren-like wail no longer does them. Its horrible clank-clank, as of rusty iron scraping rusty iron, no longer does them. What does them now is a very powerful, very sudden honk-honk, as of a giant blowing a bass horn. But this new noise, like the others, will soon grow familiar, and once it is familiar its hammerlike quality will disappear.

So noise inventors study the squeal of pigs, the bray of donkeys and the cry of the seal. They visit boiler factories and sawmills in their search for ideas. They frequent slaughter houses.

And it is not enough for them to find a new noise — they must reproduce it in a horn. Theirs, indeed, is no easy task.

Scientists say that a good, efficient noise, such as the noise inventor turns out, not only seems to act like a hammer blow, but really does so. It exhausts the nerves and the brain. It is, indeed, the chief cause of the terrible modern malady of neurasthenia.

So the noise inventor, it seems, is not an unmixed blessing. Nevertheless, he is her to stay. For, without him, how can the speeding automobilist make the foot passenger blench, leap a foot in the air, and then scurry like the wind out of harm's way to the sidewalk?

Accommodating.

Muggins—Young Goldspoon has money to burn.

Guggins—That's why so many girls' mothers are trying to make a match for him, I suppose.

The Lover: "Thank you, me lady! She seems a nice quiet sort of girl; and I 'ave hevery 'ope she'll make me comfortable."

And on Easter Sunday, Too!

Our Rector—My dear Mrs. Fashion, I didn't see you at church last week.

Mrs. Fashion—Surely you must have seen me. I wore a soft brown velvet gown, the minaret tunic of which was weighed with fur, creamy chiffon vest, new baggy kimono sleeves with an outer seam, and a brown velvet hat with the natural paradise feathers shooting out from above; and I sat in the middle of the church.

Head of the class—Twins!

Handicapped.

"What's the matter? Don't I know how to cut meat?" demanded the discharged butcher.

"You do," replied the proprietor of the meat market. "But your hand does not weigh enough to retail it profitably."

Regretting the Cost.

Henry never knew stairs could be so frolicsome and alpine until that midnight. He had reached the turning point of his perilous journey, when his wife appeared, armed with the well known candle and poker.

"You're drunk, Henry!" she cried vindictively. "You're drunk!"

"Well, if I ain't," responded Henry demurely, "I've spent three dollars and sixty-five cents for nothing at all!"

And he wept.

An Improved Article.

Customs Inspector—Now, madam, are you sure that you have nothing that has been improved while you were abroad?

Tourist—No; only my health. I gained twelve pounds weight, I think.

Customs Inspector—Ah, I thought so! We shall refer that, madam, to the board of appraisers!

Strong Evidence.

"This girl is only a college flirt. How do you know that she really loves you?"

"She dyes her hair to conform with my class colors, dad. A fellow couldn't ask for any greater proof of devotion than that."

Mrs. Gramercy—Do you think she's bringing up her daughter right?

Mrs. Park—Indeed she is, my dear! She gave the little thing a stuffed bulldog to play with instead of a doll.

Rubbing It In.

"My dear," remarked Jones, who had just finished reading a book on "The Wonders of Nature," "this really is a remarkable work. Nature is marvelous! Stupendous! When I read a work like this, it makes me think how puerile, how insignificant is man."

"Huh!" sniffed his better half. "A woman doesn't have to wade thru four hundred pages to find out the same thing."

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.

"I don't know what would happen if I died suddenly."

"Well—I've got my black silk dress."

A Narrow Escape for the Child.

"Hold on!" cried the proud young father, as the minister was about to proceed. "Before the baby is christened, I want to change his name."

"What is the trouble?" the good man asked. "Ebenezer is a good name."

"No matter. We'll call him Harold. I've just heard that Uncle Ebenezer, the old fool! has married a woman who is young enough to be his daughter."

In Style by Accident.

He came home just before dinner and hung up his hat. She failed to meet him at the door, as was her custom, so he wandered out to the kitchen. At the door he halted, somewhat disconcerted.

"What's this, Isabel? Green hair?"

She was bending over the frying pan and didn't deign to notice him.

"And purple eyebrows!"

The slice of ham in the pan squirmed, and she stabbed it viciously.

"Why, Isabel?" he went on whimsically, "I didn't know you went in for these extreme fashions!"

She tossed back one rainbow lock and fixed him with a baleful eye.

"Look here, you!" she hissed. "I don't want any funny talk out of you! I'm all worn out dyeing Easter eggs!"—Wm. S. Adkins.

Too Bashful To Explain.

A bashful boy, accompanied by his father, took a load of hay to town for the new minister. Just as they reached the minister's gate, the load slipped off, burying the man beneath it. The boy hastened to the door to ask for help. When the minister answered his knock, he began to explain about the mishap; but the cordial preacher cut him short by insisting that he come in and share their dinner—the upset load of hay could be attended to afterward. Not knowing how to refuse, the boy accepted the invitation. After the meal, he pushed back his chair and looked at the minister appealingly.

"I—I guess I'll have to go and see about father now," he stammered.

"Why, where is your father?" inquired the surprised minister.

"He's out there under the hay," replied the boy.

THE RETORT OBVIOUS.

Clergyman: "Wilt thou take this woman for thy lawful wedded wife?"

Prospective Bridegroom: "Well, wot d'yer think I come 'ere for?"

Never Discharged.

"Maggie," said the inexperienced young thing to the cook, "the biscuits were a sight! If you can't do better next time, I will have to discharge you."

"Ye will, will ye? I'll have ye know, mum, that I've been workin' out for two years, an' I've worked for eighty-nine av the best families in town, an' I ain't ever bin discharged yet. I'm l'avin' this afthernoon for a better place."

"Did your mother try to keep you from marrying me?"

"Yes."

"Watch your step, mister," cautioned the conductor on one of the higher-up cars.

"It isn't necessary!" snapped the fuming passenger. "That bunch of sap-heads on the curb is doing it for me."

Hush!

"I have found it!" exclaimed the man, as he peered into the window of the corset shop.

"What?" asked his wife anxiously.

Two Ways.

"How have you headed in?" asked the fruit canvasser.

"Headed in?"

"Yes; headed in."

"How do you mean—possibly in? By a cap or a rope?"

Increased Anxiety.

"Don't you feel better since you quit smoking?"

"No. I'm bothered half to death trying to figure out what has become of all that money I used to pay for them."

The Human Banknote.

A poor girl married an aged millionaire.

"Oh, how could you do it?" a friend asked her. "Such an old fellow, too!"

"My dear," the young bride replied, "if you were starving and somebody gave you an enormous banknote—a banknote for a million—would you bother to look at the date?"

An Ironical Driver.

The stage-drivers in the famous Yellowstone Park are bothered considerably by the foolish questions asked by their passengers, and often resort to satirical answers. One day tourist who seemed deeply interested in hot springs inquired:

"Driver, do these springs freeze over in winter?"

"Oh, yes; a lady was skating here last winter and broke thru and got her foot scalded."

The New Criterion.

"The idea of my marrying Blank!" said a girl. "Why, I wouldn't know what to do with him. He doesn't know one of the new dance steps."

"He's a splendid swimmer," said her friend.

"Humph!" said the girl "do you think I want a husband that I've got to keep in an aquarium?"

The small boy's mother and aunt had just come in from the primaries.

"Remember, Sammy," said his aunt, "that when you were seven years old you saw your mother come in from voting for the first time."

He followed her into her room.

"Why didn't you vote before?" he demanded.

"Men wouldn't let women vote until now. Of course good men like your papa want all the business in the world managed right. They are going to let women help at last."

The small boy gave her a little push.

"Women aren't all there are," he said, and marched hautily out of the room.

He went to his father that evening, and as man to man asked:

"Didn't women used to vote?"

"No, but they are voting now."

"Why didn't they vote before? Wouldn't men let them?"

"No, I suppose not."

"Well—men—had—their—nerve," said the seven-year-old lad.

"Oh, dear, it's only Wednesday, and Sunday is four days off! I just feel as if I couldn't wait for Sunday to come!" The pastor overheard the little boy thus remarking, and felt delighted.

"That's well, my little man," he commended. "that's delightful. Now, suppose you come over here and tell us why you love Sunday so much."

"It's funny supplement day," the child innocently explained.

Gentle, But Cruel.

For a long time James and Maude had courted. Eventually the engagement was announced, and to the loving pair the future looked as beautiful as if it had received a new coat of paint.

But, alas! One evening there was a misunderstanding, and then came the bitter quarrel. With flashing eyes the proud beauty yanked off the £20 solitaire.

"Take your ring!" she dramatically cried. "I have decided that I can never be your wife! I shall expect you to return everything you have in your possession that belongs to me!"

"All I have is a lock of your hair and a photograph," sadly replied James. You will hardly care for the photo, but the lock of hair you will no doubt wish to preserve as a souvenir."

"As a souvenir of what, pray?" imperiously demanded the angry Maude.

"Of the time when you were a brunette," was the gentle rejoinder of James

They All Do.

An enthusiastic citizen, on the verge of a trip to Australia, was rejoicing over the fact and descanting on the pleasures to come.

"How delightful it will be," said he to his wife, "to tread the bounding billow and inhale the invigorating oxygen of the sea! The sea! The boundless sea! I long to see it! To breathe in great draughts of life-giving air. I shall want to stand every moment of the voyage on the prow of the steamer with my mouth open——"

"You probably will, dear," interrupted his wife encouragingly; "that's what all ocean travellers do."—London Opinion.

The Two Menu.

A Liberal millionaire was addressing, one night, a political meeting of working men.

"Vote for the Liberal candidate, our dear Lord Dacre!" he cried. "Conservatism, indeed! What have you working-men got to conserve? Why, nothing—absolutely nothing!"

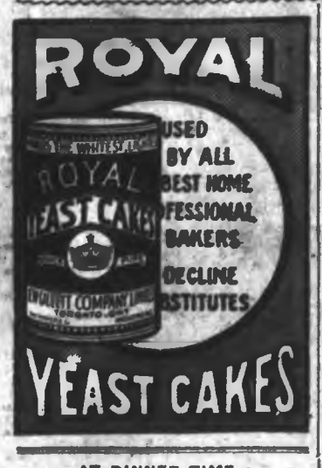
"Right you are, old sock!" roared a working man from the back of the hall. "And we ain't got nothing to be Liberal with, either!"

Sober Second Thought.

The Grouchy One: "Here's a volver I bought of you. I wish you'd take it back. I've changed my mind."

One of the Mourners: "Well, they gave O'Brien a fine funeral. Even a yeller-belly hound or pound dog for that'd hold head to say it."

A PAGE OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO EVERY WOMAN



AT DINNER TIME.

Thin silks, soft and clinging, are worn for dinner dresses made in the very latest fancies of the hour, with many drapings, full puffings below the waist and beads hung in drooping festoons wherever they can be placed. The rage for them is extraordinary.

This is the kind of vision that catches the eye at dinner time at any of the smart hotels—A slim figure draped in white charmeuse, which outlines the limbs and falls in small, pointed train at the back. The tunic, very sketchy indeed at the upper part, is a mass of beads, which fall in deep vandykes over the skirt. Sleeves are represented by two or three festoons of beads on either arm. The cloak worn over such a gown has nothing of the comfortable protectiveness associated with its name. Made of black net, it is embroidered in a large design in beads and bugles.

There is no lining and the sleeves are short; just enough of them, in fact, to keep the garment on the shoulders. The hotels have to be well warmed indeed to permit of such gowns as these. There is no warmth in beads.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER

Woman's weapon is tear drops.

Love and red noses can't be hid.

Dirty wives make drunken husbands.

Every woman who paints is not an artist.

He must have a long spoon who supe with the Devil.

Jealousy is the homage that interjority pays to merit.

To rule a woman wisely, requires as much wisdom as to govern a State.

Nearly every man is willing to do his duty, if you can only make him see it.

"He, who loves not wise, women or song
Remains a fool his whole life long.

Some one said there is no hope for a baldheaded man. Should he not have used the word 'dope' instead of hope?

You can't expect a man to be a hero when his liver is out of order, and no sentiment can be expected from an empty stomach.

Don't envy wicked people. They may flourish for a while, but in the long run he who sets all knaves at work will make them pay.

Before blacking the stove, rub soapsuds on the hands, allowing the soap to dry in. When washing the hands after the work is done the blacking and soap come off together easily, leaving no stain on the hands.

On sweeping the carpets, take an old round tin, pierce holes in the bottom, and fill with common salt. Sprinkle this over the carpet. It prevents the dust from rising, brightens the colours, and prevents moths.

If your furniture has grown streaked and dull, try rubbing it with flannel dipped in equal parts of turpentine and coal oil. It polishes quickly and much more cheaply than the expensive polishes.

When paring any kind of fresh fruit, if the hands are washed off immediately with cold water instead of being washed in warm water and soap, there will be very little danger of unsightly stains.

Every woman who cuts out from a paper pattern knows of the bother of pinning it flat to the cloth. Take a hot iron and smooth the tissue paper pattern over the cloth, and it will remain flat without pins.

To clean a mackintosh or dark cloths from mud stains, brush off all the mud and rub all stains with the cut surface of a raw potato, then sponge with clear water, using a piece of dark material for sponging.

When cooking cabbage, or any other similar vegetable, put a piece of dry bread—crust will do—in the pan with boiling water. The bread kills the disagreeable odour which rises from the cabbage, and it will entirely prevent the smell from going through the house.

Glass bottles which have contained oil are very difficult to clean; but if they are required for any purpose try the following: Fill the bottle with ashes and place it in cold water, which heat gradually till it boils. Let it boil half an hour, then let the bottle remain in the water till cold. Wash in soapsuds and rinse in clear water.

REMOVING STAINS

To get the linseed oil and paint stain out of your linen dress try the following: First the paint must be removed and forthis use turpentine or gasoline. Then wash the oil out with cold water and ivory soap. It may take the colour out, but that will be preferable to the dark stain.

Few women appreciate the value of Javelle water. It is inexpensive and easily made and a bottle of it should always be kept where it will be handy in case of emergency. The ingredients necessary to make the water are a half-pound of washing soda, quarter-pound chloride of lime, a half quart boiling water and a quart of cold water. Put the soda into an agate pan and add the boiling water. Dissolve the lime in the cold water. Let the mixture settle and pour the clear liquid into the dissolved soda. Bottle and keep in a dark place.

Javelle water is a good bleach for unbleached fabrics, as well as for the cotton goods that have become yellow with age. To remove stains from white goods, soak the articles in equal quantities of Javelle water and hot water until the stains have disappeared. Then rinse thoroughly in several waters, and finally in dilute ammonia water. The ammonia will destroy the odor of the chloride of lime, which is rather disagreeable. Javelle water removes all colour and therefore should not be used on coloured materials.

A word about washing chamois gloves. There is no economy in buying a cheap quality in these gloves, but if a good quality is purchased and care used in washing they will always look well and last far longer than the kid gloves. They should be washed in lukewarm water and ivory soap ands. There will be no danger of them shrinking if washed on the hands. A soft nail brush will help in cleaning the finger tips and seams. Rinse in water to which little soap has been added to prevent them from becoming stiff. Take from the hands, put in a Turkish towel and press well. Pull them into a shape and hang up to dry. Rubbing them while drying will make them soft and give them a new look.

A HINT TO THE LADIES

Don't rely on the old waist pattern to make a new blouse of soft silk, net or lace, which will accompany the spring tailored suit. No matter how tried and true that pattern is, and how satisfactorily it fits, it is out of style this season. Put it away until small armholes come in again, and use a new pattern with no armholes at all, and the soft blouse effect around the waistline, which is now the mode. If it is of silk, cord the seams that separate the yoke-sleeve from the full body of the blouse. If it is of lace or net and must be lined, cut the lining by the same pattern and allow the two sheer fabrics to fall softly together in the same folds.

White net is peculiarly lovely in company with pearls, and a string of pearl beads, even if the frankest imitation of genuine pearls, will give charm to a V-necked blouse of white net. A pretty blouse, noted in a shop window the other day, was of white net, over flesh pink chiffon. There was a little collar of the net edged with a net frill, and under the collar passed a silk cord, which was tied at the front of the blouse in a loose knot. On the ends of the cord were big pearl heads, three on each end, and pearl buttons of the same size ornamented the blouse.

NEEDLES AND PINS.

"When will you marry me, my bonnie maid?"
"Can we not wait?" said she—
"You know that I love you, but, dear, I'm afraid
You soon will get weary of me."
Then he vowed and swore to love and adore,
He prayed on his bended knee.
He said with a sigh, "If I wait I shall die!"
He was a man, you see.
Sugar and cream, sugar and cream,
When we are married 'twill be a sweet dream!

But the sugar and cream they passed like a dream,
Alas! they could never agree.
She said, "Let us part, you've broken my heart!"
"I think it is best," said he.
She was a woman, you see.
Needles and pins! Needles and pins!
When a man's married his trouble begins!

Five minutes, precisely, five minutes had passed,
She opened the door with a sigh.
"Since we have settled to part," she said—
"I wanted to say good-bye!"
"We never shall meet any more," she wept—
"Alone we must live and die."
Then he opened his arms and into them she crept,
And that's how they said good-bie.
Let the bells ring! Let the bells ring!
Man without woman is but a poor thing!

PERRIN'S

FADS IN WAISTCOATS

Every woman of fashion has a menagerie writing table. Probably her mascot plays the most decorative part among the animals that compose her set, but her choice is by no means limited to this one creature of the lower species. The white elephant brings luck to the Parisienne in whatever form he appears, so now he disports himself as a Sevres inkstand. An owl is certain to repose near him in the form of a letter weight made of dark crystal. A sealing wax set is sure to be a series of dogs, from the slender Russian boar hound to the veriest impudent pug, and all out of carved ivory.

Malachite, rose quartz, Chinese jade and even precious stones are turned into the various little items without which no outfit is complete, for the modern woman requires a number of trifles, such as clips for letters, notes, telephone numbers, accounts and engagement lists, and on each and every one an animal appears. An address book may have a serpent in enamel coiled round it, and letters to be answered are often placed within the claws of a crystal tortoise, probably on the assumption that he is slower to move, even than is the woman who answers the letters. Panthers, leopards, tigers and the white fox ornament stamp boxes, letter weights and other trifles, and no really up-to-date woman cares to use a blotter on an engagement tablet that is not bound in crocodile and decorated by some animal.

IMPURE BLOOD IN THE SPRING

The Passing of Winter Leaves People Weak and Depressed

As winter passes away it leaves many people feeling weak, depressed and easily tired. The body lacks that vital force and energy which pure blood alone can give.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all-year-round blood builder and nerve tonic, but they are especially useful in the spring. Every dose helps to make new, rich, red blood. Returning strength commences with their use and the vigour and cheerfulness of good health quickly follows.

There is just one cure for lack of blood and that is more blood. Food is the material from which blood is made, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills double the value of the food we eat. They give strength, tone up the stomach and weak digestion, clear the complexion of pimples, eruptions and boils, and drive out rheumatic poisons.

If you are pale and sallow, if you feel continually tired out, breathless after slight exertion, if you have headaches or backaches, if your joints ache, if your appetite fails and food does not nourish nor sleep refresh you, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will make you well and strong. To build up the blood is the special purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and that is why they are the best spring medicine. If you feel the need of a tonic at this season give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial and you will rejoice in new health, new strength and new energy. Do not let the trying weather of summer find you weak and ailing. Build yourself up now with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—the pills that strengthen.

Ask for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and do not be persuaded to take something else. If your dealer does not keep these Pills they will be sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHOICE RECIPES

Kennet Rare Bit.

One teacupful fine bread crumbs stirred (not boiled) in half a pint of hot milk; season with salt and a little cayenne pepper. Let this cool. Line a well buttered, shallow dish with slices of cheese, not quite a quarter of an inch thick. Pour in milk and bread crumbs, and cover well with the very thin slices of cheese. Bake a nice brown. If liked, a little mustard and butter can be used in the seasoning. Serve hot in the dish in which it was baked.

A Neck Bleach.

The following bleach is very effective: One ounce strained honey, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, six drops of oil of bitter almonds, whites of two eggs, enough fine oatmeal to make a fine paste. Spread this thickly on a piece of cotton cloth, three inches in width, and tie bandage around the throat. Four or five of these applications should bleach the neck to a satin whitness. Remember this is not a face bleach, and that oil of bitter almonds is a poison and must not be swallowed or left in the reach of children.

Medel Salad.

Chop one can pimentoes, one onion, one bunch of celery and four sour pickles. Slice six hard boiled eggs. Stir together, using a fork, and add mayonnaise dressing.

A Pillow Hint.

To make a sofa pillow that will be almost as fluffy as though stuffed with goose feathers, use cotton that has been torn in bits, and thoroughly heated in an oven. It will not pack or get hard if it has been heated enough.

Economical Mothers.

Nice cuff links for boys may be made out of four pretty buttons. Sew a bit of fine but strong cord to two buttons, then work over the cord with a silk to match the buttons. In this way, your small son may have a pair of links to match each shirt-waist he wears.

Use for Old Stockings.

Old stockings may be put to many uses about the household. Cut the foot off, fold the top to the bottom, fold again, sew each end on the machine, sew on a piece of tape for hanger. There! you have the finest kind of holder. Use old stockings to put in the mop stick; also for cleaning the stove.

Onions Stuffed With Sausage.

This is an excellent dish, which may be used for company. Take the mild Spanish or Bermuda onion, a half dozen or more, peel and parboil until tender enough to scoop out a centre; chop the part taken out and mix with well seasoned sausage and fill the centre. Make a sauce of chicken stock, if you have it; if not use butter and water. Put the onions into a baking dish and bake, basting occasionally until thoroughly tender. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and when they are brown serve from the baking dish.

JELLIED VEAL SALAD.

Put on a veal shank, with onion, celery, salt and plenty of water, boil until meat falls from the bones. Take out meat, strain the broth. Put one-quarter hard boiled eggs in each muffin tin, then cut in small pieces of veal until full. Take one pint of broth, bring to boiling point, add a pinch of black pepper, a dash of nutmeg and one-half package dissolved gelatine; pour over meat, set away in a cold place for two hours to harden. Remove from tin, serve on lettuce with dressing.

TWO GOOD PUDDING SAUCES.

Royal Sauce—To one quart of sweet cream add two parts of boiling water; sweeten well and flavour with powdered mace. This is a delicious sauce to serve with rice puddings, apple dumplings, etc.

Brown Sauce — One-half teacupful of brown sugar mixed with one-fourth of a cupful of butter; add a pint of hot water, a little vinegar, and as desired. Thicken with one tabespoonful of flour moistened with a little milk and boil. This sauce should be served hot.

HOW TO MAKE SALT BEADS.

One cup fine table salt, onehalf cup cornstarch, one-half cup water. Heat salt very hot. Mix cornstarch and water and to this add colouring matter, which may be any simple dye; or, black in for black beads; red ink for a salmon pink.

Now add the hot salt, which will form a soft paste or dough. Knead this dough thoroughly, then break off small bits and form into beads, which after being allowed to dry a few moments, should be strung on a hatpin or wire and left to dry thoroughly, which will take two or three days.

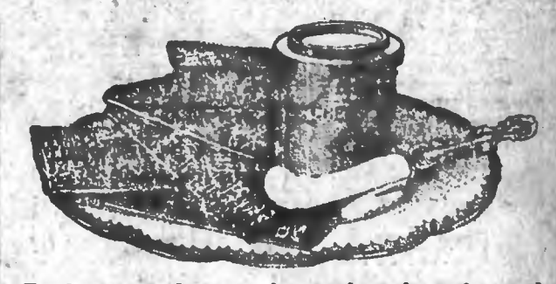
A rose pink, strung with tiny gilt or silver metal beads between the pink ones, makes a very becoming necklace; also pure white, with gilt.

In case the dough is not all made up at once, wrap in a damp cloth, when it will keep indefinitely.

TAR STAINS.

There is nothing that acts more satisfactorily on a tar stain than turpentine, says the Newark News. First, make a ring of cornstarch around the spot so that the essence will not spread.

Try Triscuit To-day



Food science has taught us that there is much body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain which we do not get in white flour. The only question is how to make the whole wheat grain digestible. That problem has been solved in the making of

TRISCUIT

The Shredded Whole Wheat Wafer

It is the whole wheat, steam-cooked, shredded, compressed into a wafer and baked—the maximum of nutriment in smallest bulk. Many people prefer it to ordinary bread toast. Heated in the oven to restore its crispness, it is delicious for luncheon, or for any meal, with butter, potted cheese or marmalades.

Cleaning Laces.

Very fine lace, when slightly soiled, can be beautifully cleaned in a preparation of block magnesia in which a small quantity of dry blueing has been sifted. Scrape the magnesia from the block, use dry blueing, if obtainable, then coat the lace on both sides with the substance. Wrap it in several thicknesses of a folded towel and beat the towel lightly from end to end, side to side, and repeat until the lace is free from all dust.

This is an exceptionally successful method of cleaning Irish crochet and silk laces. When too badly soiled make a preparation of equal parts of gasoline and chloroform, containing a few drops of ammonia, and mix in this sufficient cornstarch to make a soft paste. Apply this to the lace, allow the cornstarch to dry thoroughly, then shake the lace free from dust. Very delicate lace yokes containing silver and gold threads, tinsel or jewels can be cleaned without injury in this manner.

NEWTON THEORY DOUBTFUL.

Lecturer's New Idea of the Earth's Rotation

Mr. Joseph L. Garvin, B.A., Inspector of Public Schools, Barrie, Ont., read a remarkable paper before the Toronto Branch of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

Mr. Garvin challenged the truth of the Newtonian Theory of Gravitation, viz: "Every particle with a force that varies directly as the product of the masses and inversely as the square of the distance between them."

Mr. Garvin gave considerable data in support of his theory that a heavenly body rotates on its axis through its own inherent gravity, and that the rotation lessens as its heat radiates from the surface. Hence if this theory be true, a body that has lost all its heat has lost all its gravity, and no longer rotates, and he contends that our moon and the planet Mercury supply confirmation of this.

It follows also that a heavenly body that has lost its gravity will begin to disintegrate, and all loose particles at once be drawn to the parent body by the gravity or attraction of the latter. In the case of the moon, he said, its air and ice, soil and boulders, long since struck the earth with mighty force and caused the glacial period; and as the moon goes on disintegrating the particles come to earth as meteors and dust.

Mr. Garvin firmly believes in the Nebular Hypothesis, and contends that every planet was originally a comet, and that every comet in our planetary system will ultimately become a planet with attendant moon or moons.

TRAIN WAS DELAYED

Took Seven Years to Travel Seventy-one Miles

The opening of a new railway in America recalls one of the most remarkable journeys on record. A train set out from Beaumont, Texas, for Port Bolivar, a distance of 71 miles. It started at half-past eleven on the morning of September 8, 1900, and arrived seven years afterwards.

All went well for the first 33 miles, but then, at a point called High Island, it was surrounded by water from the Gulf of Mexico, which had broken 38 miles inland and flooded the railway. The train could not go forward, and it could not return. The passengers after hours of terror, made their escape through the mud, and the train was left high and dry upon the prairie.

All the line, except that upon which the engine and carriages stood, was washed away, and the scene of ruin lasted for years. At last the line was remade and linked up with the little piece remaining. The rusty locomotive was fired up, and amid cheers finally moved off, creaky and uneasy in her joints but still serviceable.

A crowd collected at Port Bolivar to welcome her, and among those present were several of the passengers who had begun the journey seven years before.

Protect the Birds

In the United States, where they have kept careful statistics, it is estimated that $800,000,000 has been lost by the farmers owing to the birds not being protected. Many native birds are now extinct. These would have cleaned the trees of the gypsy and brown-tailed moth, thus saving millions to the country. The Winter birds will eat the larvæ of these, so shelter should be provided for them in our parks. "We are told there are 10,000,000 varieties of insects, most of these being destructive ones, so it would take many birds to destroy such pests. If we protect the birds we are protecting our trees, and by this means our watercourses are protected.

Reformatory Gardens

Boys sent to school reformatories in Great Britain are now taught the science of gardening. Each boy is given a small plot of his own to cultivate, where he raises plums, gooseberries, rhubarb and other fruits and vegetables. The farming area of 100 acres is divided among 100 boys, and in their zealous competition for the best results they raise fragments of glass above the tender seedlings, and give the growing plants their unremitting care. Eventually at the expiration of their sentences these boys go out into the world equipped for a useful career and find their services in demand. The result is that in 90 per cent. of the cases it is possible to record success in finding and retaining steady occupation.

Walking on the Water

The latest of the numerous attempts to construct water shoes for walking on the water is credited to a German cabinet maker. He has experimented on Lake Ammer, in Bavaria, and has walked across the lake—about two miles—in two hours.

The propelling device is a series of three paddles mounted on hinges, on the side of each shoe.

A sliding mechanism causes these paddles to give a forward motion, like that of skating, as the foot is moved, an upright stick on each shoe steadying the walker.

JUDGE POWELL

The Glass Bottomed Bucket

In spite of the march of civilization there remains much that is still primitive in Sicily, and a curious sight at Palermo is to see the fishermen spear the fish in the harbor by the aid of glass bottomed buckets. There are many corners of the world where fish are speared, but perhaps the use of the glass bottomed bucket in this connection is to be seen only at Palermo. The fishermen lean far over the side of their boats and hold the bucket on the water with one hand, poking their heads into it as if engaged in the Hallowe'en game of duckling for apples. They hold a spear poised in the free hand and thus await the arrival of their victims, which are sighted through the glass bottom of the bucket which acts as a kind of telescope.

THE "SKY BUS"

Aeroplane Which May Compete With Motor Cars

Sikorsky is the very fitting name of the Russian aviator who has invented and developed the sky bus. In a flight recently she carried up sixteen passengers in an aeroplane, wings of which have a spread of 121 feet. The machine itself weighed 7,500 pounds, and the passengers 2,300 pounds, so that the propellors of the huge biplane had to drive forward a total weight of almost five tons. The engines which supplied the driving force were of 400 horsepower, the largest yet installed in an aeroplane.

In his arrangements for passengers Sikorsky has gone far ahead of anything before attempted in a heavier-than-air machine. The car is entirely covered in. The bow contains a small pilot cabin. Next comes the passengers' saloon, with seats for fifteen persons. Behind this is a small sleeping compartment and a lavatory. The entire suite is lighted and heated electrically by the exhaust from the engines. All the machinery of the craft is controlled from the pilot's cabin, and the four motors can be operated individually, in pairs, or all together.

Aviators say that Sikorsky has shown the aerial passenger craft to be quite practicable. When Mr. Wright makes public the details of his "stabilizer," to prevent aeroplanes from capsizing in high and tricky winds, the sky bus may become a real competitor of the motor bus.

Driver's Lost Nerve

An engine-driver named Ernest Charles Smith, who resigned because the nervous strain was too great, stood on the rails at Ramsgate, it was stated at the inquest, and dived beneath an approaching train. The man who was only forty-six years old, had complained that he could do no work and suffered from loss of memory. The verdict was "Suicide while temporarily insane."

Have You a Cold? Try FOSSAL BALM!

There is nothing slow or roundabout in the way Fossal Balm gets after a cold in the head, nasal catarrh or irritation in the nasal passages.

The action of its antiseptic, healing ingredients is made more certain and effective by the handy way of applying it. The collapsible tube containing the Fossal Balm ends in a Bird's nozzle about half an inch long, which fits into the nostrils and applies the ointment well up in the passages.

Here it works almost like magic, killing the disease germs, checking the inflammation, relieving that burning irritation, clearing the passages for easy breathing, and restoring normal, healthy conditions.

Use Fossal Balm at the first sign of a cold in the head—it will not only save you from all the miserable discomfort of it, but in doing so will protect you from the more serious diseases which follow neglected colds. An East Indian babu railway agent telegraphed to his superintendent this report: "A blackguard indigenous mendicant arrived at my station by 2 down mail. Taking pity on his commiserated condition, I permitted him to reside in the shade of the main signal post. In gratitude for my benefacent conduct he absconded during the nocturnal period with 500lbs. of my private cash, including one copy of the working time table." When asked why he added the one annexation, the time table, to his list of losses he replied with a knowing wriggle: "Ha, ha! The matter is explainable in a nutshell. Unless I had included a little of the company's property the police would have taken no notice. This justifies the addition of the lactaceous particle in the shell of the cocoanut!"—Exchange.

Seals and Music.

A picturesque instance of the curiosity of the seal, or possibly of its fondness for music, is told by the Rev. Mr. Dunbar in Macgillivray's work on British quadrupeds.

"During a residence of some years in one of the Hebrides I had many opportunities to witness this peculiarity. As I walked along the shore in the calm of a summer afternoon a few notes from my flute would bring half a score of them within a few yards of me, and then they would swim about with their heads above water, like so many black dogs, evidently delighted with the sounds. For half an hour or, indeed, for any length of time I chose, I could fix them to the spot, and when I moved along the shore they would follow me like the dolphins which [illegible]."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

HOW A PLOT MISCARRIED

Lord Ernest sat in a big easy chair and stared into the fire. He was alone in his chambers, and it was 9 o'clock on a mild February evening. His legs were resting on the seat of a second chair, and by his right hand was a little table, on which stood a decanter of whisky, a syphon, and a glass.

There was only one light in the room—a tall lamp just behind his chair, so arranged that the light fell on his book. Consequently, his face was more or less in the shadow; but as his chair was nearly parallel to the fire, the flares, which from time to time leaped up, showed his handsome features and immaculate evening dress—dinner jacket and black tie—quite clearly enough for an onlooker to recognize him as a society man.

After gazing abstractedly into the fire for some minutes, Lord Ernest took up the novel again and began to read. He had turned over two pages when he heard the door of his room open behind the thick curtains that screened the entrance.

"Who the deuce is that?" he muttered to himself. "I told Jenkins I should not want him until twelve o'clock."

A second click proclaimed the fact that the door had been shut—and Lord Ernest turned his head in the direction of the sound. As he did so, the dark green curtains were parted, and a man stepped into the room.

"Good evening, Lord Ernest," he said in a cool, clear voice.

"Good evening," replied Lord Ernest, composedly. "Who the deuce are you?"

"I fear I owe you an apology," said the stranger, speaking in a well-bred and rather drawling voice. "I see I am disturbing you. I expected to find you already in costume. Surely it is rather late?"

"I don't quite understand you," said Lord Ernest. "Late for what?"

"For the Goldheims' dance," replied the stranger. "These Stuart costumes are elaborate. Had you not thought of dressing?"

Lord Ernest frowned slightly.

"You said that you owed me an apology just now," he said, speaking somewhat haughtily. "I think an explanation should come first, though I have no doubt an apology will be necessary afterward."

The stranger smiled.

"The explanation is ready," he said; "we will consider the question of apology later."

As he spoke he threw off the long, heavy coat that he was wearing and displayed to Lord Ernest's astonished gaze a charming court costume of the Stuart period. As he stood with the lamplight falling on him, Lord Ernest noticed, as he could scarcely fail to do, the wonderful likeness of the stranger to himself. Hair, eyes, nose and chin were all a match for his own. The figure, too, was, as far as he could judge, almost exactly like his own; though Lord Ernest fancied that the stranger lacked perhaps an inch of his own six feet. However, he carried himself well, and the likeness was undoubtedly wonderful. Lord Ernest was not slow in perception, and it was not difficult for him to guess that the stranger intended to turn to good (or bad) account this likeness, for it could hardly have been accidental. He showed no perturbation, however. With his usual nonchalance he lay back and gazed at the stranger. The latter also appeared to be quite at home. His movements, however, were such as to confirm any suspicion that his appearance might have aroused in Lord Ernest's mind. From his great coat pocket he drew with great deliberation a small revolver and a small bottle. Then he flung his coat upon a chair and turned to Lord Ernest, who watched his proceedings with great interest, but with not the slightest trace of alarm.

Finally the stranger drew up a chair, on the opposite side of the fire, and leaning forward, with the revolver in his right hand, remarked:

"I must first ask you, Lord Ernest, not to make a noise. There is no one in your rooms, I know, and you would have some difficulty in making yourself heard. This little toy is loaded—and this bottle full of chloroform, and I have no doubt that with a bullet in your shoulder—I assure you I am a good shot—you would be unable to prevent me from administering a small dose on a handkerchief. I should deplore the necessity of such violence—and the matter really rests in your hands."

Lord Ernest smiled.

"I assure you," he replied, "I am too much interested to make any attempt to curtail this novel experience."

"Thank you," said the stranger, "then here goes for the explanation. The Goldheims are giving a dance to-night—fancy dress."

"They are?"

"You intended to go as a courtier—Charles II. period."

"I did."

"The costume you were to wear was very like this?"

"I thought you had got mine on. You surely were not too shy to borrow mine without asking permission—and my bedroom door is unlocked."

"Ah, no, Lord Ernest; but I expected—as I said before—to find you already dressed. I had no wish to put you to the inconvenience of undressing. Besides, had I used my little toy here your suit might have been—er—disarranged. This is a copy only. But I take it as a compliment that you can discern no difference."

Lord Ernest smiled again.

"Hang it all," he said, "how did you know what I was going in"

"I happened to be in Denham's when you ordered your suit, Lord Ernest. Not quite by accident, of course. Such things are arranged by—shall we say Providence? But to proceed. You would have danced with Miss Goldheim, of course?"

Lord Ernest nodded.

"You would have sat out with her after the dance?"

Lord Ernest raised his eyebrows slightly.

"You would have possibly proposed marriage to her?"

Lord Ernest sat up in his chair, without, however, removing his legs from their resting-place. For a second he frowned, then he lay back with a smile.

"I'm hanged if I know," he said; "but you are singularly well informed."

"You have arranged to wear a certain kind of mask, in order to—er—facilitate recognition?" he said.

"Well, I'm d——d," said Lord Ernest; and the stranger knew his question was answered.

He leaned a little forward, and his hand shut a little more tightly on the revolver.

"I want to borrow that mask," he said softly.

"Ah, that's what you're after," said Lord Ernest. "I have been wondering why you troubled about coming here at all; your arrangements seem complete enough. It was the mask you wanted?"

"That," said the stranger, "and also an assurance that you would not be there. Two Lord Ernests would have been—well, embarrassing, to say the least of it."

"Quite so," replied Lord Ernest.

"I appreciate your desire to spare me any possible trouble," the stranger smiled. "And the mask" he added.

"Is on the sofa there," answered Lord Ernest. "May I ask how you have arranged that I shall not appear? I am quite confident you have done so."

"I have," said the stranger. "I am willing to take your word of honour that you will remain in this room for at least two hours, and will do nothing in that time to alarm your neighbours or arouse suspicions."

"And if I refuse!" said Lord Ernest blandly.

"Then," said the stranger, with a perceptible tightening of his lips, "I shall be forced to chloroform you and tie you up. If you struggle I shall not hesitate to shoot you—in the shoulder. I assure you that nothing can be heard of a revolver shot more than 12 yards from this room, and there is no one else on this floor of the building. Also, I have given a great deal of time to this job, and I shall carry it out—whether you give me your word or not. I shall be sorry if I have to shoot you," he added, and fingered the revolver suggestively.

"And that is?"

"That you give me an outline of your—er—programme to-night."

"Why, with pleasure. It is very simple now. All the hard work is done. I shall go to the Goldheims. I shall secure an early dance with Miss Goldheim, and suggest that we sit it out. Miss Goldheim and her parents are here, I believe, confidently expecting a proposal of marriage from Lord Ernest Sinclair. It would—if I may say so—be an excellent match in every way. I shall suggest as private a place as possible for sitting out, and Miss Goldheim, in not unnatural anticipation of a charming tete-a-tete, will readily fall in with my suggestion, and will lead the way to her boudoir or some other suitable secluded spot. I shake a few drops—a few only—of chloroform on to my handkerchief; Miss Goldheim ceases to exist temporarily. I remove the famous diamond necklace and walk out quietly with it in my pocket. Simple, isn't it?"

"Very simple," said Lord Ernest. "Then till half-past eleven I am dumb—but I shall give you no longer."

"It is enough, thanks," replied the stranger. "Many thanks for the mask—I will have it back by to-morrow."

As he spoke he was putting on his coat; he picked up the mask and drew the curtain from the door. "Good evening," he added. "I will now make you the promised apology."

The door clicked—and Lord Ernest was alone.

"Ah," he said to himself. "It's lucky I didn't have to stand up, or he would have seen that my ankle was sprained. It's lucky, after all, that I sprained it skating with Ida Goldheim at Prince's this morning, and that she knows I can't possibly come to the dance. But it's very unlucky for my entertaining friend, the necklace snatcher. I'm afraid there will be ructions for him." And he took up his novel and began reading again.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

FROM SOUTHERN CROSS?

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 11.—Seal pelts thought to have come from the missing sealing steamer Southern Cross were sighted yesterday, seventy miles south of St. Mary's Bay by the steamer Kyle, which has been searching the coast for a week. This is the first definite clew to the fate of the vessel, which was last reported off the southern coast on March 31.

The pelts are skins which have been roughly removed and to which considerable fat usually adheres, causing them to float readily. It is believed that they either were washed from the decks of the sealer or floated to the surface after she went down. None of the sealing fleet which came in last week from the St. Lawrence grounds, where the Southern Cross had been seal hunting, lost any pelts off the southern coast in the vicinity of St. Mary's Bay.

The Kyle reported by wireless that she would continue the search though the weather was foggy.

TO CHECK POLLUTION.

Big Problem Faces International Joint Commission.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—With the extent of pollution in the international waters along the boundary between the United States and Canada established, the international joint commission has undertaken to find and apply a remedy.

Chairman Tawney said yesterday that at the conference just concluded here the commission decided first to employ leading sanitary engineers to study the problem, then to give them a hearing, which will be about the middle of May. After that hearings will be held in the various cities and towns affected. Buffalo and Detroit, as the two largest, being the first to be visited by the commission.

The commission will meet again at Sault Ste. Marie May 4 to investigate the water power project which American and Canadian concerns desire to build at that point and which will affect the level of Lake Superior.

JAP BOY SLAYS WOMAN.

After Murdering Mistress He Kills Himself In the Cellar.

STOCKTON, Cal., April 11.—Mrs. Ellis R. Harbert, wife of a prominent physician and surgeon of this city, was shot and killed by a Japanese servant while she was in one of the upper bedrooms of her palatial home in the suburbs.

After killing Mrs. Harbert, the slayer locked the door to the room and busied himself gathering up silverware and other valuables. The crime was not discovered until night, when Dr. Harbert returned home. Finding no one about the living rooms, he made a search of the house, only to find his wife's body, still and cold, stretched upon the bedroom floor.

The servant later took refuge in the basement of the house, where he killed himself as he was about to be taken.

Paralyzed Woman Nearly Perishes.

WINDSOR, Ont., April 11.—A fire which broke out in the grocery store of James Barker, on Howard avenue, yesterday, completely destroyed the building and almost resulted in the death of Mrs. Barker, who is a paralytic. She was carried to safety just as the flames reached the room in which she was lying helpless in bed. The conflagration resulted from the throwing of a match near a gasoline tank at the rear of the store by Mr. Barker, who had been attempting to thaw out a frozen water pipe.

THERE IS HAIR BEAUTY AND LUXURIANCE IN EVERY BOTTLE OF HERPICIDE

Did you ever have a dealer offer you a large bottle of something and tell you it was a better remedy for the hair than Newbro's Herpicide and cheaper because in a larger bottle?

What? Certainly we know you had. Many other people have, too.

What would you say to that same dealer were he to tell you a silver dollar was worth more than a five-dollar gold piece because it is large.

Such an attempt being a reflection upon your good sense you would probably say some rather pointed things to him. You would be justified. Your self-respect would demand it.

Well, there are just as many good reasons for the difference in size between those bottles as there are for the difference in size between the silver dollar and the five dollar gold piece.

The truth is that the large bottle isn't half large enough.

There is more virtue in a half pint of Newbro's Herpicide than in a gallon of some of the so-called hair preparations.

There is a dollar's worth of results in the bottle of Herpicide, but do you know what is in the other?

No? Then why buy it? Your judgment, intelligence and the experience of your friends, if not your own, cry out against it.

You know when you go into that store that Herpicide is what you need and want.

You KNOW that Herpicide eradicates dandruff.

You KNOW that Herpicide stops falling hair.

You KNOW that Herpicide makes the hair light, fluffy and beautiful.

You know these things in the same way that you know that the five dollar gold piece, notwithstanding its size, is more valuable than the silver dollar.

Then insist on having genuine Herpicide.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Send 10c in postage or silver for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co., Dept. E., Detroit, Mich.

MAN ROBBER SENTENCED.

Wealthy Newark Man Specialized In Women's Jewelry.

NEW YORK, April 11.—Edward Mendel, a millionaire Jekyll-Hyde, who was a respected iron and steel merchant in Newark by day and a thug in New York by night, was yesterday sentenced to spend the next eighteen years of his life in Sing Sing prison. Mendel, who in Newark was a member of many fraternal orders and clubs, lured Mrs. Pauline Kosel to an upper west side freight yard in New York and there tore her diamond earrings from her ears. He was captured as he was running from the yard.

In court later three other women identified him as the thug who had similarly assaulted and robbed them. Many letters and petitions from Newark clubs and associations came to the judge who sentenced Mendel. All these insisted some mistake had been made.

KILLED BY STREET CAR.

Toronto Woman Falls From Seat Behind Motor-cyclist.

TORONTO, April 11.—While riding on the rear of a motor-cycle driven by William Thompson, 96 1-2 Markham street, Mrs. Emma Bois, aged 19, of 99 Markham street, fell or jumped off the machine at the corner of Markham and Arthur streets at seven o'clock last evening was killed instantly by eastbound Dundas car, No. 2,000, driven by Motorman William Goodenough of 107 Laughton avenue. Both Goodenough and Thompson were arrested by the police of No. 3 division after the accident, and are being held on charges of criminal negligence. The accident occurred while the motor-cycle was going south on Markham street, when at the corner of Arthur it was almost struck by the eastbound Dundas car.

The woman's body was dragged 160 feet beneath the car trucks before Motorman Goodenough brought his car to a stop.

One eye-witness to the accident gave his opinion to the police that the girl purposely fell off the machine, which she believed was about to be struck by the car. He said he thought he saw her push herself off the back seat, and prepare for the fall on the roadway. Instead of toppling backwards, however, she fell forward, directly across the north rail of the south track, and the next instant was lost to view beneath the car.

The dead woman was formerly a Miss Cosgrave, and after her marriage to Bois less than two years ago, the couple occupied rooms in her mother's apartment house at 99 Markham street. She leaves a 10-months' old baby.

According to Detectives Hauerschmidt and Tait the prisoner confessed, saying, "My wife was in the hospital and I needed the money for an operation."

The men implicated, Budghram Singh and Behr Singh, are under arrest, and another man, Ram Singh, is being held as a witness.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and should always be kept handy.

CINCINNATI, April 11. — By breathing sulphurous acid fumes incipient cases of tuberculosis can be frequently cured, according to a public announcement made yesterday in the convention of the American Chemical Society, meeting here, by Dr. Edward Gudeman of Chicago. Dr. Gudeman stated that while this fact had been known for some time among certain physicians and chemists, yet the demonstrations along this line had not progressed far enough to make the announcement public, until yesterday.

A Quick, Sure Way to Banish Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a true hair-remover, and no pain or injury will follow its use. With a little powdered delatone mix enough water to make a stiff paste, apply to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub it off. With this paste comes every trace of hair and when the skin is washed off to remove the remaining delatone it will be soft and clear and free from blemish. Excepting in very stubborn cases, a single application of delatone is sufficient.

TWENTY YEARS AGO on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 20 a 10 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1000, No. 43960, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.....$69.10

The yearly premium he would have to pay on the non-participating plan for the ten years is.....$44.25

Extra paid for profits for ten years.....$7.65

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.35, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $379.35, almost 600 per cent.

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $42.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain cash results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

LAST EFFORT MADE TO SAVE GUNMEN

Governor of New York State Rejects Memorandum Alleged to Have Been Found in Whitman's Papers and Remains Unmoved When Woman Pleads for Lives --New Evidence?

GLYNN REFUSES APPEAL

ALBANY, N.Y., April 11.—A memorandum of the cases of the four gunmen, sentenced to die Monday for the murder of the gambler, Rosenthal, last summer, setting forth in the main a reputed alibi r "Dago Frank" Cirofici, which was forwarded to Governor Glynn yesterday by C. G. F. Wahle, their attorney, failed to change the executive's position on his refusal to grant them a reprieve.

Eleven words written on a slip of white paper which on Thursday was found in a bundle of old correspondence by L. B. M. Brown, of New York, it was believed, would prove the means of obtaining a stay of execution for the four gunmen.

According to Mr. Brown, the note, which contains a warning against giving credence to statements of Morris Luban and Max Margolis, who were witnesses against the gunmen, was written by a former assistant to District Attorney Whitman. It was intended, says Brown, for the guidance of former Governor Sulzer, in whose behalf it was reported at the time communication was indited.

"I have received and read your supplemental application in the case of your clients," the governor telegraphed Wahle last night. "I find nothing therein which I had not previously considered and nothing to justify a change in my decision."

Another eleventh-hour effort to save the four men gave signs of being more successful last night when Supreme Court Justice Goff signed an order making it mandatory for District Attorney Whitman to show cause why the four gunmen should not be granted a new trial.

The order is returnable to-day before Justice Goff, who presided at the trial of the gunmen, and was obtained on the ground that new evidence had been discovered.

This evidence, in the form of affidavits, was presented to Justice Goff by Charles G. F. W hle of counsel for the condemned men. The signer of one affidavit swore that a man he could identify, and who was not one of the gunmen, was in the firing party whose shots killed Rosenthal. The other declared that he saw Sam Schepps, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Valion, the informers, and not the men convicted, in the car that raced away from the scene of the crime after the tenderloin gambler had been shot to death in front of the Metropolis Hotel.

Besides receiving the memorandum, the governor yesterday heard a personal appeal for the gunmen from Mrs. William Vanamee, of Newburgh, the wife of an attorney for the convicted men, who was too ill to appear in person. Mrs. Vanamee was accompanied by the mother of "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg, but the executive remained firm in his decision not to talk with any of the relatives of the condemned men, and saw Mrs. Vanamee alone. Her appeal was in vain, the governor saying that his decision was final.

Rabbi Brown, who Thursday injected a note from Frank Moss, a former assistant district attorney of New York, into the case, did not appear at the capitol yesterday. The note now is in the hands of the gunmen's counsel, and it is supposed Brown went to New York.

THE FEAST OF THE PASSOVER IS OBSERVED

Local Hebrews Commenced Its Celebration Yesterday at Sunset —Continues Until April 18th

HOW IT IS SPENT

The feast of Passover, which began yesterday at sunset and continues until sunset on Saturday, April 18, is observed by the local Hebrews as well as by Hebrews the world over. The Canadian Government this year as in the past has allowed free importation of leaven or Passover bread from March 11 to April 12.

The following account of Pesach, or the Passover, has been prepared by the Central Conference of American Rabbis:

Passover has, from remote antiquity, been taken to commemorate the deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt after 430 years of bitter servitude. The account of the sufferings of the Israelites and of their liberation occupies the first fifteen chapters of the Book of Exodus.

The Unleavened Bread.

Compliant with the Biblical command (Exodus XII. 19,) the observant Jew, during the Passover week, abstains strictly from the use of all leavened substances. Instead of the ordinary yeast bread, a species of large cracker called Matzoth or unleavened bread is eaten.

Before Passover arrives, the observant Jew scrupulously removes from his premises every crumb of leaven that he is able to find. Sooner would he undergo great privations than touch a piece of leaven at this season. During the Passover week, the Jew of rigid Orthodoxy will not even use the same dishes and utensils in which during the rest of the year leavened food has been placed.

"Holy Convocation."

While the entire week is festive in its nature, the large public gatherings for Passover worship take place in the synagogues only at the beginning of the Passover week and at the end. Orthodox Jews have two days of 'holy convocation' at other extreme, while reform Jews observe only one day at either extreme.

Perhaps the most significant and beautiful aspect of the Passover celebration is the service which is held within the Jewish home on the first evening of the feast; among orthodox Jews, upon the first and second evenings.

A Bountiful Feast.

The members of the family and their guests sit around the supper table which is richly spread. Upon the table are the "bitter herbs and the roasted shank bone, the egg, the parsley, the bowl of salt and water, the unleavened bread and other symbols. The service is read or rather chanted from a curious old book called "Haggadah" which tells with not a little wit, humour, pathos and sublimity about the deliverance from Egypt, giving thanks for the great act of divine mercy, in many a psalm and hymn.

For the benefit of the large number of Jews who no longer understand Hebrew, attempts have been made to translate the "Haggadah" into English. But it is doubtful whether the best of translations can preserve the quaint charm of the original.

A COUNTER BLAST FROM EAST CITY

Residents Assert That East City is Not Made Up of Ncas and Retired Farmers—Want Garbage Collection.

MAY RECONSIDER ACTION

"It's a safe, sanitary and proper method of disposing of garbage." With these words, Mr. G. A. Borland expressed his approval of the garbage collecting system as established by the city. Mr. Borland was one of a deputation that waited upon the Property Committee of the City Council on Thursday evening for the purpose of protesting against the action of the City Council in excluding East City from the area, served by the garbage collecting system. The deputation comprised Messrs. A. G. Carruthers, R. Sedgwick, W. Turner, G. Hay, G. A. Borland, and Alderman Anderson. The committee was represented by Aldermen Langford (chairman), Duncan, Stratton, Saunders, McIntyre, and Sanitary Inspector Spence was also present.

Were Astonished.

Mr. A. G. Carruthers, who acted as spokesman for the deputation, pointed out that while the deputation was numerically small it was backed up by some of the most influential citizens of East City, many of whom were unable to be present owing to counter attractions. "We were astonished," said Mr. Carruthers, "to learn that a deputation armed with a petition had waited upon the City Council on Monday evening, for the purpose of voicing their objection to the proposed establishment of a garbage collecting system in East City. There are stacks of men who did not know what they were signing, and many of the signatories had absolutely no interest in East City, whatever. If it's petitions you want, we can get you one that will beat its predecessor all hollow. Many people in East City are obsessed with the idea that the garbage collecting system will kill them, financially. That's not so. The garbage collecting system is the finest thing that was ever established. We are here as a small deputation, but we have some of the best people of East City behind us in our efforts to have the system extended to East City."

"Don't Keep Hens."

Messrs. Gus Hay and Webber Turner likewise registered their objection to the elimination of East City from the garbage collecting area.

"We don't keep hens, and we are not all retired farmers," said Mr. Borland.

Alderman Langford was about to dismiss the deputation with the usual stereotyped promise of "consideration" so well known to the members of the Federal and Provincial Legislatures, when Aldrman Duncan recommended that the City Council be asked to reconsider its decision.

"We have followed out the instructions of the ratepayers by erecting an incinerator, said the South Ward representative. "I can't see for the life of me why East City should not contribute its share towards the maintenance of the garbage collecting system. These people have come here to-night in good faith and there is no reason why their request should not be granted. Besides we need the garbage."

A Petition Wanted.

Alderman McIntyre—"East City is not asking for garbage collecting system. You have a deputation of five here, but we want a petition. As a re-

EGGS APLENTY ON THE MARKET

A COUPLE OF CHICKENS

Eggs, baskets of them, burdened the boards at to-day's market, and under the heavy supply the price sagged from 21c to 18c. Butter sold at 32c, although some is reported a cent or two lower towards the close of the market. A few chickens were offered at $1.00 each. On the outside market potatoes wer quoted at $1.25, and with only two farmers selling there was no danger of the prices being knocked down to the $1.15 figure. Maple syrup retailed at 40c a quart, with the supply confined to the offerings of two farmers. The outside market was so slim it was practically a negligible quantity.

LEASE DOES NOT SOON EXPIRE

Contrary to an intimation in an evening contemporary to the effect that Mr. Pappas' lease of the Royal Theatre from the Chamberlain estate is not soon to expire. It was stated that such was the case owing to the fact that the expiration of the lease of the property between the Chamberlain estate and the City was also near at hand. This last mentioned agreement is good for six years yet, and Mr. Pappas has a further lease of the Royal Theatre from that time on for ten years. Provision is also made for the protection of the ten year agreement.

NATIONALISTS ORGANIZING

A STRONG RESOLUTION

Special Cable to The Examiner;

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, April 11.—While the Nationalist volunteers are not drilling so regularly as the Ulsterites, they are undoubtedly recruiting in this hotbed of Orangeism.

A meeting for this purpose is called for Sunday, the nineteenth, on the heigths of Cruckaughrim by a circular which says: "Come in your thousands, show by your presence you are prepared to protect and defend your lives and property against aggression. There is not a man in all our land, our country now can spare, the strong man with sinewy hand, weak man with his prayer. God Save Ireland."

The above notice was written by a member of the Innishowen Board of Guardians before which body Tuesday he will support the following resolution: "That the English army and navy have become corrupted by Carsomism, and are no longer to be relied upon to protect the lives and property of people. We earnestly call the young men of Innishowen to get enrolled immediately in the Irish National volunteers force for the self-defence of our lives and property."

Fell Through A Trap Door

Mr. William Dayman Fell From Barn Floor to Cow Stable—Death Ensued Later

PORT HOPE, April 11. — Port Hope and surrounding country were shocked to learn of the sudden death of William E. Dayman, one of the most highly esteemed residents of the Township of Hamilton. Mr. Dayman was doing some chores about the barn when he fell through a trap door to the cow stable about eight feet below. The floor in the stable is concrete and it is expected that he fell headlong to this. He was able to walk to the house and when it was suggested to bring a doctor he did not think it necessary. Medical aid, however, was at once summoned, and before the doctors arrived Mr. Dayman had lapsed into unconsciousness. Everything possible was done but without avail and Mr. Dayman passed away Thursday morning at six o'clock without regaining consciousness. The only mark on the body was about the right eye. The eye was completely closd and the flesh very much inflamed.

Deceased leaves a widow, three sons and three daughters and his aged father, Mr. Thos. Dayman. Mrs. Dayman is a daughter of the late James Curtis of this town. The funeral took place this afternoon (Saturday) at 2 o'clock.

Big Increase.

The total sales of the "SALADA" Tea Co. last year amounted to as much as the total business during the first twelve years they were introducing Ceylon tea into Canada and the United states. Their increase alone in 1913 over 1912 amounted to more than the total business done during the first five years of their existence, and during the first three months of 1914 their ratio of increase is the largest they have ever had. 2d-A11-16

WORK ON THE LAND WILL COMMENCE NEXT WEEK

Farmers Are Ready to Commence Operations in the West if the Weather Permits—Last Minute Despatches.

CANADIANS IN NEW YORK

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., April 11.—After several weeks of broken weather since the snow went away the farmers of Manitoba got busy clearing up their seed grain expecting early spring. There have been much warmer days this week, but the night have been cold. If nothing unexpectedly happens, the work on the lands should begin about the first of next week. There will be a smaller acreage in wheat this year on account of an early freeze up last fall causing a lot of ploughing to be left over for spring.

Canadians in New York.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 11.—It is stated that there are ten thousand Canadians here for the Easter festivities, including two hundred Ontario school teachers under the guidance of Dr. J. L. Hughes. In any of the restaurants, "O Canada" and the "Maple Leaf Forever" are popular airs, and Union Jacks are more common than they have been since the declaration of United States' independance. If the weather is fine, to-morrow will be one of the most joyful Easters Gotham has ever seen.

Dorothy Arnold Found.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 11. —It was announced from the District Attorney's office to-day that evidence has been obtained that Dorothy Arnold, the New York heiress, who disappeared in nineteen ten was found in a Pittsburg maternity home and is now back in her father's home, though very ill.

FIRE DEPARTMENT SHOULD HAVE AT LEAST 22 MEN

Inspector for Underwriters' Association Underlines a Few of the Deficiencies in Local Appliances

MANY RECOMMENDATIONS

The Fire Underwriters' Association has forwarded to the City Council a report embodying the observations made by Norman R. Wilson who inspected the city's fire preventive appliances on January 29.

Quite a number of suggestions are made toward bringing the equipment up ot the standard, and those who are highly satisfied with the present appliances will get an idea of some of the requirements still to be provided before the brigade could be said to be thoroughly up to the standard.

Three auxiliary stations, one in each of the East, North and South wards, are recommended, likewise a chemical engine, motor driven or drawn by horses. Mr. Wilson says the brigade should consist of at least 22 paid men. Six thousand feet of hose are required instead of the 4,450 feet now in service. He recommends larger mains in several cases in order to increase the running pressure. A review of the following clauses give an idea of what he reports are needed for the improvement of the department:

No Shingles.

Clause 56—Fire limit by-law allows roofs of shingles in mortar.—Shingles, however laid, are not permitted by the standard.

Clause 76—The men on night patrol should be provided with watchmen's clocks in connection with a sufficient number of call stations, to effectively cover the business section.

57—Storage of Oils, Etc.—Is not regulated by by-law. The Standard limits are 5 bbls. of coal oil, etc., and 5 gallons of crude oil, benzine, gasoline, etc., and a by-law in accordance with these requirements should be adopted. This deficiency has been pointed out in several previous reports, but no action has ben taken so far by the city.

58—Storage of Powder—Is limited to 29 pounds instead of 25, as required by the Standard.

60—Automatic Water Pressure — Recording gauge—one should be placed in the pump house.

61—Relief Valves on Pumps—Said to be set at 130 lbs., but not definitely known. They should be properly tested and set.

63—Supply Main—There are now two supply mains from the pumphouse, but the new 18-inch only extends as far as the Auburn Mills, where it connects into a 12-inch. A larger main than this 12-inch should be laid right into the city. The discharge pipe from the pump-house is only 20-inch diameter, and is connected to the 16-inch by mans of a 12-inch, and to the new 18-inch by a 16-inch pipe. The 20-inch cannot adequately supply both an 18-inch and a 16-inch, and I would suggest the advisability of replacing it by one of 30-inch diamter, and connecting the 18 and the 16-inch direct into it, removing the present 12-inch and 16-inch connections.

River Crossings.

The supply for East Cityt is by means of a single line of 8-inch main crossing the rivere at Hunter street. The question of laying a second main over the new bridge on Smith street has been under consideration for some years, and I would again very strongly urge that this be put in.

Fire Pressure.

There is a recommendation that full pressure be put on instead of the present 90 lbs., when a fire alarm is received at the pumping station. If full pressure is not required it is because the fire is under control and the chief has more time to telephone.

Running Pressures.

In December, 1911, the approximate discharge for 10 streams was at the rate of 1,053,120 Imperial gallons per 24 hours, or 35 per cent. short of the requirements for 10 8s. ward streams. At the present test (Jan. 29, 1914) the discharge for 12 streams was at the rate of 2,628,000 Imperial gallons, or 27 per cent. short of the amount required for 12 standard streams. Also, in the hydrant tests the average pressures in 1911 were 87 lbs. normal and 67 lbs. running, and at the 1914 test, 99 lbs. normal and 78 lbs. running. The pressures are an improvement on the previous figures, but they could be very materially improved if the recommendations regarding supply mains above were carried out. The pumping capacity is ample for all requirements as above to make a still greater improvement in the pressures.

First Class Hose—Only 4,450 feet

ENGLAND'S DRINK BILL

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., April 11—The annual drink bill of England during the past fiscal year was five million pounds more than for the previous fiscal year, or an average of three and one-half pounds, sterling, per head of population, spent on alcoholic stimulants. Discussing this The Times to-day points out that this is doubtless due to more prosperity among the people, with higher wages and a demand for more expensive drinks. While this is a high expenditure, compared with recent years, it is several shillings per head lower than the lowest average of other decades. This fact, points out the newspaper, indicates that apart from the fluctuations of prosperity, the Britisher is getting less fond of his beer as the years go by. According to the figures, England drinks more, per head, than Ireland or Scotland. While business is practically at a standstill all over Britain over the Easter holidays, things are generally optimistic. The man on the street looks with confidence towards an early settlement of the Irish question without serious trouble. He believes the attitude of the politicians at present is towards sacrifice of party politics for national security.

THE WEEKLY BANK STATEMENT

NEW YORK, April 11—Canadian Pacific took a further slump to-day, closing at 198. New Haven was not greatly affected by unfavourable earnings in the setatement for eight months and declined only 1-4, to 71-2. T.K.O. opened half a point down. California Petroleum lost on the first sale and increased its decline to 3-4 on the second transaction as a result of the weakness in M.N.P.

U.S. fluctuated after the poor tonnage report of the United States Steel Co. The general trend of the gossip is now regarding the forthcoming quarterly report, some of the leading people of the street predicting that the net earnings will be as low as 17 millions. This would mean that not even the preferred divident would have been earned.

Following is the weekly bank statement:

Reserve decrease	$ 971,800
Loans increase	6,000,000
Specie increase	4,600,000
Legals decrease	2,314,000

THE DIFFERENCE.

The latest despatches state that politics is quiet in Great Britain till after Easter, but that there is no surcease of the activities of treason and rebellion. It is stated that Sir Edward Carson is to "review" the "volunteers" at various centres. We have become so accustomed to flippant reference to the rebel "forces" in Ulster that we hardly appreciate what it all means. Assuming that the Ulster "volunteers" compose something more tangible than an opera bouffe army, the fact of armed rebellion showing its front in the face of day, is a serious matter, and its toleration can only be explained on grounds of policy — "giving enough rope," etc. Even if it is only a manifestation of the policy of the Unionist party it is serious enough. That it is part of a party move is plain enough. The army officrs who mutinied are sympathizers with the Unionist party, and hence their tender side for the revolting Ulsterites. If the Nationalists in another part of Ireland, had gone to the lengths of some of the people of Ulster, or gone half the length that they have gone, these same officers, would have girt on two-edged swords and rushed to lead their forces against the rebels. But it makes all the difference in the world whose ox is gored, especially when party profit and not patriotic principle is in question.

POSTAL HONESTY.

While the Post Office Department is entitled to credit for extension of rural mail delivery, inaugurated by the Liberal government, in some and many other respects, the administration of the post office has been less brilliant than active. Of course, there has been a great lopping off of heads of Liberal postmasters, so great as to justify describing the head of the department as Ghostmaster-General. It is true that we have had the innovation, if not improvement, of having postal cards printed in French, not a high crime and misdemeanor, except, in the eyes of some extremely sensitive loyalists, who scent treason in anything showing the slightest Gallic bias. We have had the good old English names of post offices displaced by their French nomenclatural equivalent, with only slight disturbance of the sensitive loyalists, since it was done under the official authority of a Conservative government — all things you know become lawful in party interests. We have had parcel post introduced; but under conditions that make it virtually useless as a public convenience, some of the rates being in excess of that charged by the "extortionate" express companies. An instance of the automatically ineffective administration of the post office department was the recent issue of an absurd order to the effect that all letters thereafter sent through the mails, containing coin and unregistered, were to be sent to the Dead Letter Office. This order was so self-evidently absurd, was the subject of so much adverse criticism, that it has been rescinded. The Postmaster-General has seceded from the position of suspecting every post official to be a thief, and rescinded the order. To have an ideally perfect postal service we should be able to send through the mails, bank bills, enclosed in an unsealed envelope, and have them reach their destination safely. This is perhaps too much to expect, this side of the millennial age, but we should have a post office staff, sufficiently proof against temptation, to resist rifling a letter containing a few cents of coin. Honesty in principle, and practice in the central administration of the post office would tend to beget honesty among subordinates.

COMPENSATION.

Wheat has not been made free, but let the grain growers rejoice to know that the Government has at least put ferro manganese and spiegeleisen on the free list. Also aluminum leaf. — Toronto Star.

THE EXPLANATION.

The shock that public sense of decency received in the indecently hasty whitewashing of Mr. G. Howard Ferguson, M.P., by the Conservative majority of the Ontario Legislature had a logical explanation from a party point of view. Mr. Ferguson had broken the law of the land in accepting a commission to uncover "graft" on the Trent canal, with his pockets bulging with the price of his own "graft." Ipso facto he had incurred the severe penalty of $2,000 for every day he occupied his seat in the Legislature under this disability. The moment, however, this "graft" was exposed,—without an hour's delay—legislation was rushed through, purging his offence, condoning crime by act of parliament. There were several reasons for this high-handed haste. In the first place Mr. Ferguson was likely to be "stuck for' a good deal more than his profits as commissioner. Common gratitude suggested that the man who had put the blinkers over the Public Accounts committee searchlight, that threatened to reveal the inwardness of a Crown Minister's finessing with "corruption" frauds, should be looked after. Last session Mr. Ferguson had throttled investigation into the details of the acceptance of $800 paid by a government contractor into the hands of Hon. Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, for the political funds of the Conservative party; and gratitude for this service suggested that gratitude should include gratitude for favours to come, and that Mr. Ferguson should be placed in a position to continue the good work. The whitewashing has, from a party point of view, speedily justified itself. On Thursday Mr. Ferguson blossomed out in his old role. Th activity of License Inspector Snider, who is said to have been sent by the Provincial Secretary, or with his knowledge, into three counties where the Canadian Temperance Act was under vote, to give the Act a black eye in order to secure its defeat, was under probe in the Public Accounts committee. Inspector Snider was under examination, and the moment a question was asked by an Opposition member of the committee that threatened to be embarrassing, Mr. Ferguson was on hand to prevent an answer, and so prevent awkward truths coming out. All attempts to probe Inspector Snider's partisan activities were balked. Here we have an explanation of the rush to whitewash Mr. Ferguson and restore him to the party usefulness, for which he seems to be [illegible], as a compound of copper and zinc is, comparatively, pulp.

A VILE SLOGAN.

"A vote for a Radical means a widow in Ulster," is the latest campaign slogan of some Unionists in the Old Country. We say "some Unionists" because many members of the party are protesting against such a slogan. It would be hard to imagine a more cruel slogan than that or perhaps a more untruthful one. Such election cries as "No truck with the Yankees" or others of the 1911 vintage, are mere amateurish efforts when compared with the vicious thrust from a Unionist mind.

The men responsible for this Unionist slogan could "out yellow" the "yellowest" that ever William Randolph Hearst employed.—Ottawa Free Press.

THE FAILURE OF THE SCHOOL BOOK POLICY.

It was brought out the other day in the Legislature that certain school grants to trustees had to be lopped off 28 per cent. because the expenditure had to that extent outrun the estimates. The query naturally arises: What is the education department doing with all the money it gets? Mr. Marshall and other members of the Opposition have been pointing out that that one serious cause of waste of money is the stream of unnecessary and some of them foolish school books being foisted on the schools at the expense of the department apparently to give jobs to some unnamed editor-friends of the officials.

On Tuesday Mr. Marshall read to the House some passages from one of these books: "God may forgive sins but awkwardness has no forgiveness in heaven or earth." "A parlour maid is no more privileged to use the front stairs than the cook." "A man may wear a black tie at the theatre or a small dinner, but he should wear a white tie at the opera or a large dinner." "A guest, after a visit, even a short one, is to bestow upon a servant a small fee." "At church a man should wear a frock coat and a tall hat." The country is taxed for printing and distributing to the schools books of such a calibre as this.

It would be generally admitted that if anyone is competent to give expert testimony on school books and school book making it is Mr. George N. Morang of Toronto. Last week in giving evidence before a state committee at Atlanta he testified that the Ontario Government's method of making text books is a costly one to the country and that the claim of saving and cheapness is a sheer fallacy.

Mr. Morang testified that the Ontario method of producing and paying for the plates and composition was higher than if they were produced by a private firm and that all the so-called [illegible] was only the paper and binding. He said farther that books were being written by officials of the education department, and he cited a case where a particular friend of an official of the department was allowed to write a supplementary reader. The book was produced by the Government and authorised for use in the schools. It was put in use but was found so inadequate that it was practically withdrawn and that, according to the report of Mr. Morang's evidence as telegraphed to the Globe, the department is now authorizing another reader which is being prepared for them by a publishing house in the United States. In mechanical execution the Ontario books, he said, are in every way inferior to those used in the United States.

Failure in other matters have been more conspicuous all along. It is hardly conceivable that the majority who opposed Mr. Marshall's motion in favour of a change of management in the educational department did not vote against their conscience.—London Advertiser.

THAT ENDLESS CHAIN.

That is a fine endless chain at the Parliament Buildings. Ferguson saves and shields Hanna from awkward questions in the Central Prison case, Hanna and his colleagues vote Ferguson back into the House after he has forfeited his seat, and once more Ferguson shields Hanna by telling Inspector Snider he must not answer Mr. Proudfoot's questions as to his participation in recent Scott Act elections. What do the people of Ontario think of it all?—Globe.

Saving Precious Cargo.

Two Scotsmen had been having a good time on the heather doons of a sma' island, and were rowing back home across the firth, when the boat capsized, said Dean Cooley of the University of Michigan to the engineers' club recently.

Angus had clung to the boat and Jock, who had clung to the bottle, was floundering bravely in the deep. Although a poor swimmer, he struck out for the skiff, holding the bottle in one hand. After a few strokes he became exhausted.

"Angus," he cried, "I dinna think I can mak' it."

"Weel, if ye canna mak' it, Jock, throw it," called back Angus.

Union Service

Was Held in the Murray Street Baptist Church Yesterday Afternoon in Observance of Good Friday

CHURCH WAS CROWDED

The observance of Good Friday in this city yesterday included a Union Service in the Murray street Baptist Church to which the members of all the Protestant churches were heartily invited. The service was scheduled to commence at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and before that hour had been past many minutes the church was crowded to the doors.

On the platform there were the Revs. H. J. Keith, R. G. Peever, J. C. Davidson, F. J. Sawers, E. E. Johnston, J. Rollins and J. R. Webb. The Rev. Mr. Sawers, President of the Ministerial Association, was chairman, and all of the ministers present took part in the service.

The choir was present in full force, and Miss Clara Kidd rendered a solo in beautiful voice.

The two addresses were given by the Rev. Mr. Peever and the Rev. Mr. Keith. The former outlined in a vivid and touching manner the events that lead up to and took place at the Crucifixion.

Just as at Christmas, he said, we live over again in our minds the scenes of Christ's advent on the Earth, so at this time of the year we live again the scenes of His last week of life on the Earth. Then he related the story of the Crucifixion, telling how when Jesus was asked where the feast of the passover was to be celebrateed, He had told them to go to a certain city where they would find a man carrying a jug of water. They were to follow Him to find the place. He did not name the house because He knew Judas was waiting for an opportunity to betray Him and He did not wish the fast of the passover to be disturbed. Before the last supper He washed the feet of the disciples illustrating by a parable that he should be the greatest, who served best. Already Judas had bargained to betray Jesus. Jesus knew this, but the diciples did not. When Judas left the room for the purpose of putting into execution his treacherous plan, Christ said to him:

"Judas, what thou art doing do quickly." Then the scene in the garden of Gethsemanae, was described, where Jesus prayed and the disciples fell asleep at their post. Then was Christ's arrest. He was taken before the high priests, Pilot and Herod and finally on the knoll of Calvary "the Cross was lifted up and Jesus gave Himself as a sacrifice for the sin of the World. Your Lord and my Lord was crucified."

The Rev. H. J. Keith spoke in an interesting address, on the interpretation of the cross. Christ looked upon the cross as an awful necessity—the only means by which He could draw men to that life which He wanted them to realize and experience. The background of the cross was not Jerusalem with the world. The time of the cross was not the day that Jesus was executed but for all Eternity.

The cross stood "for a law by which your life and mine should be guided." In the daily duties, daily plan and constant pursuits as well as in the great crises of our lives we should be governed by the cross. As Jesus gave His life for the world we should give our life for others. There had still to be thrown across our selfishness, extravagance, pleasures and vices, the Cross of Jesus Christ.

presentative of East City, I don't believe in taxing the ratepayers for something they don't want. I venture to question whether th deputation could get five more members."

"I can bring you influential men who are sorry that they signed the petition which was presented to the Council on Monday night," countered Mr. Turner. "The question involved was not fairly explained to them ond they are sorry they signed it."

Mr. Carruthers,—"You undertake to establish a system even to the extent of advertising for tenders, and then submit to the first petition sent in. You can get a petition to kill a dog. Besides, those in favour of a garbage collecting system are entitled to some consideration."

Sanitary Inspector Spence submitted that garbage collection in East City was very necessary.

"The Evil Day."

Alderman McIntyre contended that the present system of collecting garbage was all wrong, and that the city should undertake the work instead of letting it out to contractors.

"That's no reason why we should be held off," asserted Mr. Hay.

"It's staving off the evil day and hindering the march of progress," said Mr. Carruthers, with a flourish of his swagger stick.

A verbal debate in which Alderman McIntyre and members of the deputation participated, provided an unlooked for closing feature, after which Alderman Langford reiterated his former promise.

Krafchenko Sentenced

Slayer of Bank Manager to Hang on July 9th—Prisoner Showed Little or No Emotion

MORDEN, Man., April 11. — On July 9, John Krafchenko is to be hanged at Winnipeg, for the murder, on Dec. 2, of last year, of H. M. Arnold, manager of the Bank of Montreal, at Plum Coulee, Man. The close of a long and sensational trial came at four o'clock Thursday afternoon, when the court rose after a two hour intermission, which followed the jury's verdict of guilty. When the court resumed Krafchenko made a statement to the court, in which he did not deny that he had been concerned in the hold-up of the bank, but in which he asserted positively that he was not the man who killed Arnold. Then Chief Justice Mathers imposed sentence. From the moment of the reading of the indictment to the last scene of all, the prisoner preserved the same steady attitude, and he showed little or no emotion even when the death penalty was pronounced.

NEW BRUNSWICK WOMAN'S MESSAGE

Tells Her Suffering Sisters to Find Relief in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. James B. Roy was Ill for Two Years and the Doctor Could not Help Her—How She Found a Cure.

Tremblay Settlement, Gloucester Co., N.B., April 10.—(Special.)—Mrs. James B. Roy, an estimable lady, well known here, has made the following statement for publication:

"For two years I suffered from an extreme weakness and an awful pain in the back. Sometimes my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I was always nervous, I had no appetite and I was failing very fast. I took medicines from a doctor, but continued to grow worse.

"Then I started to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and soon began to improve. By the time I had finished the third box I was completely cured. I know I owe my cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I want other sufferers to know that they also may be cured."

Mrs. Roy's symptoms showed that she had Kidney trouble. That's why she found speedy relief and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are a Kidney remedy, pure and simple. The reason they cure so many suffering women is that nine-tenths of women's troubles come from sick Kidneys.

CITY APPOINTS A BUILDING INSPECTOR

The Work Will be Undertaken by Mr. R. H. Parsons, City Engineer

Mr. R. H. Parsons, City Engineer, has been assigned the duties of building inspector. This action was recommended by the Property committee at a meeting that was held on Thursday evening, and there is every reason to believe that it will be endorsed by the City Council at a subsequent meeting. It is understood that Mr. Parsons has signified his willingness to accept this new responsibility, which up to the present has been assumed by Mr. T. A. Hay, assistant City Engineer.

Ald. Duncan brought up the question of securing a new plumbing inspector. He claims that Mr. Peter Thompson, the present plumbing inspector, is not fulfilling the requirements as set out in the by-law. Ald. Langford, chairman of the committee, preferred to let the matter stand for the present, but was over-ruled by the majority, who voted to have the complaints investigated.

"This thing has gone far enough," said Ald. Duncan. "We are paying $600 and not getting results. Ald. Duncan even went so far as to offer to bring a plumber from Toronto, for the purpose of investigating the charges and if they were not proved he would pay all expenses.

It's Easy to Peel Off All Your Freckles

The contrast between the freckles and the clear skin usually is so great that no bleach can be more than partially successful in obliterating the disfigurements. Ordinary mercolized wax is far better; it literally peels off the freckles. Get an ounce of it at the nearest druggstore and to-night spread on enough to completely cover your face; remove in the morning with warm water. Repeat daily until every freckle has disappeared.

Rough, blotchy, pimpled skin, also common at this season, may be entirely got rid of by this same method, without discomfort or inconvenience. The effort is decidedly worth while, the new complexion obtained being so clear, smooth and youthful.

If bothered with wrinkles, bathe the face in a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is the most effective and quickest-acting wrinkle treatment known.

WRIT ISSUED AGAINST CANADIAN BOVING CO.

BIG AGRICULTURAL LAND OPENING

TWELVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY TRACTS of five and ten acres each to be granted to prospective settlers in thriving open Twenty Thousand Acres of Rich, Southern Georgia Land, which is admirably adapted to the growing of celery, sweet and Irish potatoes, watermelons, tomatoes, cotton, hay—in fact, all staple crops grown in this favored section, as well as a large variety of semi-tropical fruits, and the famous immensely profitable paper-shell pecans.

Providing you are eligible under the conditions* prescribed by us, you are now offered an excellent opportunity to benefit among those the ordinary and toil of a small wage, or working for the benefit of landlords, and go back to a land of plenty, to which, if granted, you will hold a warranty deed and abstract.

The best security on earth is the earth itself, and land is the basis of all wealth. Owners of productive lands are benefiting by the increasing high cost of living, while others are suffering from it.

An Opportunity to Secure Rich Productive Land Without Capital

You will not be required to leave your present surroundings now. All we ask of those to whom we grant tracts is that they plant, or arrange to have planted, a crop of one of the above-mentioned products within three years, after which we will have it operated (harvested and remarketed) for grantees, in consideration of 20 per cent. of the net profits derived from the sale of the crops, thereby allowing such time as they determine just what the yield of their acres amounts to. Consider what this may mean as a source of income, when statistics show that the yield of one acre of celery amounted to $1,200.00, and that one acre of well-cared-for paper shell pecans, in full bearing, should net its owner as high as $600.00 per year. We are of the opinion that those after it is proven by actual results obtained in operating the land that they will need no further urging, and make no time in investing in this land of plenty. We also require grantees to occupy the land within ten years, or sell it to some one who will occupy it; otherwise it reverts back to the grantor.

The land included in this opening is located directly on and adjoining the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, about twenty-five miles west of Brunswick, a thriving city of fifteen thousand, having direct steamship service to New York and Boston, and excellent railroad transportation facilities to all points. The average temperature for six months of the year, from April to October, is 77 degrees; the climate is most healthful, delightful, and invigorating, and there is an ample rainfall of 51 inches per year.

OUR AIM IS FOR MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL RESULTS

As we are extremely desirous of having settlers locate on these properties, and assist in its development, and thereby greatly increase the value of surrounding and intervening property, which we will hold, and to increase the traffic along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, and thus facilitate the service, we feel warranted in granting these tracts to those who register with us. We also have in mind business and residence plots which we will offer for sale after the opening, but which will not be included in it. We have "money-making afterward" considerations in this liberal-minded opening, similar to those of the Northern Pacific and other railroads when they granted their lands, and we propose to handle thereby as well as the ones who will receive the tracts.

We have also planned to develop what is designed to be the best equipped, most up-to-date, scientific, commercial farm and orchard in existence. It will consist of six thousand acres, and will be included in this opening. All who register and receive tracts will get the benefit of the experiments and scientific analysis in these thereon. While we are striving to prevent over-registration, we will avoid as many disappointments, such as occurred in other land openings conducted by the United States Government and railroads, by granting those who register in excess of the number of tracts to be granted, an interest in this commercial farm and orchard enterprise, in the hope that they may later locate in one of our town sites.

Examination of the land will shortly be permitted, and the opening will be held at Brownstown, Wayne County, Georgia, one of the stations of the A. B. & A. Railroad, which is located on this property, and will occur no sooner after the closing of registrations as arrangements can be made.

The presence of those registered will not be necessary at Brownstown on the opening day, unless they wish to attend, for there will be no fanfaritism shown anyone. It will be conducted by a committee selected for the purpose, and those registered will be notified of what they have been granted, as soon as possible.

With the ever-increasing population of this country there is no corresponding increase in the area of land, and naturally as the population increases and seeks the land in pursuit of health, happiness and independence, it will continue to be harder to secure.

The prosperous and contented class in Europe to-day are the descendants of those who secured land there when it was plentiful, while the descendants of those who obtained no land are now the peasants and slaves. You must realize that this may be your last chance to secure land in this country this may be your last chance to secure land in this country without a large outlay of capital, so it should not be necessary to urge you to act at once by forwarding to the application for registration attached to this announcement.

Lively Gas Meter.

When a party of municipal junketers was in Louisville from Evansville a few months ago one of the Indiana visitors told of the sad obsession of the gas meter of a consumer in the metropolis of southern Hoosierdom.

The consumer made complaint to the gas company in Evansville that his meter seemed bent upon joy-riding, and he asked that it be inspected, hoping that this would result in remedies that would cause the meter to register with more poise and circumspection.

A complaint man inspected the meter and informed the consumer that he had regulated it so that it would be certain to register honestly and exactly.

But the next month another letter of complaint came from the same consumer. It was manifest that he was still far from satisfied with his meter.

"When I complained to you on the first occasion," he explained in this letter, "my meter appeared to be suffering from gastritis. Now it appears to have developed galloping consumption."

If an engineer passes a danger signal in a safety device adopted by a German railway an electric bell is rung in his cab until his mistake is recorded by an official of the road.

Jacob Able of R. F. D. No. 1, Millstown, N. J., writes: "For the last three years I have had kidney disease and backache, and have had it so bad that for eight days and nights I could not get my clothes off. I thought I would try Radway's Ready Relief. I gave my back and hips and sides a good rubbing, and in a short time the pain was all gone. No one in this world knows but God and myself the misery I was in till I USED Radway's Ready Relief."

Radway's Ready Relief should be well rubbed over a large surface, until a glow is produced, with a burning sensation. Four cases requires the Radway Pills. Some do, when a dose on retiring would be taken.

From Agony to Health

How Sufferers from RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO and SCIATICA; may find speedy, welcome relief and certain cure

KEPHALDOL

Pronounced KEPH-AL-DOLE

At last the victims of these torturing complaints—men and women whose lives are long-drawn-out agony—may look with hope, confidence—certainty—to pain's most glad departure.

In Kephaldol is offered, for the first time, a remedy which not only has medical endorsement for its efficacy in all cases of RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, and SCIATICA, but is also guaranteed to be a perfectly safe pain-killer, containing nothing to injure the heart or any other bodily organ.

Kephaldol is prompt and reliable, causes no intestinal irritation, and has none of the characteristic after-effects of quinine and phenacetin. Kephaldol brings, indeed, untold blessing to pain-wracked humanity; joy of perfect life again to those who, perhaps for many years, have dragged through a tormented existence. Kephaldol is prescribed and praised by doctors, and gratefully appreciated by sufferers.

MR. JOS. WOOD, Derby Road, Mareday, Esq. tells of his remarkable recovery. His own words are:—"I have been off work three years and six months, and nothing I could get did me any good. I was suffering from Lumbago and Sciatic Rheumatism. Had six weeks in the hospital, but the doctor said he could do no more for me.

"I got some Kephaldol on Friday. On the morning of Wednesday I had no pain and no painful joints. I felt a new man, and have had no return of it.

"One of my workmates was off work 12 months. After taking Kephaldol he tells me he has now no pain. Another who had been laid up 11 weeks is also free from pain now. Every day I am asked for the name of the stuff that has sent me to work again. Kephaldol is now taken for three or four miles around here." 15

ONE METHOD OF REDUCING THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

Local Family Exists on Milk Alone —Reduces Household Duties to Fraction of Former Size.

USE MANY QUARTS A DAY

There are few citizens of this or any other City that regard the high cost of living as an absurdity very much exaggerated by other people, or the maid-servant question a negligible quantity, or the ever present problem of "what will we have for dinner, or for supper, or breakfast" as non-existent. But there is one family in this City who are in a position to do all this and more. They owe it to the fact that every member of the family, of which there are several, exist on milk and on milk alone.

Can you imagine sitting down three times a day, with all members of the family present, and after the head of the house has offered up a brief prayer of gratitude for "these many blessings," proceeding to make a meal of milk, and milk only. Yet this is what is happening in one of Peterborough's happiest homes each day. Each member of the family is provided with a pitcher of milk and a glass every meal. Save for these dishes and, perhaps, a central floral decoration, the table is bare. Instead of the attack that is being made on various articles of diet in other households at meal time, the members of this one partake of one or more glasses of milk.

The primary object for the adoption of the milk diet by the family in question was, merely a physical consideration. It was recommended to one of their number by a local physician, and putting his advice into general practice, the whole family adopted the idea for the sole purpose of improving their health. But the result has been more than anticipated. After each meal it is necessary only to clean five pitchers and five glasses. No meal, week in or week out, requires any forethought or preparation. And no crumbs have to be swept after the meal is finished. The mother finds that with the great amount of work and all the worry in connection with the meals lifted from her shoulders, the remainder of her household duties are really light, and she has plenty of time to her own use without the assistance of a maid in doing the housework. The necessity of making preserves and pickles in season, which occasions most housewives many weary weeks, is obviated by the milk diet, and with the regular baking day dispensed with it can be readily seen how the household duties have diminished to a small fraction of what they formerly were.

As to the efficiency of the diet it might be said that the father of the household is an active, energetic business man of this City, and finds that milk is nourishing enough to sustain and nourish his body and mind perfectly. That, too, is the discovery of the other members of the family, and all are satisfied with the experiment. The lack of variety in the meals is, of course, a matter of choice, but this particular family circle have not yet found it irksome.

PASSENGER TRAINS CROWDED TO-DAY

Indications of the Easter season were many and unmistakable at the Grand Trunk Station to-day. The early morning trains from Port Hope and Belleville, as well as the noon trains, were crowded with passengers. On the first two trains this morning a very large number of country residents arrived in the City, each with a basket of eggs, etc. The result was that in spite of the brisk demand for eggs on the market to-day they were sold for 18c and 19c a dozen.

The C.P.R. trains also brought a great number of Easter visitors and others to this City.

"Crucifixion" Is Again Presented

By Combined Choirs of St. John's and All Saints' Churches

The presentation of the sacred oratorio "The Crucifixion" by the combined choirs of St. John's and All Saints' churches took place last evening at St. John's Church. This has been the custom for several years past on Good Friday and last night's rendition even exceeded, in point of excellence, that of other years. The chorus work as well as the quartettes and solo parts were all splendidly done, reflecting great credit on the conductor, Mr. R. J. Devey and the soloists, Messrs. G. Harris, Eldred, Wards and Locke. Mr. Cyril Devey presided at the organ in a most efficient manner.

The whole performance was of a most praiseworthy character and the large congregation present thoroughly appreciated the efforts of the choristers.

Charge Was Dismissed

Expressman Was Charged With Supplying Liquor to a Blacklister

John Foster, a local express man, was charged in police court this morning with supplying Alex Reid, another express man, who is on the prohibited list, with liquor on Friday, April 6. He pleaded not guilty through his counsel, Mr. V. J. McElderry. After a considerable amount of evidence had been taken, Magistrate D. W. Dumble found the defendant not guilty.

The defendant admitted supplying liquor on one occasion. This was to alleviate a severe rheumatic pain, and was not considered sufficient to make a man drunk. Foster supplied the liquor in the morning, and it was not until late in the afternoon that Reid was apprehended for being drunk. Foster saw Reid shortly after three o'clock in the afternoon, when he was perfectly sober. An hour or two later he was arrested for being drunk. Foster did not know that Reid was on the prohibited list.

In summing up the case for the defence, Mr. McElderry pointed out that the defendant was positive that the information that Reid was on the prohibited list, never reached Foster. He submitted that the evidence was contradictory and was not of sufficient strength to justify a conviction.

"I don't feel clear that Foster is innocent, but I have not the convincing evidence that would warrant the imposition of a fine," said the Magistrate.

Defendant was discharged.

Drunks Fined.

Andrew Mann volunteered the information that he was born in Lakefield and now resides in Peterborough. He pleaded guilty to a charge of inebriety and was fined $2.

Alex. Nesbitt pleaded guilty to a similar offence and was assessed $2. He wanted time to pay it in, but was informed that it was better to have two dollars ready whenever he intended to indulge in a little libation.

THE DEATH OF MAJOR COOPER, D.S.O.

Distinguished Service Officer of South Africa Passed Away Yesterday Morning—A Brilliant Career

Many people, especially those in the commercial world, will learn with deep regret of the death of Major B. R. V. S. Cooper, the genial gentleman of the old National Hotel.

The Major, as he was generally known, developed a case of blood poisoning in the little finger of his left hand. Serious symptoms showed themselves and on Thursday he was removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where he received treatment. His condition grew worse until, on Friday morning, at 7 o'clock, he passed away.

Major Cooper was born in India, of British parentage, his mother being Irish and his father, English.

The earlier part of the deceased's life was spent in that country, he being a ward of an Indian prince. At the age of eight he was taken to England, and sent to Eton College, from which he graduated to Oxford University. His father, a military man, intended that his son should follow this profession, and at the age of 23 the late Major Cooper joined the army. In his military life he had a distinguished career, and was held in high respect by all his brother officers. He fought in the South African war, and there obtained a title, which is known to few, locally, the D. S. O., (Distinguished service Officer). How he gained that honour is told as follows: His regiment was at Bloomfontein, and had received the order to move to the relief of Mafeking. The Regiment had crossed the Modder River and as if by chance, Major Cooper, D. S. O., was the last man to cross. He was about to plunge into the ford when he heard a thud and, turning, saw the Colonel of his Regiment fall from his horse, seriously wounded. He wheeled around and, bending from his horse, drew the Colonel across the pommel of his saddle and deposited him safely with the Ambulance Corps. Thinking nothing further of the matter he was surprised, about a year afterwards, to receive his decoration. Among local people he was well known and very highly respected.

Major Cooper, has during the restoration of the Nationa Hotel, been a guest at the Snowden House, and it is no exaggeration to say that he was universally liked. He was a great cricket enthusiast, and was a Vice-President of the Peterborough Club last year, and was also elected to that honorary position this year. The deceased gentleman had no relatives in this country. His past is somewhat a secluded one. He had intended to return to England at a date not far hence. He never spoke of his friends to anyone and it will be a decided shock to them to learn of his demise.

As an evidence of the esteem in which he was held a large number of local gentlemen attended the funeral, which was held this morning at 11 o'clock, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Canon Davidson conducted the funeral service and the following officers from the 57th Regiment were present to show their last respects to an old British Officer, who had gained such distinction in such a noble manner: Major Bennett, Major Mills, Capt. Carruthers, Lieut. G. Hall.

Captain McLean and Lieut. Ackerman acted as pall-bearers. There was also present a representative body of citizens. The late Major Cooper was 61 years of age, having been born in 1853.

STREET PAVING WILL COMMENCE ON TUESDAY

Weather permitting street paving operations will be commenced in Peterborough on Thursday next. Messrs. Foley and Gleason have their gang of workmen here ready to start in. The first operation will be to complete the brick work between the Street Railway Company's rails. The brick for this work is expected to-day or Monday and this strip will be completed first. It is likely that the paving gan will start in at the C.P.R. ticket office and work south, although this has not been definitely decided upon.

EASTER AT THE MURRAY ST. CHURCH

The Easter service to-morrow at Murray St. Church will be of most interesting character. A large number of new members will be added to the church by the ordinance of believer's baptism. A Recital At St. Paul's

Vocal and Organ Selections by Miss Dorothy and Mr. John Allan

At St. Paul's Church, last evening, a very delightful vocal and organ recital was given by Miss Dorothy Allan, and Mr. John Allan, respectively.

Miss Dorothy Allen.

Miss Allan is the soprano soloist at the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, and last night rendered a selected programme of sacred music, appropriate to the day.

Her last number "O Had I Jubal's Lyre," (Joshua) Handel, was splendidly rendered. Miss Allen, in this number, responded to all that its presentation required, showing an appreciation of the spirit of the offering, the qualities of which were excellently brought out by the talented young artist.

To this number Miss Allen received an encore and, as a return, sang "Hark, Hary My Soul," set to music, which fully set forth the duteous praise contained in the well-known hymn.

Another number that was exceptionally well rendered by Miss Allan was "O Divine Redeemer" (Gounod). Miss Allan has complete control of her singing powers, and soars into upper regions as easily as she sings the most even melody. Her art in this respect was noticed in the above presentation. The sentences: "O Lord receive me, behold my distress," "Remember not my sins," were sang with an emotional feeling, the straine of which were delightful. This number cannot be passed without a word as to the accompaniment. The music was set out in a manner which defied resistance and the runs, which added greatly to the harmony, were admirably executed by Mr. Allan.

Mr. John Allan.

Mr. John Allan is a most capable solo organist. One of his most principal charms is the number in which he multiplies the numerous stops which are responsible for the tone produced and which renders beauty to the selection being played on the difficult instrument. His efforts are made with a pronounced confidence, ease and graceful interpretation and the expression was throughout adapted most suitably. All his presentations showed his mastery over the instrument. Worthy of special mention is the ability displayed by Mr. Allan in the footwork, which was more pronounced in his last number "Grand Solemn March," (Smart), and which requires more than ordinary ability to deal with. "Canzonetta," (Hollaender), was a very pretty air, which was delightful in the extreme, but which, to the disappointment of many, was not any too engthy.

The following is the programme:

Organ, "Hosannah" ..... Dubois
Vocal "The Publican," Van de Water
Organ, "Funeral March" ..... Chopin
Vocal, "O, Divine Redeemer" .....
..... Gounod
Organ, "Spring Song" ..... Hollins
Vocal, "There's a Green Hill Far Away" ..... Gounod
Organ, "Canzonetta" ..... Hollaender
Vocal, "O'had I Jubal's Lyre" .....
(Joshua) ..... Handel
Encore, "Hark, Hark, My Soul".
Organ, "Grand Solemn March" .....
..... Smart

The Winter of 1913-14

Some Data Regarding the Conditions Prevailing During the Passing Winter

Those who last fall prophesied that our late winter would be a comparatively mild and open one, proved to be a little astray in their forecasts. As the winter is (or should be) past for the present season, The Examiner has secured a number of facts regarding last winter's conditions locally, which will prove of interest at the present time and be a convenient source of reference in the future.

The first snow flurries came October 21st. The ground was white with snow for the first time November 10th. Sufficient snow for sleighing did not come until the day before Christmas, and sleighing continued fair to good until March 15th. In connection with this it may be mentioned that continuously good sleighing has extended over a longer period during late years than formerly. And this notwithstanding that the average snowfall has not been as great as in former years.

First zero weather Dec. 5th, 5 degrees below. December had two days below. January had 11 days below; the lowest on the 13th, 32 degrees below, the coldest of the winter, and for a score of years. February had 18 days below zero; the lowest on the 12th with 27 below. March had three days below; the coldest day the 20th, with 12 below.

December had 10 inches of snow; January 30 inches; February 12½ inches; March 16 inches. The snowfall for the winter was considerably less than average. January and February had an average daily temperature of 10 to 12 degrees below normal; March was just average.—W.P.

It is understood that Mr. L. Stevens, successor to Walter Bates, confectioner, intends to establish an up-to-date ice cream and palm parlour in the second storey of his store on Kent Street. Mr. Stevens has made extensive improvements to this store, and with the addition of a new palm garden, a player piano, etc., he will no doubt attract and merit a larger patronave than ever.—Lindsay Warder.

EXPRESS BUSINESS CHANGES HANDS

Mr. W. A. Fife has disposed of his Express business to Mr. Francis Rome of this City. Mr. Fife desires to thank his many customers for their kind and appreciative patronage, and trust that they will extend the same patronage to his successor. Mr. Fife is leaving the City for a short time, a circumstance that will occasion no little regret. During the time that he has been engaged in the express business Mr. Fife has built up an extensive business, and has earned for himself a large measure of respect.

Contract Awarded

Mr. E. K. Graham was awarded the contract for the collection of garbage at the contract price of $3,000. Tenders were received from W. S. Hare, Justin Brodgett, A. B. Downer and E. K. Graham. The latter was awarded the contract on recommendation of Sanitary Inspector Spence. The work is at present in the hands of E. K. Graham and W. S. Hare.

88 YEARS OLD TO-DAY

Mr. Christian Kruger, 261 Sherbrooke street is, to-day, celebrating his 88th birthday. Mr. Kruger is hale and hearty, and while he has exceeded the allotted span of life, there is every reason to believe that the primal wish of his many friends, which is for a continuance of his present good health may be realized. Mr. Kruger was showered with congratulations, coming from all parts of the city and country.

DEPT. SHOULD HAVE 22 MEN in service. There should be not less than 6,000 feet.

Play Pipes—Only 12 in service. There should be at least 18.

Fire Hall.

There is at present only one slide pole, which is not enough—two others should be provided.

Salvage Waggon.

For a city of this size, there should be a fully equipped salvage waggon, with a sufficient number of men attached thereto, carrying not less than 50 waterproof sheets not exceedin 12x9 feet, with all other tools and a light extension ladder for indoor use. The present sheets 20x20 are too cumbersome.

Fire Stations.

As recommended on several previous occasions there should be three auxiliary stations, one for East City, and one each for the north and south parts of the city, with all the necessary men and equipment.

Brigade.

One man per 1,000 is the standard requirement. For a city of this size the number at present 16, should be considerably increased. The standard would require 22; in addition to whom there would be an engineer for each steamer, etc.

Hose Carrying Capacity.

The present capacity 3,000 feet should be not less than 4,000 feet, and to meet this I would again suggest the installation of a standard combination, chemical engine and hose waggon, either drawn by motor or horses. I would again suggest the advisability of having the waggons of divided pattern, so that two lines could be laid at one time.

WAS TROUBLED WITH BOILS AND CARBUNCLES.

There is no more frequent source of illness than that arising from bad blood, for when the blood becomes impure, it is only natural that boils, pimples or some other indication of bad blood should break out of the system.

Boils in themselves are not a dangerous trouble, but still at the same time are very painful, and the only way to get rid of them is to cleanse the blood of the impurities. Cleanse it thoroughly by the use of Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and reliable blood medicine that has been on the market for nearly forty years.

Mr. James Wilds, Plaster Rock, N.B., writes:—"I was greatly troubled, a few years ago, with boils and carbuncles, and the doctor told me I was in a bad condition. My appetite failed me, I began to lose strength, and was pretty well run down when one of my friends recommended Burdock Blood Bitters. After using three bottles I began to feel like another man. My troubles soon left me, and to-day I can certainly give Burdock Blood Bitters a high recommendation to my friends."

Salvation Army Are Celebrating

Enthusiasm and Loyalty to Local Branch is Evidenced in Every Meeting

Thursday night and yesterday afternoon and evening, the celebration of the 29th anniversary of the Salvation Army in this City was carried out with much enthusiasm and great success. Yesterday afternoon over 500 children were present to hear the illustrated address on the Holy Land and the Story of Christ. The first part of this was handled in an interesting manner by Adjutant McElhiney and the second part of the address given by Mr. Thomas Blunt, was also greatly enjoyed by the children. The lantern slides, of which there are one hundred and fifty, were very clear and depicted in the most comprehensive manner possible the scenes they were intended to represent.

At five o'clock the anniversary banquet was held and over five hundred people sat down to the array of good things provided by those in charge. The banquet was excellently managed, the guests were served promptly and generously and the provisions were abundant, and of the choicest order.

In the evening the lecture of the afternoon was repeated for the adults and the Temple was crowded to the occasion. The older folk gave every evidence of thoroughly appreciating the lecture and the many beautiful slides. The band entertained the members between the time of the banquet and the commencement of the lecture.

On Thursday night the initial meeting of the anniversary was held and was largely attended. At that meeting the enthusiasm which still continues was evidenced by all present. Splendid addresses were given by His Honour Judge Hucke, His Worship Magistrate Dumble and His Worship Mayor Buller. All three addresses were interesting in the extreme and all spoke well of the work that the Salvation Army had done since its establishment here.

To-night will be the occasion of the old timers' meeting and a reception to Staff Captain and Mrs. McAmmond, formerly of the local Army, and who will take part in the anniversary services. In connection with the "old-timer" associations of the meeting to-night, the band will play old tunes and will use old instruments. The old members of the Army will be present in full force.

To-morrow at 6.30 o'clock the Army will march, headed by the band. At 7 a.m. service will be held in the Christian Science Church on Aylmer Street, which was the first Temple ever used by the Salvation Army here. The eleven o'clock service will be addressed by Staff Captain McAmmond and at three o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., and Ald. Johnson will speak. To-morrow evening the service will be conducted by Staff Capt. McAmmond of Toronto, Assistant Social Secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada.

Athletic Club Meeting On Monday Night

There will be a meeting of the Peterborough Athletic Club in the Y. M. C. A. on Monday night at 7.30 o'clock and every member is requested to be present. The committee appointed to look into the club room question will report to this meeting and the Club will decide upon the next steps to be taken. Every member should make it a point to be present at this meeting.

AN EASTER ODE

(By F. A. Conners, Pastor of Park Street Church).

O let the joy of Heaven to-day,
Be shed upon our earthly way.
Since Christ our Lord has risen;
Out of the pit of death He came,
The subject of our guilt and shame,
His life so freely given.

All our guilt on Him was laid,
All our debt by Him was paid,
He died that we might live;
Such was the way that He should go,
For by our sin we made it so,
That He, His life should give.

The gloomy grave could never hold
Him, who was thus by sinners sold,
For He was God incarnate;
The power of Satan thus was spent,
For all who will of sins repent,
E'en though they be as garnet.

All glory unto Him be given,
Who intercedes for us in Heaven,
His name we will adore;
He is our Prophet, Priest and King,
Unto His cross we'll ever cling,
And praise Him ever-more.

In His victory we rejoice,
As we sing with heart and voice,
"Glory to His Name";
Till this life on earth shall cease,
And our souls arrive in peace,
Ever be the same.

SPLENDID WRESTLING BOUTS AT Y.M.C.A.

Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. Wrestlers Won Every Bout But Local Boys Made a Good Showing—Fine Programme of Bouts Delighted Big Crowd.

115 class—R. Hood, Toronto Central Y.M.C.A., threw Harold Lees, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.

As will be seen from the above list, the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. wrestlers cleaned up every bout in the City championships in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium on Thursday night, but the less experienced Peterborough contingent gave them enough opposition to make the programme one of the best of the kind ever seen in Peterborough. There was a splendid crowd, and the bouts were thoroughly enjoied. Peterborough's representatives considering the fact that they were in competition with experienced wrestlers, the majority of them either Toronto or Ontario champions, gave a fine account o fthemselves and their work is a credit to Mr. H. B. Cowan, the instructor of the local Y.M.C.A. wrestling class.

The conditions were that the contestants should wrestle six minutes. If there was no fall in that time they went on for another six minutes, after a rest, with the chance of a third period of three minutes.

The first bout brought together Harold Lees of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. and R. Hood, the Toronto city champion, in the 115 pound class, and the two gave a remarkably pretty exhibition. Hood was very fast and showed a very effective knowledge of the sciasor hold, using his legs to great advantage. During the first six minutes he had Lees in difficulties with first a body and then a head scissors, but the local boy exhibited a very clever defence and broke out of some dangerous holds. The first six minutes went without a fall. In the second period Hood kept up his aggressive work and finally succeeded after 4.15 minutes' wrestling in pressing Lees shoulders to the mat with a scissors and arm hold.

A. Hartiken, the Finlander wrestler of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A., and A. Durnan, city champion of Toronto, provided a splendid bout in the 125 class. Durnan, like all the Toronto wrestlers, showed a marked proficiency in his leg work, but Hartiken is very strong and gave the Toronto boy a great battle. In the first six minutes Hartiken forced himself out of several dangerous scissors holds and twice he had Durnan in difficulties with a hold that Referee Cowan made him break on the ground that it was a punishing hold. In the next period after some pretty wrestling, Durnan clapped a scissors hold on Hartiken's body and after a minute's effort to wriggle loose, the local boy conceded the bout. Referee Cowan explained that Hartiken had strained a side muscle in training, and the hold secured by Durnan was too painful to struggle against. Durnan informed the crowd that Hartiken was a good boy and a comer.

The 145 lb. Class.

The 145 pound class provided some pretty wrestling. The first bout brought together Mel Turner of Peterborough and T. Harpley of the Toronto Centrals. Turner gave away nearly ten pounds, but gave a very good account of himself. Harpley showed speed and cleverness, however, and finally after about five and a half minutes' wrestling threw Turner with an arm scissors and arm hold.

Andrew Gibson, the Ontario champion, lost little time in throwing W. Scott o fthe local Y.M.C.A. The first two minutes were very even, Scott making a beautiful recovery after Gibson had pinned with a scissors hold. Both men sparng to their feet at this stage, and Gibson, catching Scott off his guard, suddenly slammed him to the fat and secured a fall.

Gibson and Harpley came together in the finals and it was the feature bout of the evening. Both boys are very fast and clever, but Gibson, whose muscular development borders on the abnormal, was the stronger, and his superior strength stood him in good stead. The pair wrestled two six minute periods wthout a fall, but Gibson succeeded in flooring his opponent after a minute and one half's wrestling in the third bout.

A Good Exhibition.

Dave Forbes of Peterborough, and M. Walsh of Toronto, wrestled an exhibition bout in the 135 lb. class, and it was a splendid tussle. Honours were about even in the first six minute period, but after three minutes' work in the second period, Forbes conceded the bout to his opponent.

There was no local entry for the 158 lb. class to meet Alex. Gibson, the Toronto middleweight champion, but his brother Anrrew, the 145 lb. champion, consented to go on and give a five minute exhibition, and the two brothers put up an interesting argument.

Walsh and Durnan also gave a ten minute exhibition, showing the various holds and methods to break them. They are a very clever pair of wrestlers and received a big hand from the crowd.

The programme was varied with a blind-fold pillow fight, and a blind-fold boxing bout that were responsible for roars of daughter.

Mr. H. B. Cowan refereed the wrestling bouts very satisfactorily.

SILVER CUP FOR SCHOOL LACROSSE IN CAMPBELLFORD

Referring to the propagation of lacrosse in Campbellford the News says:

There are about 250 boys eligible for school league, anad a committee, consisting of Messrs. S. J. Fisher, chairman; C. A. Moore, secretary; J. O'Donohue, H. B. R. Dryden, and R. J. Garrett, were appointed to have charge of the school boys' league.

The colours for the intermediate team are to be yellow and black.

Mr. Fred J. Smith genrously donated $25 to purchase a silver cup, to be competed for year by year by the teams of the school league, which would be in addition to the medals for each player. Mr. Smith received an ovation for his generosity and interest in the boys taking up the game.

Mr. W. H. Roe, manager of the team, is a candidate for the O.A.L.A. Council.

The outlook for amateur lacrosse in Campbellford this summer is most promising, as it is indeed, throughout the Trent Valley district and the Province.

SAYS REISLING WILL PROVE TO BE A LEMON

Rube Deneau Pays His Respects to New London Manager

Brantford Expositor:

There is going to be a merry battle every time the Brantford and London teams of the Canadian League hook up this season. Rightly or wrongly, Rube Deneau clings to the belief that he received pretty shabby treatment at the hands of the London management last year, and there is no length to which he would not go to beat the Cockneys out in the League race. That he expects to do so is shown by the fact that $200 of his good money is lying in a strong box inLondon waiting for one of the London directors to put up a like amount to say that London will finish in front of the Red Sox. "And they can have that bet just as often as they want to take it," said Rube, in taking matters over while in Brantford. "We are sure going to put the Indian sign on that London outfit. They skinned me out of a couple of hundred last year, but if I can get them to take a chance on the proposition Ihave offered them I will get that couple of hundred and then some."

Don't forget that you will have Doc. Reisling, a former big leaguer, to stack up against," someone suggested.

"Doc. Reisling is not going to bother me a little bit," replied Rube. "He'll be the biggest lemon in the League. Did you ever see a pitcher who could knock off for five or six years, like Reisling has, and then come back and be any good? I have not. I'll tell you what I will do. Any times Reisling cares to pitch against the Red Sox I will go in and pitch against him and will bet him a month's salary that we beat them. Reisling is travelling on his reputation, but he won't have any to travel on when we get through with him. The big League stuff is all right for advertising purposes, but when it comes to winning ball games give me the comers, not the has-beens.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

String Bean Pitcher.

London Advertiser: Probably a more rangy lot of pitchers cannot be found than the men who are trying out at Marietta with London. Riley, Houseman and Hammond are all equal in size with Beebe, and if they make good, London will have the tallest bunch of pitchers in the League. Manning, the Indian, is also due to arrive. In Manning, the players expect to see a human string bean. According to Reisling, he is 6 feet 3 inches tall, and weighs 147 pounds.

Ottawa Journal: The Petes have 23 players on their roster and look to have a formidable collection. In pitchers, with Tracey, Belting, Sterling, Cresswell and Schettler they have a particularly strong outfit. Blount will have to be watched this summer by the other managers.

Marjorie—"She certainly is. She's dancing all the time."

McNeal May Be Handed To Erie Team

ERIE, April 9. — From Charlotte, North Carolina, comes word from Manager Heinie Smith that there are several bright prospects of gaining players of the Erie team of the Canadian League. Smith has already signed up one catcher by the name of John A. Butler, of Worcester, Mass., and indications are favourable that he will get several players from the Buffalo Internationals and the Boston Braves, who are now at Charlotte, on the spring training trip.

One of the most promising youths Smith is angling for as a young catcher by the name of Norman McNeil, who is to be let out by Buffalo. The Bisons have found themselves possessed of too many catchers. They have three old heads in La Longe; Kritchell and Stephens. Manager Clymer acknowledges that McNeil has been doing good work back of the bat. He had the build and the wind, but the position is clogged with veterans and much as he hates to lose the youngster, he finds no alternative. As yet the manager is undecided whether to send him to Wilkesbarre, which team Clymer owns, or farm him out to Erie.

Blessed with an abundance of pitchers Clymer is also forced to cut down the staff. One of the most promising recruits to be let go is a youngster by the name of Car Brown. Brown was offered a berth with the Charlotte team, the Manager of which organization has come to be rather sweet on the youngster, but Brown has refused to remain there. He wants to come to Erie and be near his home, Bemus Point, N.Y.

C. J. Gravelle, a catcher whose home is in Watertown, is another likely candidate Smith is after. Being a former manager of the Bisons and having a close friend in Manager Clymer, Smith is in a position to get just about what he wants from the Buffalo team. He has several deals hanging fire other than the ones mentioned above, but as none have been formally closed no definite word has been received.

With McNeil and Gravelle, together with Butler, Frank Daniels and John Beck, Smith has an array of backstop material that should produce a first-rate regular and a good second string man. Butler looks likely for the regular berth as he is an ex-big leaguer. He recently played with Jersey City in the International.

Random Ravings

A pitcher jumped the Chicago Feds the other day and Joe Tinker didn't even swear.. Probably figured out that the heaver wasn't worth a tinker's cuss.

Rube Deneau says that Dr. Reisling, the new London manager, will be the worst lemon in the League. Considering the number he has handled the genial Rube should be a pretty good judge, too.

Toronto were walloped 12 to 0 at Memphis Thursday. In spite of the fact that Tim Jordan's knee is all right.

Lefty Rogers has signed with Ottawas "at double his last year's salary." If the chesty one had drawn the stipend he thought he was worth he would have made Rockefeller look poverty-striken.

The Property Committee are going to investigate the Plumbing Inspector. Wonder whether they will use the smoke test on him?

Problems For Fans.

Guess the nationality of: 1 Flanagan, 2 Ryberg.

If Rogers is getting double his salary at Ottawa, how much does Merlin Kopp?

If it takes a baseball 3 1-5 seconds to travel from the pitcher to the catcher and out to second base, how many bases did Mack McNeal steal in 1913?

The Canadian League umpires will go into training next week. With three weeks' work at a College for the Blind, the porch-climbing staff should be in good shape for the opening.

Manager Smith, of Erie, claims the best infield in the League. Seven other managers claim the same thing. So we can hand no originality medal to Heinie.

PROSECUTION MAY FOLLOW

The local Police Department is now working on a case which will prove an interesting one if enough evidence can be secured. It is understood that on Wednesday evening last, a number of local young men, with a Toronto companion, who is now in custody, were playing pool for a $125 stake. The police learned of the proceedings and it is likely that a prosecution will follow.

WITH THE CAMERA

The holiday yesterday was taken full advantage of by the local camera enthusiasts. Especially in the morning, with the bright sunshine, were the "snapper" astir. The afternoon also, with its periodic blanks of Old Sol, was suitable, and Jackson Park and other parts of the City were traversed by parties, all intent on getting pictures. The roads were soft, but this was no deterrent to the camera fiends.

Only One-Third of 'Varsity Students From Toronto

The development of Toronto University into a provincial institution in the last few years is shown by the latest figures of attendance, which have appeared. Contrary to usual belief not one-third of the students live permanently in Toronto in spite of the number of families who annually move into that city from all parts of the Province to enable the members to take advantage of the educational opportunities.

Out of 3,498 students in Toronto University, who come from every part of the Province, only 1,286 or approximately one-third reside permanently in Toronto.

SAYS THE BIBLE HELL IS THE GRAVE

Pastor T. P. Yates, of Hamilton Declares That Beyond Lies Eternity For the Good and Death For the Wicked

FIRST BIBLE LECTURE

The I.B.S.A. series of public Bible lectures opened at the Royal Theatre here yesterday with a sermon on "Beyond the Grave." The audience gave marked attention throughout the entire discourse which lasted an hour, though it is said that to some the time seemed much shorter. The speaker handled his subjct in a very attractive manner and presented some thoughts that seemed quite new to many present.

He remarked that while no one could speak from personal experience on what lies beyond the grave, we nevertheless have a vivid description of what we are to expect in the Great Beyond presented to us in the inspirted writings of the Old and New Testaments. He appealed to these alone for proof, preferring not to build upon any of the creeds or other "traditions of men." These, he said, may well represent a measure of light previously attained, but at best they must be infrior to God's own Word.

The Dead Are Unconscious.

Many Scriptures were quoted proving that the dead are dead and not alive in some far-off place, as was once supposed. Those who are sleeping the sleep of death are absolutely unconscious, and will not be awakened till the Resurrection. "The dead know not anything." (Ecclesiastes 9:5.) "For in death there is no remembrance of Thee; in the grave who shall give Thee thanks?" (Psalms 6:5.) It is a mistake to suppose that our dead friends are wandering around as spooks, haunting houses and cemeteries, longing for the Resurrection when they shall again receive bodies. Nor can we believe that they are alive and in Heaven, for Jesus Himself says: "No man hath ascended up to Heaven, but He that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man." (John 3:13.) The speaker then cited many passages of Scripture to the effect that the dead are in Hades, the grave, asleep and unconscious; that the fleshy body returns to dust, while the soul or sentient being ceases to operate, remaining in a dormant or comatose condition till the Resurrection.

What About Hell?

A ripple of laughter spread over the audience, when the speaker, in a manner peculiar to himself, pictured the old-time Hell of the Dark Ages. The fire-proof devils with horns, pitchforks, cloven hoofs, forked tongues and tails, shovelling coal and roasting poor mortals on their spits, are creations of error, not to be found in the Bible at all. It is on account of these wrong conceptions that many have supposed that the Devil lives in Hell and that good people never go there, whereas the Scriptures point out that Jesus went to Hell, but say nothing of the Devil ever being there.

The Hell of the Bible was shown to be a condition of unconsciousness—death, oblivion. The word Hell is translated from the Hebrew word Sheal and the corresponding Greek word Hades. The Greek word Gehenna, improperly translated Hell, is symbolical of the final destruction of the incorrigibly wicked. The word sheol, occurring 65 times in the Old Testament, is 31 times translated hell, 31 times grave and 3 times pit. With this proof that Hell and Grave are one and the same thing, the speaker called attention to Acts 2:27 and its context as a proof that Jesus went to Hell, or the grave. In the Resurrection Death and Hell (margin, "the grave") will deliver up the dead which are in them.—Revelations 20:13.

The wages of sin was alluded to as death, and not eternal life in torture, as some have supposed. (Romans 6:23.) The original sentence was: "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." (Genesis 2:17.) Adam died within that very thousand-year day. Nothing was said about his being roasted for ever in fire if disobedient, or of his ever getting to Heaven if he was good. Death simply means destruction, or cessation of life. The eternal punishment referred to in the Bible is eternal death, fire and brimstone being the symbol used to portray the utter destruction which will be metted out to the willfully wicked. "They shall be as though they had not been."—Obadiah 16.

What Lies Beyond?

The speaker contended that man could never hope for life beyond the grave, had not God in love planned his redemption. In God's due time the curse of death will be removed, and mankind will be brought again from the tomb. All will be granted an opportunity of attaining eternal life. To the Church, now in the process of selection, will be given the position of everlasting life in Heaven with the Lord. The Lord has gone to prepare a place for the members of His Church, that where He is there they may be also. We are not to think that all others will be eternally lost, for the Scriptures in no uncertain terms assure us that this earth also will be populated throughout all eternity. "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." "The earth abideth forever."—Ecclesiastes 1:4.

The speaker left many of the details of God's Plan of Salvation for consideration by future speakers. He assured the audience that these points will be carefully treated in the coming lectures, and urged upon all the importance of hearing next week's sermon on "Christ's Second Coming: Why? How? When?" A cordial invitation was extended to all to attend the entire series. It is believed that these public lectures will arouse much interest in personal Bible study.

GERMAN COURT DEFINES KISSING

LEIPZIG, April 10 — What is a kiss? When is it offensive, and when inoffensive? Here are the answers as laid down by the Supreme Court of the German Empire:

"A kiss is a reaction upon the body of another.

"A kiss aways requires the permission of the person kissed.

"Without such permission one may kiss only if one is sure of the other's tacit consent, as in the cases of parts, children and lovers.

"If the kissee is not only coy, but greatly objects, it is to be assumed that the kiss is considered as illegal interference with his or her personal freedom and a violation of his or her honour.

"Anybody who inflicts a kiss in such circumstances is guilty of assault and battery."

Stars For The Week

The moon rose Saturday at 10.56 o'clock and set at 5.57 Sunday morning. During the week the moon will rise about half an hour later each morning and will set about one hour later in the evening than the day before.

On Thursday next the planet Neptune will be at 'quadrature,' that is just one-quarter way round the heavens from the sun.

On Friday the moon will be at 'last quarter'.

Neptune is the farthest out known body in the solar system that is going around the sun. Neptune's distance fro mthe sun is computed to be 30 1-2 times greater than that of the earth. He takes nearly 165 years to complete one circuit of his orbit. His diameter is four and a half times greater than that of the earth and though Neptune's volume is 85 times greater than that of the earth, his density is ess than any other body in the solar system—only about that of water—so that it would be necessary for anybody living there to be able to swim. But even the enjoyment of this exercise would seem doubtful on Neptune for the analysis of his light shows that though the most of it is reflected sunlight he is so hot he gives out some of his own. The surface of this planet is so covered with thick clouds of vapour and steam and the distance from us is so great that the aid of the greatest telescopes have been as yet ineffectual in determining whether or not the planet rotates on its exis. Neptune is a standing proof of the truth of Newton's statement of the power of gravitation; that every particle of matter in the universe attracts every other particle. For though Neptune is more than a thousand million miles away from his nearest known neighbour Uranus, the fact of his existence became known from the way Uranus was noticed to be answering to the pull of some hitherto unknown body, by swerving out of his orbital path. When the telescope was pointed along the direction in space in which the disturbing influence seemed to come, for the first time Neptune revealed himself as a planet in the solar system to the astonished gaze of the astronomer.

The first comet of this year to be discovered a few days ago has shifted his place among the stars sufficiently for the mathematician to compute his orbit. It is now visible in the telescope among the stars that pass our meridian to the south a few degrees below the equator at about 11 o'clock at night, moving east and north from the constellation Libra. His 'perihelion passage' when he swings around the sun at his nearest point, is computed to be on May the 31st next. At that time the distance from the sun will be about 120,000,000 miles or one-third greater than that of the earth, at a point about 30,000,000 miles outside of the earth's orbit.

Farmers Do Not Know The New By-law

An Examiner reporter interviewed a number of the farmers and their wives on the market this morning in regard to the new ruling that requires every person offering goods for sale to display his or her name on their basket or, if on the outside market, on their waggon.

"Have you heard of this new regulation?" askd the reporter after outlining it to a woman who comes from near Cavanville.

"No, it's new to me," she said.

And this was the response from three or four others, indicating that the farmers practically know nothing of the amendment to the market by-law which goes into force on May 1st.

The point behind these statements is simply that the by-law must be made known, and in a manner that will win the farmers, not lead to resentment. Before terminating his office as market clerk, Mr. Walter Fisher stated that the city should do all in its power to please the farmers, and to encourage them to bring in their produce.

One woman referred to an incident of several years ago when butter was examined for its weight. The brusque manner in which it was handled was still fresh in her memory, and her recollection demonstrated that repeated occurrences of this nature have been more or less responsible for the suspicion which lurks in the minds of the country people toward new regulations and their enforcement.

It is felt by those who have the best interests of the market at heart that considerable caution should be exercised by the Council and the authorities in their dealings with the farmers. If new rules are to be made, surely the farmers should be given every consideration that would tend to encourage their interest in the market.

H. H. COOK IS DEAD

He Was Liberal Member of Parliament for Several Years

WANTED TO BUILD C. P. R.

TORONTO, April 13.—In the death of Henry Herman Cook, which occurred yesterday at his late residence, 30 Dowling avenue, Canada loses one of its most conspicuous political figures.

Born in Williamsburg, Dundas County, Ont., on April 27, 1837, Mr. Cook entered the lumber business in 1858 and was at the time of his death president of the Ontario Lumber Co. He was one of the syndicate which offered to build the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1880. His family has been prominently identified with the lumber trade for many years.

Mr. Cook first entered Parliament in 1872 for North Simcoe, which constituency he represented as a Liberal in the Dominion House until 1878, when he entered the Ontario Legislature. He resigned his seat in the Legislature in 1882 when he returned to the Dominion House as member for East Simcoe, which seat he held until 1890. During this period he contested no less than eleven elections, winning six and being defeated five times.

He afterwards entered the House of Commons as a follower of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1896, and a few years later he came prominently before the public when he made a break-away from his party owing to the refusal of Sir Wilfrid to appoint him to the Senate, an honor he frankly believed to be due him. His criticisms of the Laurier administration created no small sensation at the time.

Mr. Cook's death came quite unexpectedly to his relatives and friends. He maintained his usual good health until Monday last, when he took to his bed with some slight ailment. On Friday he was quite well again, although still confined to his room. At three o'clock Saturday morning he was seized with apoplexy and never regained consciousness, expiring at 7.15 last night.

He is survived by two daughters and four grandchildren, the daughters being Mrs. Frank E. Macdonald and Mrs. Norreys Worthington, wife of the late Col. Norreys Worthington.

The funeral will be held privately on Wednesday.

NEW BUREAU PLANNED.

Canada Will Adopt U. S. Scheme For Analysis of Foods Says McGill.

CINCINNATI, O., April 13.—That the system of the United States Bureau of Chemistry will be adopted by Canada was the statement made yesterday by Dr. A. McGill, chief chemist of the Canadian Inland Revenue Department, with headquarters at Ottawa. Dr. McGill, who was one of the delegates to the convention of the National Chemical Society, is in this city on an inspection tour. He called upon Chief Chemist Leo Forst of the local Bureau of Chemistry in the Federal building Saturday and inspected the laboratory.

Dr. McGill, in announcing that he expected to follow the system in this country in the matter of branch laboratories, said that he is preparing to establish branch laboratories in Canada to facilitate the handling of imports. He stated that he intended establishing laboratories at Halifax, Vancouver, Winnipeg, and possibly Montreal.

Scare Brings Her Voice Back.

ROCKPORT, Mass., April 13.—Miss Sophronia Lowe hadn't been able to utter a sound since last Thanksgiving, a few days after her 65th birthday. This was because of a throat affection caused by a heavy cold.

But Miss Lowe can talk now—high or low, shrill or soft. She rented and occupied half of a large house. Not long ago a tenant was found for the other half. Miss Lowe didn't know it. Saturday she started to go to the attic of the house and met the other tenant.

He was a man. And Miss Lowe was so shocked, besides being pent up since Thanksgiving, that she screamed. And right from that instant she has been able to talk volubly. And has.

Will Teach Bulgarian Nurses.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Miss Mabel T. Boardman, head of the American Red Cross, announced yesterday the selection of Miss Helen Scott Hay, an enrolled American Red Cross nurse, now in charge of the Western Suburban Hospital at Chicago, as superintendent of the proposed school for trained nurses at Sofia, Bulkaria.

The appointment is the result of an appeal made to the American Red Cross by Queen Eleanora of Bulgaria, who is to visit this country next month. Queen Eleanora asked help in instructing Bulgarian women in nurse work. She herself was a Red Cross nurse during the Russo-Japanese and Balkan wars.

Lit Fire To Hide Theft.

BRANTFORD, April 13.—The grocery store on Rawdon street, owned by Alfred Teague, was burglarized on Friday night, and to cover up the robbery an attempt was made to burn it down. When the owner went in the morning he found that the place had been soaked with coal oil and the cupboard was ablaze with fire. He soon had this put out, and then found that a good quantity of groceries had been taken.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"But days passed, a week, and no answer came. My uncle—the only relative remaining in which we could hope to awaken any interest, or rather, the only one whose interest would be worth awakening, he being a millionaire and unmarried—declined, it appeared, any communication with one so entirely removed from his sympathies; and the disappointment of it broke my mother's heart. Before my wedding day came she was lying in the bare cemetery I had passed so often with a cold dread in my young and bounding heart.

"With her loss the one true and unselfish bond which held me to my lover was severed, and, unknown to him—(perhaps he hears it now for the first time)—I had many hours of secret hesitation which might have ended in a positive refusal to marry him if I had not been afraid of his anger and the consequences of an open break. With all his protestations of affection and the very ardent love he made me, he had not succeeded in rousing my affections, but he had my fears. I knew that to tell him to his face I would not marry him would mean death to him and possibly to myself. Such intuition, young as I was, did I have of his character, though I comprehended so little real range of his mind and the unswerving trend of his ambitious nature.

"So my wedding-day came and we were united in the very hotel where I had so long served in a menial capacity. The social distinctions in such a place being small and my birth and breeding really placing me on a par with my employer and his family, I was given the parlour for this celebration and never, never shall I forget its mean and bare look, even to my untutored eyes; or how lonely those far hills looked, through the small-paned window I faced; or what a shadow seemed to fall across them as the parson uttered those fateful words, so terrible to one whose heart is not in them: What God hath joined together let no man put asunder. Death and not life awaited me on that bleak hillside, or so I thought, though the bridegroom at my side was the handsomest man I had ever seen and had rather exceeded than failed in his devotion to me as a lover.

"The ceremony over, I went upstairs to make my final preparations for depature. No bridesmaids or real friends had lent joy to the occasion; and when I closed that parlour door upon my bridegroom and the two or three neighbours and boon companions with whom he was making merry, I found myself alone with my dead heart and a most unwelcome future. I remember, as the lock clicked and the rude hall, ruder even than the wretched half-furnished room I had just left, opened before me, a sensation of terror at leaving even this homely refuge and a half-formed wish that I was going back to my dishwashing in the kitchen. It was therefore with a shock, which makes my brain reel yet, that I saw, lying on a little table which I had to pass, a letter directed to myself, bearing the postmark, Detroit. What might there not be in it? What? What?

"Gasping as much with fear as delight, I caught up the letter, and, rushing with it to my room, locked myself in and tore open the envelope. A single sheet fell out; it was signed with the name I had heard whispered in my ear from early childhood, and always in connection with riches and splendor and pleasures,—it was rapture to dream of. This was an agitation in itself, but the words! the words! I have never told them to mortal being, but I must tell them now; I remember them as I remember the look of my child's face when she was first put in my arms, the child—"

She had underrated her strength. She broke into a storm of weeping which shook to the very soul one of the two men who listened to her, though he made no move to comfort her or allay it. The alienation thus expressed produced its effect, and, stricken deeper than the fount of tears, she suddenly choked back every sob and took up the thread of her narrative with the calmness born of despair.

"These were the words, these and no others:

"'If my niece will break all ties and come to me completely unhampered, she may hope to find a permanent home in my house and a close hold upon my affections.

Ira T. Houghtaling.'

"Unhampered! with the marriage-vow scarcely cold on my lips! Without tie! and a husband waiting below to take me to his home on the hillside—a hillside so bare and bleak that the sight of it had sent a shudder to my heart as the wedding ring touched my finger. The irony of the situation was more than I could endure, and alone, with my eyes on the comfortless heavens, showing gray and cold through the narrow panes of my windows, I sank to the floor insensible.

"When I came to myself I was still alone, and the twilight a little more pronounced than when my misery had turned it to blackest midnight. Rising, I read that letter again, and, plainly as the acknowledgment betrays the selfishness lying at the basis of my character, the temptation which thereup seized me had never an instant of relenting or one conscientious scruple to combat it. I simply, at that stage in my life and experience, could not do otherwise than I did. Saying to myself that vows, as empty of heart as mine, were void before God and man, I sat down and wrote a few words to the man whose step on the stair I dreaded above everything else in the world; and, leaving the note on the table, unlocked my door and looked out. The hall connecting with my room was empty, but not so the lower one. There I could hear voices and laughter, Mr. Brainard's loud above all the rest,—a fatal sound to me, cutting off all escape in that direction. But another way offered and that one near at hand. Communicating with the very hall in which I stood was an outside staircase running down to the road—a means of entering and leaving the house which I never see now wherever I may encounter it, without a gush of inward shame and terror, so instinctive and so sharp that I have never been able to hide it from any one whose eye might chance to be upon me at the moment. But that night I was conscious of no shame, barely of any terror, only of the necessity for haste. The train on which I was determined to fly was due in a little less than an hour at a station two miles down the road.

"That I should be followed farther than the turbulent stream which crossed the road only a quarter of a mile from the hotel, I did not fear. For in the hurried note I had left behind me, I had bidden them to look for me there, saying that I had been precipitate in marrying one I did not really love, and, overcome by a sense of my mistake, I was resolved on death.

"A lie! but what was a lie to me then, who saw in my life with this man an amelioration of my present state, but an amelioration only, while in the prospects held out to me by my uncle I foresaw not only release from a hated union, but every delight which my soul had craved since my mother could talk to me of wealth and splendour.

"Behold me, then, stealing down the side of the house in a darkness which during the last few minutes had become impenetrable. A shadow, where all was shadowy, I made for the woods and succeeded in reaching their shelter just as there rose in the distance behind me that most terrible of all sounds to a woman's ear, a man's loud cry of anguish and rage."

She was not looking at that man now, but I was. As these words left her lips, Mr. Steele's hand crept up and closed over his heart, though his face was like that of a marble image set in immovable lines. I feared him, I admired him, and found myself still looking at him as she went gaspingly on:

"Reckless of the dangers of the road, fearing nothing but what pressed upon me from behind, I flew straight for the stream, on whose verge I meant then to stop, and, having by some marvel of good luck or Providence reached it without mishap, I tore the cloak from my shoulders, and, affixing one end to the broken edge of the bridge, flung the other into the water. Then with one loud ear-piercing shriek thrown back on the wind—see!—I tell all—I leave out nothing—I fled away in the direction of the station.

"For some reason I had great confidence in the success of this feint and soon was conscious of but one fear, and that was being recognized by the station-master, who knew my face and figure even if he did not know my new city-made dress. So when I had made sure by the clock visible from the end window that I was in ample time for the expected train, I decided to remain in the dark at the end of the platform till the cars were about starting, and then to jump on and buy my ticket from the conductor.

"But I never expected such an interminable wait. Minute after minute went by without a hint of preparation for the advancing train. The hour for leaving arrived, passed, and not a man had shown himself on the platform. Had a change been made in the time-table? If so what a prospect lay before me! Autumn nights are chilly in Minnesota, and, my cloak having been sacrificed, I found poor protection in my neat but far from warm serge dress. However, I did not fully realize my position till another passenger arrived late and panting; and I heard some one shout out to him from the open door that an accident had occurred below and that it would be five hours at least before the train would come through.

"Five hours! and no shelter in sight save the impossible one of the station itself. How could I pass away that time! How endure the cold and fatigue? By pacing to and fro in the road? I tried it, resolutely tried it, for an hour, then a new terror, a new suspense, gripped me, and I discovered that I could never live through the hours; never, in fact, take the train when it came without knowing what had happened in Boone and whether the feint on which I relied had achieved its purpose. There was time to steal back, time to see and hear what would satisfy me of my own safety; and then to have some purpose in my movement! How much better than this miserable pacing back and forth just to start the stagnating blood and make the lagging moments endurable!

"So I turned again toward Boone. I was not in the mood to fear darkness or any encounter save one, and experienced hesitation only when I found myself reapproaching the bridge. Shadows which had protected me until now failed me there, and it was with caution I finally advanced and emerged upon the open spot where the road crossed the river. But even this was not needed. In the wide stretch before me cut by the inky stream, I saw no signs of life, and it was not till I was on the bridge itself that I discerned in the black hollows below the glint of a lantern, lighting up the bending forms of two or three men who were dragging at something which heaved under their hands with the pull of the stream.

"It was a sight which has never left me, but one which gave wings to my feet that night and sent me flying on till a fork in the road brought me to a standstill. To the left lay the hotel. I could see its windows glimmering with faint lights, while, away to the right, there broke upon me from the hillside a solitary sparkle; but this sparkle came from the house where, but for the letter hidden in my heart, I should be sitting at this moment before my own fireside.

"What moved me? God knows. It may have been duty; it may have been curiosity; it may have been only dread to know the worst and know it at once; but seeing that single gleam I began to move toward it, and, before I was aware, I had reached the house, edged up to its unshaded window and taken a frightened look within.

"I was prepared and yet unprepared for what I saw. Within, standing alone, with garments dripping, gazing in frenzy at a slip of paper which clung wet about his hand, stood my husband. My words to him! I could see it in his eyes and the desperation which lit up all his features.

A Human Churn

WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach"—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 46). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clean—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alterative in blood-taint of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

Sold by all medicine dealers in liquid or tablet form, or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y., and a trial box will be mailed you.

Another Lady Thinks "Fruit-a-tives" Greatest Tonic in The World.

HAGERSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 26th, 1913.

I can highly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" because they did me an awful lot of good. About four years ago, I commenced taking "Fruit-a-tives" for a general break-down and they did me a world of good. We bought a good many dollars' worth, but they did all that your advertising claims for them, and as I said before, I cannot speak too highly for them. Their action is so pleasant, compared with other medicines, that I am glad to say so and I trust that some other women may start taking "Fruit-a-tives" for I know the results will be all that you claim".

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N.B. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

Couldn't Be Done.

Lord Sheffield was once walking down Piccadilly with a friend, to whom he explained that it was impossible for anyone to pick his pocket without his knowledge. Lord Sheffield's pocket-handkerchief was hanging out, and his friend, having diverted his attention, quietly abstracted it. Instantly Lord Sheffield collared a seedy-looking man who was passing and charged him with the theft; but, the friend producing the handkerchief and explaining the joke, the unfortunate individual whom his lordship had so unceremoniously seized was released with many apologies. The man beat a hasty retreat, and shortly afterwards Lord Sheffield discovered that he had lost his pocketbook!

Fortunes For Boys.

Earl Cawdor's death leaves his two sons, Lord Emlin, aged 13, and the Hon. Andrew C. Campbell, aged 6, the wealthiest brothers in England. By the time the boys are 21 years of age each will have $5,000,000 at his disposal. A romantic figure in history has passed away, the death of Earl Cawdor at the age of 43 years, after a long illness, at the Kingston-on-Thames Nursing Home, recalling the name of the Thane of Cawdor in Shakespeare's "Macbeth." He succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1891.

OPENS CREATION DRAMA IN LOUISVILLE

Pastor Russell Conducts Exhibitions Himself.

HE SPEAKS ON RESURRECTION

Over 35,000 See and Hear In One Day the Story of the Bible as Presented by This Truly Great Drama — In Forenoon Pastor Russell Preached on That Feature of His Photo-Drama Which Relates to "the Chiefest Resurrection," Which Began With Jesus—His Footstep Followers Share In It With Him—Then Will Come Another Class on the Spirit Plane—Then Will Follow the Resurrection of the Ancient Worthies—Remainder of World Will Be Resurrected Gradually During Thousand Years of Messiah's Reign.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

Louisville, Ky., April 12.—In the Shubert Masonic Theatre here this afternoon Pastor Russell presented his Photo-Drama of Creation. It is truly a wonderful presentation of the Bible narrative. Nothing of the kind has ever before been shown here. It is interesting to the point of fascination. One desires to see it over and over again.

It is now reported successful in more than thirty of the best theatres of the principal cities, where crowds are the rule. Over 35,000 attend in one day, and the numbers are rapidly rising.

In the forenoon Pastor Russell delivered a discourse on "The Chiefest Resurrection," from the text, "There shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust."—24:15.

The Pastor remarked that Easter Sunday, throughout the civilized world, stands as the reminder of the resurrection of Jesus; and yet there has perhaps never been a time when the profesed followers of Jesus have believed less in the Resurrection of the Dead than at present. This shows a great falling away from the faith once delivered to the saints. The Resurrection hope is the great hope which the Bible sets before mankind.

The Pastor cited various Scriptures to prove that death is the penalty of sin—the curse which came upon Adam and all his race because of Adam's disobedience to God in Eden. He showed that God's promise to roll away the curse, and to give blessing instead, includes every member of the human family. He reasoned, and produced Bible proofs in support, that the blessing of all the families of the earth, therefore, will mean the resurrection of the dead—the resurrection of Adam and every member of his race.

The earliest information on God's part that He would do anything for man's recovery from the death sentence, was given when our first parents were expelled from Eden. There God vaguely declared that at some future time the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This was merely a ray of hope, with no intimation of how it would be accomplished.

God's first definite statement of what He purposed to do for Adam and his race was made to Abraham two thousand years after sin had entered the world. To Abraham God made known His future good intentions toward Adam and all of his posterity. He said, "I purpose to bless all the families of the earth. Walk before Me and be thou faithful; and the blessing shall come to the human family through thee and thy posterity." After Abraham had

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

CURED A BAD ATTACK OF ECZEMA.

All skin diseases such as Eczema, Salt Rheum, Tetter, Rash, Boils, Pimples, and Itching Skin Eruptions, are always caused from the blood being in a bad condition, and it is impossible to eradicate them from the system unless you put your blood into good shape. This you can very easily do without the slightest trouble by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

It drives out all the humor from the blood, and makes it pure and rich, and not only are the unsightly diseases removed, and a bright clean complexion produced, but the entire system is renovated and invigorated at the same time.

Mrs. G. A. Day, Somerville, N.B., writes:—"Last spring I had a bad attack of Eczema. I tried several patent medicines as well as the medicine of a physician, but they seemed to make the disease worse. I was advised to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and I did so with the result that in two weeks time the sores began to disappear. I continued to take it until I had taken three bottles and they worked a complete cure."

ensured them, and confirmed the previous assurances and gave His oath to prove the certainty of the whole matter. The words were: "In thee and in thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

God knew, when He made the Promise to Abraham, that his Spiritual Seed, The Christ, would not appear even in the flesh for more than two thousand years. He knew also that it would be nearly two thousand years after that before the Spiritual Seed would be given the necessary power and authority to bind Satan and to release the slaves of sin from the tomb and from the shackles of ignorance, superstition and weakness. But it was neither necessary nor expedient that all this should be told to Abraham. It was sufficient that the friend of God should know of a surety that a blessing was coming, and that his seed would be identified with that work of blessing mankind.

God did, indeed, give a typical lesson respecting the fact that there would be two seeds of Abraham; one, Heavenly, and the other, earthly. Without explaining the matter to Abraham, God stated it so that it would be written aforetime for the information of the Household of Faith of this Gospel Age. He said, "Thy Seed shall be as the stars of Heaven, and as the sand of the seashore." One of these seeds would be developed under the Law—by being required to obey the Divine Law, and thus being helped up toward perfection. The other Seed, the Heavenly, would be by grace, not by Law. Good works would be accounted to the Heavenly Seed on the basis of faith.

St. Paul calls our attention to these two seeds, and assures us that the Promise of God made to Abraham appertains to both the Heavenly, Spiritual Seed, and the earthly, human-nature class. His words are: "Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end that the Promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the Law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham."—Romans 4:16.

God allowed Abraham's posterity, through Jacob, to go down to Egypt, and there to become a nation of bondmen. Later, He brought them to Mount Sinai, where He made a Law Covenant with them, Moses serving as its Mediator. In that Covenant God promised that if the Israelites would keep His Law perfectly He would use them as His holy nation for the blessing of all nations. But God knew that Israel could not keep that Covenant into which they entered.

God had a double purpose in entering into that Covenant with Israel. (1) It served to show them that they were sinners, who could not keep the Law and who could not be blessed themselves by anything that they could do; and that hence they could not expect to be used of God in the blessing of other peoples. Additionally, it taught a similar lesson to all others who would subsequently know about the arrangement. That one great lesson was that God's Law is perfect, and obedience to it requires perfection, and that no man is perfect; hence no man is able to keep the Law of God; hence no man is entitled to eternal life; for God purposes to give eternal life only to the perfect.

(2) Another object was that the Law Covenant and everything appertaining thereto were typical, and pointed forward to glorious antitypes, which would bring in the real blessings.

The Law Covenant typified the New Law Covenant of the future, which will be in operation for all the families of the earth during the thousand years of Christ's reign. The Mediator of that New Covenant will be the antitypical Moses—The Christ—Jesus the Head, and the Church His Body, enthroned in power and great glory as the antitypical Melchizedek — a Priest upon His Throne. As the typical Covenant was inaugurated by the sacrifice of bulls and goats, so the antitypical Covenant, the New Law Covenant, will be inaugurated upon the basis of "better sacrifices" than these. As the typical Covenant had its Day of Atonement for the sins of the people, so the antitypical Covenant will have a much greater Atonement Day.

The offering of the "better sacrifices" takes place during the early part of the antitypical Atonement Day, which began eighteen hundred years ago and is not yet completed. The great Sin-Offering was that of Jesus, finished at Calvary; but His secondary offerings, as our great High Priest, have continued ever since; and during this period He has been offering up the members of His Body, justified through His precious sacrifice. These, the Apostle declares, are holy and acceptable unto God through Jesus Christ. (1 Peter 2:5.) These sacrifices, because offered by their great Redeemer and Advocate.

Soon, we believe, the antitypical sacrifices will all be slain. Soon all the members will be glorified with their Head, their Lord Jesus, beyond the veil. This is the First Resurrection. The change of Jesus to the Heavenly condition at His resurrection was the beginning of this Chief Resurrection; and the glorious change of the last member of the Body of Christ, the Church, will be the consummation of the Chief Resurrection. Only the blessed and holy will have part in it.

The typical high priest on the Day of Atonement, after having offered the sacrifices, put on his glorious garments, and then appeared to bless the people. The antitype will be when our great High Priest, Jesus, shall have finished offering the last member of His Body, and when that last member shall have passed beyond the veil. Then the entire Melchizedek Priest will put on His official robes as King of glory, and be manifested to the world as the great antitypical Mediator, whose sacrifice satisfies Divine Justice in behalf of all.

Then, for a thousand years, this antitypical Priest, Mediator, King, will be engaged in blessing mankind—uplifting Adam and all his race from sin and death; and thus He will fulfill, as God's Representative, the promise, "God shall wipe away all tears."—Revelation 21:4.

We now see from God's standpoint that the Law Covenant was added because of transgression—to show the natural tendency of sin, the impossibility of any other way of righting the matter than that which God foreordained; namely, through Jesus and His glorious Messianic Kingdom.

We see also that whoever would be the Seed of Abraham with power and authority from God to bless mankind must, first of all, accomplish a redemption—must pay the penalty against mankind. In God's Providence, only one man was tried and sentenced to death—Adam. Therefore when the time came for redeeming mankind it required only one man, The Man Christ Jesus, to die for Adam. As Adam's sin had entailed itself through heredity upon all his children, so the redemptive work of Christ's sacrifice would be co-extensive, and signify reconciliation to all of Adam's race.

Thus it was impossible for anything to be done in the way of blessing mankind or granting a resurrection from the dead until Christ had died for the sin of Adam—the sin of the world. On the third day after Jesus' crucifixion God raised Him from the dead, fully empowered to be the Deliverer of Adam and his race.

But when Jesus arose from the dead, the blessing of the world was not yet due. God, who had foreordained that Jesus should be the antitypical Seed of Abraham, had foreordained also that Jesus should have a Church to be His Joint-heir in the Kingdom of glory and the work of blessing mankind. God foreordained that all who would be of this Body of Christ must show the same spirit that He had—a spirit of faithfulness, loyalty, self-sacrifice. God predestinated that this Church class must be conformed to the image of His Son—must possess similar character.

All through this Gospel Age God has been developing the Church as the Body of the great antitypical Mediator of the New Covenant. These are developed under a special Covenant, different entirely from the New Covenant, made with the world.

Jesus did not become the great Mediator under the Law Covenant; for the Law Covenant offered life; whereas the Covenant under which Jesus qualified called for death. The Church of Christ is developed under the same Covenant under which the Master qualified, which reads: "Gather My saints together unto Me; those that have made a covenant with Me by sacrifice."—Psalm 50:5.

The New Covenant is to be sealed, or made operative, through the blood of Christ. The efficacious sacrifice was that of Jesus Himself. The Church has a share in the sacrifice of Christ as a privilege; for in God's order, only by suffering with Him can she reign with Him; only by becoming dead with Him to the earthly life, earthly interests, can she become alive with Him on the Heavenly, Spiritual plane.

From what we have seen, we are prepared for St. Paul's declaration that Jesus' faithful footstep followers only can share with Him in His Resurrection. (Philippians 3:10.) Only those who are to reign with Him will receive, in the resurrection, the Divine nature, to which He was changed in His resurrection. The Master's words to these are: "Blessed and holy are all they that have part in the Chiefest Resurrection; upon such the Second Death hath no power; they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with Him a thousand years."

Next to the Royal Priesthood of the First Resurrection will be the antitypical Levites. Their resurrection will be to spirit conditions, because they experienced the begetting of the Spirit. Failing to get the highest prize—joint-heirship with the Saviour—they will constitute the Great Company, "whose number no man knows," to serve God in His Temple. As the Levites of old were the servants of the typical priesthood, so these antitypical Levites will be the servants of the Royal Priesthood in the great work of blessing and instructing mankind.

We come now to the resurrection of the world in general, and find that of those who will be resurrected to human perfection there is already selected a preferred class. Theirs will be the chief resurrection on the earthly plane. These are the holy ones of the period preceding the coming of Jesus and the offer of the High Calling of joint-heirship with Him. Some of this glorified class St. Paul mentions as Habakkuk, Daniel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, all the Prophets and those less notable. The last of these was John the Baptist, as Jesus testified, saying, "Among them that are born of women there has not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than he."

These Ancient Worthies, had they lived during this Gospel Age, would doubtless have been members of the Royal Priesthood. As it is, however, being approved of God, they were promised "a better resurrection" than others of humanity. St. Paul says of them: "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, . . . God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." By this the Apostle signifies that the Church must be perfected on the Heavenly plane prior to God's fulfilment of His promises to the Ancient Worthies on the earthly plane.—Hebrews 11:13, 40.

The better resurrection of the Ancient Worthies will be to triumph perfection, to be used by Messiah as earthly representatives of His Spiritual Kingdom. Of this Jesus said to some: "Ye shall see Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and all the Prophets in the Kingdom." They will be seen because they will be human beings. Christ and the Church will be unseen, because they will be spirit beings. As Jesus said "Yet a little while, and the world seeth Me no more." Even the Church sees not her Lord until she is changed.

As death constituted the Divine curse upon Adam, which the whole world inherited by natural laws, and as sickness, sorrow and pain are elements of death, the rolling away of the curse will mean the rolling away of sickness, pain, sorrow and death. God has provided a thousand years for this great work, which will include all the members of the human family, "every man in his own order." Those who have fallen asleep must needs be awakened. Then the world's resurrection program will begin. It will include the progressive steps of uplifting out of sin, ignorance, imperfection, back to God's image and likeness. Only the wilfully wicked shall ultimately be destroyed in the Second Death.

Then every creature in Heaven and earth, everywhere, will be heard saying, "Praise, glory, honor, dominion and might, be unto Him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb forever."

Ladies! Secret To Darken Grey Hair

Bring Back Its Colour and Lustre With Grandma's Sage Tea Recipe

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur ad alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

Thin wispy, grey faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Scotchman Got the Best of Them.

Jack B., who paints portraits and, incidentally, is the father of William Butler Yeats, the Irish poet, is a regular patron of a certain New York restaurant. Among the habitues of this place he has acquired a reputation as a raconteur.

"In my part of Ireland," he tells, "there was a noisy Scotchman whose abuse of everything Irish riled the neighbors considerably. At first, however, he refrained from bragging about Scotland, and we decided to wait until he should be guilty of that indiscretion before acting drastically.

"The chance came at last. He had been swearing at the Irish peat fires, the Irish rain and the Irish spuds, and ended up by saying that, 'Hoot, mon, Scotland was verra deeferent! It was a land flowing with milk and honey.'

"Well, we went for him. Scotland, we pointed out, was known to be a barren waste inhabited by starvelings, and the Biblical quotation he had used could not have been more outrageously misapplied.

"He looked us over with his canny eye. 'Ye're wrang, he said, 'and I can prove it. Scotland flowed with milk, and mayhe honey, all the time that I was there. I left when I was ten months auld'."

Breakfast Before Bed.

The latest freak of London's night life is the evolution of the break-of-day brigade, whose motto is to breakfast before bed.

When the last night club closes at five o'clock in the morning, instead of going home to bed, the latest caper now is for the light-headed brigade to charge on the nearest restaurant or hotel for a cold-gray-dawn breakfast, sometimes visiting two or three places before the streets begin filling with the crowds going to work. As one newspaper poet has paraphrased Tennyson, it is "theirs not to reason why, theirs but to drink or die."

Several west end restaurants report that they have never known such an insistent demand for bacon and eggs and the ordinary working hours of many restaurants are now being rearranged to supply the early morning rush of the merry night hawks.

This Boy And Girl Had St. Vitus' Dance

Boy Lost All Strength and Girl Could Not Speak—Doctor Could Not Help Them—Cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

So great is the strain on the system of the growing child that even with a careful attention to the food supply it is often difficult to keep up vitality.

It is necessary to supply a blood-forming treatment in condensed and easily assimilated form, so that it may be quickly taken up by the blood stream and thereby nourish the feeble nerves back to health and strength. It is difficult to imagine anything so admirably suited to this purpose as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. D. Ardies, Brandon, Mann., writes: "My son, aged fourteen, and little girl of three years, were both stricken with St. Vitus' Dance. The doctor told us what the ailment was, but could not keep them from getting worse and worse, so when I received a book about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. This boy had lost eighteen pounds in two months, and could scarcely take hold of anything. The little girl lost the power of her tongue, and could scarcely speak. I now take pleasure in stating that they are both quite well, and you would never know there had been anything the matter. The boy has gained twenty-five pounds in weight. I am very thankful there is such a medicine on the market, and that I happened to get the little book just when I did."

Mild and gentle in action, and yet wonderfully potent in its restorative influence on the system, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a splendid help to children who are pale, weak, and puny, slow in developing or nervous and irritable. Fifty cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Good Form

Points in Wedding Etiquette.

With the exception of May, which is considered an unlucky month, and Lent, the quiet season, there is no time of the year when wedding ceremonies are not constantly taking place.

As might be expected, the preparations for a wedding take up not a little time and forethought. There are so many small details to be considered, various minor points of etiquette to notice, and a hundred and one things to remember if the actual day is to be gone through by all concerned without hitch or inconvenience.

The magnificence or simplicity of the ceremony depends, of course, on the worldly position of the bride and bridegroom, though certainly the present day tendency is toward a rather disproportionate display, as every year presents become more numerous and costly, the bride's trousseau more elaborate, while immense sums are expended on decorations, catering and such like items.

The popular fashion of white satin and orange blossoms for the bride's attire still holds its own, though there are occasional innovations made such as the wearing of gold or silver lace ends and touches of color on the train, while quite recently, instead of the usual white bouquet or sheaf of lilies, the bride carried a great bunch of crimson roses.

For winter weddings muffs of fur, lace and chiffon have replaced the flowers, or sometimes a prayer book bound in white and silver.

The invitations are sent out a full three or four weeks beforehand in the name of the bride's parents, the bridegroom supplying a list of those of his own friends whom he wishes invited.

As regards the bouquets, those of the bride, bridesmaids and bride's mother are supplied by the bridegroom, who also pays all fees connected with the ceremony.

The cost of the reception and the carriages for taking the bride and guests to church are provided by the bride's parents, but the bridegroom pays for the carriage or motorcar to the station after the reception.

At one time it was considered incorrect for a widow to be followed by bridesmaids on the occasion of her second marriage, but this rule is often broken. Sometimes, however, the custom of a "matron of honor" is followed instead.

The number of bridesmaids varies considerably, four to six being most usual, but two, ten or twelve, or in their place several small children, are often seen.

The chief bridesmaid holds the bride's bouquet and gloves during the service, and all the bridesmaids and the parents on both sides follow to the vestry for the signing of the register.

Keep Your Hands Quiet.

The hands of some people seem to have acquired the secret of perpetual motion. A girl who has this fault should set about conquering it immediately if she does not want to do damage to the nerves of those who have to be with her and wreck her own. The instant she notices that she is pulling at her hair combs, or collar, or giving her belt a vicious jab, let her stop and hold her hands fixed in her lap, no matter what effort it requires.

Look about in the theater, or tea room, or street car. Hardly a girl has her hands in repose. Most are tugging at some article of dress as they talk, or, what is worse, fingering the dress of a companion.

The manager of an office where there are many girls had to put up a notice that clerks must not touch articles on her desk when they came to speak to her. She says that one when making a report would pick up a pencil and draw weird figures on the desk blotter. The next hooked paper clips together, making a long chain that the manager had the work of unhooking; another tapped the desk with a pencil during her conversation. In short, scarcely a girl came and stood beside the desk with quiet hands.

The wall around a public telephone is another indication that most people while using the 'fone must still be restless with their hands, for almost there is a mass of pencil sketchings as far as the hand can reach.

When Introduced.

It is a duty to listen attentively to the name of one who is introduced. Avoid all mistakes by asking politely for the name that you have not heard or that has been mumbled by a thoughtless introducer.

"Will you tell me again your name? I was not quick enough to hear it." is a graceful little way of correcting an error. By all means do not guess at a name, nor do not conclude that a man and woman who enter a room and are introduced together are necessarily married. A guest has no right to refuse an introduction under the roof of a hostess who has invited many persons whose private feelings are naturally unknown to her. A courteous acknowledgment, even between unfriendly ones, is due your hostess. After the polite, formal acceptance of an introduction a separation can be effected. But don't forget to save others the embarrassment of an ill-bred display of personal feelings.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Miss Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

SAMMY SIMONS. OTTO BENNETT.

"COLEY" YOUNG. ROSE HANSON. MAX BERMAN.

THE boldest thief in New York city is the pickpocket. His greed is insatiable, and, when he wedges himself into a crowd and begins to gather in wallets, bank rolls and the contents of women's carelessly carried handbags, he never quits until he has gathered almost every dollar in sight.

He will start to work in the early hours of the morning, and, if not apprehended, he may still be found busily at the job when the after-theatre crowds are surging into restaurants, or thronging platforms of the subway, or congregating at the various transfer points preparatory to starting home.

In the eyes of the pickpocket a dollar is a dollar, and, as the majority of them unfortunately happen to be "collared" while plying their trade, they firmly believe in making hay while the sun shines, because they must lay by a certain sum for "fall money," a fund to defend them if arrested.

There is no class of thief hereabouts that Police Commissioner McKay is more anxious to rid the city of. Chances are this herculean task is beyond the range of human possibility, but, if he continues as he has begun, the time is not far distant when the pickpocket's life will be a burden to him and he will either seek new fields or also become more circumspect in his methods.

There are hundreds of these light fingered and strong armed criminals operating in every section of the city. They work singly and in "mobs." There are scores of women who are just as proficient as the men, but the lines are so sharply drawn that a woman never invades the fields selected by the men operators, and vice versa. While the men are just as deft with their fingers as the women, they frequently resort to the rougher tactics to "slip the leather." The women almost invariably prey upon those of their sex, and handbags are their specialty. Handbags, long, lean wallets, such as men of to-day affect, and pay-as-you-enter street cars, seemingly, were invented to aid the cause of pickpockets, for they have enabled these thieves to reap the richest of harvests since they came into vogue.

"There is no man in New York who knows more about pickpockets than Detective Frank D. Cassano. He and his partner, Detective Richard McKenna, have specialized on this brand of crime for many years, and there is not a "dip" of prominence in the country they don't know. Like their quarry, they work early and late, and, as the cleverest pickpocket in the city told the writer a day or two ago, 'If it were not for Cassano, pocketbook after pocketbook would be sold, pocketbook after another if it was not for this fellow Cassano. He bobs up at the most inopportune and unexpected moments.'

"Not a day passes but scores of reports are made to the police of lost wallets, watches and jewelry of all sorts, to say nothing of the almost countless handbags that have been rifled. The method of the pickpocket is simplicity itself, and, when one has had an opportunity to see these thieves at work he is almost prone to believe that nine out of every ten persons robbed deserve their fate. Wallets carried in hip pockets of trousers, watches slipped carelessly into vest pockets with chain stretching across the vest without the precaution of running it through a buttonhole, or else worn on a fob, and handbags carelessly slung over the arms of women either engrossed in conversation or absorbed in their hunt for bargains offer such absurdly easy opportunities that the pickpocket finds them irresistible. As a shrewd detective puts it, these men and women extend a cordial invitation to every pickpocket within sight to come and rob them, yet they "squeal" the loudest when this happens.

"There are several of the more expert pickpockets in New York who work alone. Others prefer to work in squads of three or five. These are called "mobs." The man who does the actual work is the "tool." Then there is the "stall," the "strong arm guy" and the "lookouts," all of whom are essential to the success of a well planned job.

A few days ago a detective was descending the stairway to the subway at Forty-second street. A line had formed leading to the ticket booth and at a glance he saw there was a suspicious bit of jostling going on ahead of him. He fell out of line, and secreting himself behind a pillar, awaited developments. There enough a pickpocket "mob" was at work.

A man in the line was being violently pushed by the man directly behind him. Upon remonstrating with the impatient one the latter apologized, saying the crush was due to the impatience of the crowd behind him. The man directly in front of the complaining citizen suddenly determined to squirm his way out of line. He left back a step, and facing about twisted himself in such a way that he completely turned around the man directly behind him. The one next in line, the "tool" who does the lifting, was prepared for the move, and as the still protesting victim was whirled violently about, he, the "tool," had slipped from the pocket of the victim's inner coat a long wallet, and in a flash slipped it to the "stall" who was behind him, and with outstretched hand he received the wallet, and quickly made a break for the exit.

He was seized, wallet in hand, by the watching detective, who, dragging him along by the collar, leaped upon the "tool" and trounced him. Calling to a by-stander for assistance him to arrest the third man in the "mob," whom he gained not, and by this means the entire crew was rounded up by a lone detective. All three were convicted and sent away.

This proves the advantage of the "mob" system and shows how guarded innocents should be when they get in a crowd. Any man violently jostled in a crowd, the detectives say, nine times out of ten has been marked for plucking by pickpockets who are close by. His cue in such emergencies should be to forcibly extricate himself from such a crush, at the same time keeping a close watch that no one gets too close to him until the jam has been relieved. Fight himself clear and look about him, and it is an even chance he will see two or three men eyeing him suspiciously, and he should take care that these watchful ones do not get in touching distance of him again until he has freed himself from the crowd.

In the opinion of the detectives the cleverest of all pickpockets working here is "Sammy" Shore, or Shaw. He is so "smooth" that he rarely is apprehended and in consequence has served only a short term or two behind the bars. He always works alone, preferring to run the chances of slipping a wallet from a rear or inside pocket of a man or rifling a handbag without assistance. This minimizes his chances of arrest, he argues, and, further, whatever loot he lifts is all his own and there is no "split" to follow. Shaw, according to the police, has stolen thousands of dollars and he is still going strong. In order to convict a pickpocket he must be caught redhanded and "Sammy" has always proved so slippery that this accounts for the many times he has escaped through the loophole of reasonable doubt when haled before a court of justice. He is ambidextrous, working as well with one hand as the other, the detectives saying that no matter on which side of him his victims stand "Sammy" will get their wallet or purse unless they are sewn to their pockets. Sometimes he gets pocket and all, for it is easy to cut a pocket out of a coat these days.

The pickpocket of to-day is very wary about lifting jewelry. The danger in stealing watches and other baubles lies in the ease with which these articles can be identified. It is always difficult or next to impossible to identify money, and that is why a thief would rather steal a five-dollar bill than a watch or jewel worth hundreds unless the circumstances surrounding the taking of the latter insure a safe get-away. Shore and men of his calibre prefer to work quietly, steadily picking up a few dollars here and there until at the end of their day's labor they are far better rewarded than if they had lifted a valuable watch with the dread possibility of being arrested before it can be disposed of, for such evidence is irrefutable.

While Sammy Shaw stands at the head of his class as a lone works worker, Otto Bennett is head and shoulders at the top of the heap of "tools." When he and his "mob" get into a crowd they rarely emerge until they have reaped their harvest. They go through it with a fine tooth comb, and when they knock off for the day they have a tidy little fortune in bills of all denominations. Their average haul ranges from ten to twenty dollars, although once in a while they get a wallet that holds several hundred dollars and sometimes more. These are the big hauls they are constantly longing for, and they apparently can spot a man carrying such a bank roll a block off. Then they set patiently to work to corner him and freely does he escape. Bennett recently was cauaht at work in Harlem. He was held for trial, and promptly jumped his bail, as do the majority of pickpockets when released under bonds.

Nearly all the women pickpockets are married to thieves, and seldom do husband and wife work together. Each has his own lay, and they never cross each other's paths while in the field. The smartest woman thief now in New York, according to the police, is Annie Harris, who boasts of half a dozen aliases. She is the wife of "English Joey," who is in for a four year "stretch" at the hands of Judge Rosalsky. Annie, the police say, is an artist and makes anywhere from $500 to $1,500 every week she works. Her territory lies in the better class of shops and thoroughfares, and when she emerges from a crowd of women shoppers there are few handbags that have escaped her clutches. She is frequently seen in Fifth avenue and its shops, but as she is so well known to store detectives she is warned away every time she attempts to enter one of these stores. At that she frequently slips in, but she doesn't tarry long. She makes a quick clean-up and flees to the street, where chances of detection are materially lessened.

Annie, not so long ago, followed a woman in Fifth avenue for four blocks before she could get close enough to her to rifle her handbag. One of the two detectives assigned to pickpockets saw her and followed at close range, well knowing a trick was soon to be pulled off. Annie followed the woman into a fashionable confectionery in Fifth avenue, and while there was so attracted by a number of little chocolate ices she displayed that she stole several of these before following the woman to the street again.

Finally her opportunity came. As the woman with the handbag became entangled in a crowd of shoppers entering into a window Annie sidled up to her and as quick as a flash the handbag was opened and a roll of bills amounting to $21 was removed.

Annie, however, has taken the precaution to look about her. The detective seeing her closing in on her victim crept to her side, and as she withdrew her hand from the handbag and plunged it into her muff he enveloped her in a bear-like hug and held her until she dropped the muff and the stolen bills. Annie had been caught like a rat in a trap, and her whines and cries were of no avail. She had no difficulty in providing bail, however, and her case is still pending.

Annie has a friend with whom she works at times. This woman is known as Fannie Franklin, and her husband, also a thief, is known as the "Candy Kid." Fannie has been picked up a number of times, and her husband is well known as a successful "stall" for several "mobs" in which he works. Sixth avenue is a fertile field for women pickpockets. There is a department store down that way which operates an omnibus line across town, and these conveyances apparently were made to order to suit the purposes of thieves. They crowd their way into the vehicle, and in the jam that always follows they flagrantly open handbags, abstract what of value lies within, and then, complaining of faintness, leave the bus to return and wait for the next one. Unless driven away by a vigilant detective, they will work every omnibus that leaves the store, each trip netting them handsome dividends.

In discussing pickpockets and their methods a detective said there is no sight dearer to the heart of a "dip" than a bargain counter where remnants of silk or cloth, especially the former, are being displayed. Women herd about these little stands like flies about a sugar barrel. Every woman is intent upon pulling, hauling and examining every remnant on the counter. The clever pickpocket sidles up to the woman she wants to rob, picks up a piece of silk and, adroitly manipulating it, gets so that she obscures the downward vision of the victim and then, unobserved by all, his deft fingers go straight to the purse or loose bills therein. She moves on to the next promising looking candidate and repeats the performance. I have known twenty handbags at a single counter to be robbed in this way.

Not long ago, a richly gowned woman stood before a lingerie counter in a fashionable shop. Many women were congregated there, but this woman was intent upon finding a garment of a special design. A plainly dressed and soft voiced little woman at her side suddenly reached far across the pile of filmy garments, jostling the eager seeker as she did so, and, picking one up, said:—"I think this is the piece you are looking for."

The well dressed woman graciously thanked the woman who had aided her and then concentrated her attention upon the garment handed her. The other woman had quietly moved away. "I wonder how that woman knew what I wanted?" the shopper finally remarked to the saleswoman.

Then she looked down at the handbag dangling from her arm. It was open, and from it a purse containing $450 in bills had been abstracted. The kind little woman had covered the bag with the garment she picked up, rifled it and then faded from sight. She was never arrested, although her description minutely fits that of a pickpocket of international reputation.

There are two women posing as sisters who are married to brothers. Their husbands are gamblers. The women are known to the police as the "Boston Sisters," and they say there are no more dangerous thieves in the city than these two. They work the shoppers in the streets and stores, and their pickings are rich. They wear fine jewelry, although in this respect Annie Harris seems to carry off the palm, for a detective told the writer he had seen Annie Harris with jewelry worth at least $10,000 on her fingers while she was out on one of her thieving expeditions.

Pickpockets, especially those belonging to "swell mobs," are provident. They know they are liable to arrest at any moment. Therefore they always keep a big fund on hand which they designate "fall money." This is needed to buy bail or in case a compromise can be effected by refunding the amount stolen. They are arrested and bail is asked for. By turning over to some professional bondsman an amount in cash equivalent to the bond asked they can effect their liberty. Then their comrades get busy. The victim is approached and a harrowing tale is told him of the poor family at home, the thief being tempted to steal in order to put bread in their mouths. If convicted it will mean starvation for the wife and little ones at home. An immediate offer is made to restore the amount stolen and if the victim happens to be a person in need of money he will accede to this latter proposition, and upon receipt of his stolen wallet refuse to appear against the thief when the case comes to trial. In that way the thief is out only the amount of his latest theft and his cash bail is refunded.

These tender hearted victims, moved to pity by harrowing but false tales of poverty and suffering, are responsible for more pickpockets escaping long terms behind the bars than anything else. No matter how hard the detectives work to round them up, their efforts are far more often blocked by these tactics than by any failure to get their quarry "with the goods on them." The average man cries for "justice," the police say, but if he has to choose between his stolen wallet and justice, poor justice is left in the lurch.

Another dangerous woman thief is Rose Hanson, sometimes known as Lottie Gross, or Ethel Ring. She was recently caught as she was robbing a Long Island woman at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. She was convicted and sent away for a year. Transfer points, such as in front of the Grand Central Station, Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, and Thirty-fourth street and Fifth avenue, were attractive spots for her operations and here she was always well rewarded for her trouble.

Max Berman, sometimes called Max Goldstein, "the Shoemaker," is known as the "meanest thief" in New York. He preys on working women and nothing is too small to escape his itching fingers. He starts out early in the morning and robs young women on their way to work. Their carfare and luncheon money is never overlooked by this thief and he has been known to even steal their holiday sandwiches. When captured after looting Miss Grace Fleischer's handbag he was brought before Judge O'Sullivan on the charge of grand larceny. His wife, then in a delicate condition and with four children tugging at her skirts, appeared in court and told such a pitiful tale that Berman was permitted to go under suspended sentence. Later he was arrested and convicted, and a few days ago he was sentenced to five years.

Henry Berry, alias Ed Jones, but better known as "Coley" Young, is described as a "bad nigger" by every policeman who ever had to do with his many arrests. He has served a number of terms for larceny and prefers the subways for his field of operations. He was arrested here last November for robbing a Brooklyn woman of a handsome pair of opera glasses and her change purse, which he slipped from her handbag as she was returning from the theatre. He was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree as a second offence and he faces a long term in State's prison.

Sammy Simons, alias Sam Jacobs, is characterized by the police as a thief with the cleverness of a Cassius Shaw. He generally works with James Turner, an all around bad man and a product of Chicago, who was imported here by a highly successful "mob" several years ago. Sammy and Turner have made a number of rich hauls, and their pockets are always well lined in the event of trouble arising.

Not so long ago the detectives assigned to keep an eye on pickpockets were standing in Forty-second street and noticed there was a suspicious jam in the centre of an approaching street car. They leaped on the car and, standing well back, awaited developments. Soon they happened. The "tool" lifted a man's wallet, and as he did so the detectives sprang forward and, reaching for the man to whom the wallet had been passed, missed him. The thief leaped through the car window, taking the sash with him. A citizen seized the thief, but by a dexterous squirm he slipped out of his coat and vest and fled. In the pocket of the vest was a handsome watch, but the thief escaped and, naturally, did not return to claim his coat, vest and jewelry. The man who leaped through the window proved to be Joseph Freins, who had previously jumped his bail. He is regarded by police parlance, as "a good thief," and when a policeman makes use of this term he is paying his captive the highest compliment.

As long as men persist in carrying their valuables in their hip pockets or in wallets that stand high in the inside pockets of their coats, and women aimlessly roam the streets with handbags dangling, pickpockets will continue to grow wealthy. The opportunity is there, and those who live by their wits are quick to seize it. The city is full of pickpockets and the street car lines are alive with them. When entering a car, especially those of the pay-as-you-enter type, due care should be exercised to guard valuables. Any suspicious one should be met with prompt and decisive action, for this is the only way a thief can be thrown off his guard.

When asked where all the pickpockets come from, a detective promptly replied:—"These two-and-a-half-cents-a-cup poolrooms are incubators for thieves. There boys congregate. They may be honest when they start out, but nearly those who frequent these places sally forth when out of funds and clip a leather or a watch, and after pawning the latter return to the poolroom with ample cash to continue their play, to rejoin the crap game that usually runs in these places. It is small wonder that they, too, adopt this method of acquiring easy money. They accompanying 'dips,' see them work and then attempt it themselves. If they graduate into the proficiency class they are in demand as the 'tool' for a mob forming. In that way their graduation into the criminal ranks is accomplished. These poolrooms and cheap dance halls are the curse of young America.' Close them out and a heavy blow will be struck at the fountain head of thievery."

TANGOISTS, HERE'S A CHANCE TO TEST YOUR PROWESS!

Tango on Roller Skates.

"IF you could conserve all the energy that is now being expended in learning the tango and expend it in acquiring some of the more useful arts of life, what a very worthy thing you might do!" remarked the ancient and honorable exponent of the art of practicality.

The youthful and light hearted exponent of the art of having a good time thought it over for a minute and then replied.

"But how about the jolly good time they have learning the tango and the way it makes their blood circulate and takes their thoughts off their troubles? After all, you know, learning useful things wouldn't have that effect. A place for everything and everything in its place, I say."

"And is the tango's place in a skating rink," demanded the exponent of the ancient and honorable art of practicality, in an injured voice.

"Why, of course," replied the apostle of joy. "It's awfully behind the times to be able to dance the tango only in a ballroom. The real up to date place to dance it is in a skating rink and on skates, preferably on roller skates, because that's harder than dancing it on ice skates."

Dancing the tango on roller skates has, in fact, come to be the ambition of expert tangoists, who have mastered the art of the ballroom so completely that it has ceased to be exciting. Longing for new worlks to conquer, some of the dancers have gone to the ice and some to the roller rinks. In London tangoing on rollers has been seen for some time in the rinks. In the United States tangoing on the ice has been taken up more widely.

There is a grace of movement in going through the dance on roller skates which is not to be obtained even by the most skilful dancers in the ballroom. The skaters glide through all the intricate movements of the dance so smoothly that to the onlooker who has not tried the tango even in the ballroom the feat seems charmingly easy, a poem in rhythm with nothing more difficult about it than is comprised, for instance, in the gliding grace of the swan or the easy sweeping movements of the swallow.

There are two things necessary if one is to master the art of tangoing on roller skates easily—expert acquaintance with roller skates and all their possibilities and expert acquaintance with the tango. If he who attempts to tango on skates falls short in either of these requisites he will find his experience at the rink not at all satisfactory.

Troubled With Weak Back and Kidneys For 10 Years.

Many people fail to understand the significance of a lame, weak, sore or aching back.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

Take notice to the warning and cure the backache on the first sign, for if you don't do this, serious complications are sure to arise and perhaps develop into Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, the three most deadly forms of kidney trouble.

Doan's Kidney Pills will strengthen the weak back, and prevent any form of kidney trouble entering the system.

Mrs. Ed. Boyer, Nokomis, Sask., writes:—"I have been troubled with weak back and kidneys. I had terrible shary headaches, and could not sleep at night. In this way I suffered for ten years, until I read about Doan's Kidney Pills. I purchased two boxes, and as they helped me, I sent for two more; they put me on my feet, and I have been able to work ever since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

If ordering direct specify "Doan's."

THE WAX FIGURE

With scrupulous attention to everything, the old lady served the tea, assured herself that nothing was missing and then silently, apparently floating rather than walking, she was about to leave the room when our hostess, Mme. Madeline d'Orchamps, with a smile, said to her:

"Thank you, Mme. Joram."

Into the old face, framed in white hair, suddenly came an expression of such gratitude, tenderness and true devotion that every one of us noticed.

She was was quite quaint, this old lady, dressed in black, with her heavy white hair framing her face, which was the colour of old ivory, motionless and impassive and covered with thousands of fine wrinkles. She looked like a dead person and walked like an automaton, silently and without the slightest jar. Though all of us were old friends of the d'Orchamps family, none of us had ever seen the old lady before.

When she disappeared, apparently gliding along the long terrace, Jacques, our host, looked at us and burst out laughing, and his wife blushed.

"Why, Jacques," she exclaimed, "are you not ashamed to laugh?"

"Not at all, Madeline. You would have laughed, too, if you had seen their faces. They are too polite to ask, but they are all dying to know where we picked up the old lady, so I shall tell the story of Mme. Joram."

"Surely, you will do no such thing, Jacques?"

"Wait and see! I beg your pardon, all of you, for having laughed, but you have no idea how funny and sheepish you looked."

"But the story! The story!" we cried.

"Well here goes. About three months ago, at the beginning of the summer, Madeline and I attended a dinner party at Chateau de Glangy. When we drove home the next day and reached Corvie, we found a fair in full swing in the village. Now you know this village consists of one single street, and main road, and this was crowded with people looking into the various booths and tents put up on both sides. Not wanting to run over anyone, I told Pierre, my chauffeur, to drive around the village, and Madeline then suggested that he wait for us with the car at the other end, while she and I took a walk through the fair. I found the idea most absurd—"

"You did nothing of the kind, Jacques," our hostess exclaimed.

"There, you hear! But to avoid being scolded by my wife afterwards—"

"Oh, Jacques!"

"I shall not argue the point, she did win a few prizes, perhaps, which she immediately gave away to some ragged, dirty children, and at last we came to the large tent, labelled 'Grand Sensational Anatomical Museum.' Our car was there now, but Madeline insisted on going inside."

"I did, but not because I cared a bit to see what was in there, but because nobody seemed to go in, and I felt so sorry for the poor people running the show, I am sure everyone of you would have done just the same."

"Well, I asked the woman at the entrance to give us two of the best tickets. There was only one kind, she said, and they cost 10 centimes each. We went inside and if the tent had looked uninviting from without, it was dreadfully gloomy within. There were about a dozen wax figures, illuminated by a couple of miserable lamps. We both tried to find a way of giving the poor people a little more than the miserable 20 centimes we had paid at the entrance, and suddenly the old woman who had let us in came up and told us there was a side show on the left which cost ten centimes extra. It was called 'Out of Work,' she said, and was very realistic. We were very happy to hear this, though we should have liked to give them a little more—"

"Yes, and then I had an idea, Jacques. We would go inside and see the tableau and leave a louis d'or or two in there."

"I was willing. We passed behind the curtains. The tableau was well arranged, and I can still see it before my eyes. In a miserable room, bare of furniture, sat an old woman on a rickety chair. Two ragged children clung to her skirts and she was resting her elbows on a shaky table, at the other end of which sat an old labourer burying his face in his hands. I admit I was deeply touched, but, trying to conceal my feelings from Madeline, I smiled, and as if in fun, I placed my hand on the shoulder of the male figure, but I quickly drew it back again."

"'Oh, look out, Jacques,' cried Madeline, 'it is falling, it will break to pieces.' Well, he did fall for my touch had upset his balance, but he did not break, for it was no wax figure, but a real man and he was—"

"Drunk," several voices suggested.

"No, not drunk, but dead. There was no mistake. Trying to save him from falling, I took his hand and felt that it was not wax, but flesh, flesh cold and stiff in death. I hurried Madeline out of the place, but she behaved splendidly. She did not scream, nor had she any intention of fainting. While I raised the body of the man from the ground where he had fallen, she went out to break the sad news as gently as possible to his wife."

"But as soon as I opened my mouth," interrupted Madeline, "the poor old creature began to apologise. She imagined that we, her only customers, were angry at the deceit, and spoke about their poverty, their constant misery and explained that in order to make new tableaux when they had no money to buy new figures, she and her husband had begun to pose as wax figures. I did not know what to say to explain the dreadful thing to her, so, like the little fool that I am, I burst out crying. Then the poor woman understood—"

"Yes, and when I came I found Mme. Joram sobbing in Madeleine's arms, who was trying to console her as if she had been the child that has been denied us to make our marriage perfectly happy—"

"Yes, and then Jacques and I adopted Mme. Joram," cried Madeleine, wiping the tears from her eyes and throwing her arms around her husband's neck she kissed him.

Bowing to the Moon.

Among the natives of Abyssinia there existed and probably still exists a curious pagan custom of bowing to the moon on certain nights at the commencement of the new year.

Selecting a clear space on the ground, free from all rocks and boulders, the elders of the community kneel down, one behind the other, and, as soon as it is midnight, begin a dolorous chant to the moon.

They keep this up for half an hour or so, when all rise, and, forming a circle, stand still, their arms motionless by their sides. A young girl now approaches them and walks round the circle, calling out: "You are all right. Your shadow is there." Should she pause and say, "Friend, there is no shadow behind you. Alas—alas!" then the person she thus addresses is destined to die within the next twelve months.

THE INFORMAL TEA.

How to Dispense Gracefully the Cup That Cheers.

The gentle art of impromptu hospitality is gradually dying out. No hostess of the present day seems to be prepared for unexpected guests. Even impromptu teas have been discarded for formal afternoon receptions, and only in a few old fashioned houses is the quaint old custom of serving 5 o'clock tea every day preserved. It is a most attractive custom, and it is a decided disparagement of the modern housekeepers that it should be allowed to die out. In England it is religiously observed, and visitors may always be sure of tea and crumpets if they call at 5 o'clock.

In most families of moderate means the woman of the house is seldom prepared to serve tea at a moment's notice. She seems to consider that she is very lucky if she and her home are sufficiently tidy to receive the guests at all.

Serving tea can always be quite simple and easy if the tea things are kept in good condition, ready to use. If the tea napkins and tray scarf are always placed near at hand and are laundered after each use, there will be no difficulty in fixing the tray in two minutes. Of course, if the hostess must stop and look for clean tea linen and polished tea silver, besides setting the tray and preparing the food, naturally 5 o'clock tea will assume bigger proportions than the average meal.

It is always a good idea to keep two or three tea tray sets of linen in use at the same time, so that a clean one may replace the soiled one instantly, but where only one can be afforded it may easily be washed out in a few moments. In such a case as this it is best to remove the tea linen immediately when the guests are gone and wash and iron it at once. In this way the set is clean for the next tea, whether it be tomorrow or next week.

Perhaps the housewives will urge as an excuse that it is impossible to prepare the food for tea at the last moment. But this is really very simple if the proper food is kept on hand. There are all kinds of delicious sweetened biscuits, crackers and cakes which come in moisture proof packages, and these may be kept indefinitely.

If sandwiches are desired there are pressed meats in tins, sardines, cheese, almost everything to be bought all cooked.

A most delicious sandwich and one which takes only a minute to prepare is made with crackers, pimento and cream cheese. The pimento and cheese may be bought already mixed in little glass jars. The crackers should be the plain, unsweetened, unsalted variety. This mixture may be spread on the crackers (with or without butter, to suit personal tastes) in a couple of minutes, and they are quite delicious.

CROOKS GO BY CLASSES

AND EACH ONE STICKS TO HIS OWN SPECIAL TRADE.

The "Artist" In Criminal Circles Is Not a "Bad Man" But Trusts to His Wits — "Yegg" or "Strong-Arm" Is Desperado Who Fights Arrest — Petty Thief Is Almost Too Small to Catch.

Criminals, in the opinion of the police, are divided into three classes. To the experienced Toronto detective or police officer each class has its different peculiarities which are readily identified by the work of the criminal. It is just this work which furnishes the detectives with the clues which lead to the detection of the criminal and upon which the police base their hope of securing convictions. Contrary to popular opinion, the real criminal, the artist in his profession, is not a "bad" man. That is, he is not the one to resist the police at the time of his arrest. Very rarely does he carry a gun or a "black-jack," but depends upon his wits, his knowledge of the law, and the ability of a clever criminal lawyer to get him out of difficulties.

This class of criminal, as a rule, is the kind who floats bogus insurance companies, stock and mining concerns, and is a hard man to prove anything against. His operations are skillfully covered up by means of technicalities in the law and his victims are of the class who desire to obtain easy money, something for nothing, or as near nothing as possible. Cleverly-worded advertisements, personal letters, and alluring circulars are the tools of his trade, and, counting upon the fear of ridicule that the average man who has been swindled possesses, he operates boldly and with little fear of detection.

When the police do round up one of these characters they depend largely upon the evidence of one who has been victimized to secure a conviction. The fact that the plan to obtain this easy money has never been clearly or fully explained to the victim makes the task of convicting the "get-rich-quick artist" more difficult for the police. The kind of men that are usually selected are the gullible confiding class not overburdened with brains, and what a real clever lawyer does to a man of this kind when he gets him in the witness-box is pitiable.

Possessed with a winning personality, a prosperous appearance, and a smooth line of palaver, the swindler has the appearance of an up-to-the-minute business man, and for every one that the police convict there are a score who continue their nefarious operation undisturbed.

The criminal who is probably of the most dangerous type is the "yegg" or "strong-arm" man — the one who enters your house with the intention of stealing. Always armed, he realizes that he may be shot if detected, and takes no chances. It is your life or his, and if he sees you first it is generally yours. These men work in pairs, as a rule. And very seldom do they remain in one town for any length of time. The first thing they do on reaching a city is to locate others of their ilk. A place is determined upon where the spoils will be worthy of the risk. The house is studied; the habits of the occupants closely observed, and a general knowledge of the interior of the dwelling obtained. A night is selected, and if conditions are favorable an entry is made.

"These men are desperate characters," said a Toronto detective interviewed on the subject recently. "They know that if they are captured it will be a long term in prison for them, especially if they have a record. If it comes to a chase the first thing they do is to dispose of their booty, if they have obtained any; next come the firearms, or they realise that if caught with either their chance of getting off scot free is slight indeed."

Wealthy homes, small banks, and warehouses are selected by these men as worthy of their attention. The much-exploited burglar kit so well described in cheap novels is now practically relegated to the age of muzzle-loading cannon. Science has done a great deal to help the modern burglar, and his tools take up but little more space than those of the ordinary physician. About six inches of thin, tempered steel, a diamond glass cutter, an electric drill, and a bottle of "soup," or nit.o-glycerine, and the crook is ready for his work. The thin steel is used to obtain an entrance. The electric drill bores a small hole in the safe, the use of the "soup" follows, and his work is practically completed.

About two years ago, Detective Wallace of Toronto walked into a pawnshop in York street. Inside were three men making arrangements to dispose of some goods. At first the men talked readily, but upon cross-examination they became uneasy, and one of them attempted to leave. The detective sought to detain him. Realizing that they had not been successful in allaying the officer's suspicions the three saw that their only chance was in making their escape. Turning upon the officer they knocked him down, broke his jaw, and left him badly battered in the store. But before three hours had elapsed they were all in custody, and two of them are now serving a three-year sentence.

The third type which causes the police considerable trouble is the petty thief, pickpocket, and small criminal. His thefts are so small, his methods so mean, that their very pettiness makes him a hard man to put safely away. This class of crook works, as a rule, in crowded street cars, public gatherings, departmental stores, and railway stations. It is the keen-eyed detective who knows and understands their methods that is responsible for their downfall.

The Brass Agraffe Guards Tone

There are three strings for each note in the treble scale of a piano. In the each note has an individual Brass Agraffe as shown. Each wire is strung through a separate eyelet, giving perfect individual tone and yet blending with the other two wires to give a complete note of wonderous purity, free from any metallic ring.

BRASS AGRAFFES in the HARMONIC BAR remove all possibility of any wire ever touching any other, or rest ever reaching the point of contact. Just one of a hundred mechanical betterments that make the incomparable tone of the New Scale Williams Piano. 2B

CURES COLDS AND LA GRIPPE IN HALF A DAY.

Thank the famous Herr Doctor Stohr, of Vienna, Austria, for allowing his personal prescription for relieving pain, to be sold in Canada. The Doctor has used "Kephaldol" in thousands of cases, both in private practice and in his hospital clinics. He has proved to the delight of the medical profession that attacks of La Grippe and Colds could be warded off and broken up in 12 hours, by using "Kephaldol" at the first sneeze or sudden chill. Two or three 'Kephaldol' tablets at bedtime and two the first thing in the morning, will usually make a complete cure, although in very severe cases, it may be necessary to continue the treatment for a short time. taking one "Kephaldol" tablet every three hours. "Kephaldol" has the pleasant property of relieving all the distressing symptoms of a "bad cold"—clearing the head—stopping the throbbing headaches—easing the pain in the back and limbs—and enabling one to eat and sleep in comfort.

Keep 'Kephaldol' in the house, ready to take at the first sign of a cold. If your druggist should not have the 50c tubes of these tablets, write Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street Montreal.

SISTERS IN DUNGEON

Tragic Story Comes to Light in Italy After Eighteen Years.

NAPLES, April 13.—Investigation into the incarceration of the two sisters of Baron Domenico Camarda shows that the young women were placed in a dungeon in the Camarda castle by the father of the baron, who was arrested Friday, and that the latter on his father's death continued the treatment meted out to the girls because they had dishonored the family name.

The girls were placed in a dungeon in the family castle eighteen years ago, and one of them died after fifteen years' torture, while the other was found insane a few days ago.

It appears that Teresina Camarda was in love with an army officer, and that their child was killed by the order of the baron's father. Isobel, the other sister, also had an illicit love affair, but the father of her child is not known.

Both sisters were incarcerated in the dungeon of the castle near Maiarto and ill-treated, being supplied with just enough food to keep them alive.

After the death of the old Baron Camarda, his eldest son, the present baron, took upon his hands the torturing of his erring sisters. In this he was abetted by his brother, Francesco, and his sisters Antonia and Garcia.

It was not until last February the rumors of the tragedy came to the ears of the police authorities. When the latter heard about the matter they demanded the keys to the castle on threat that if the keys were refused they would break down the walls. The police found Isobel in the dungeon completely made and looking like a skeleton. There was at the time some plausible explanation of her condition, because she was handed over to her relatives with nothing more than a severe reprimand.

The investigating judge of Montecleone went to the place afterwards and found that Isobel had been again placed in the dungeon. She was taken from the castle and sent to the hospital of Girifalco, and the investigation into the whole circumstance of the case was begun. The physicians at the Montecleone hospital are endeavoring to ascertain from the woman in their charge the origin of the affair.

READY FOR STRIKE.

Italian Government Will Employ Army and Navy on Wednesday.

ROME, April 13.—In addition to the army the whole fleet will be employed to facilitate communications and maintain order in case a general strike is inaugurated by the railway employes on Wednesday next. In this way the Government hopes either to check the strike or minimize its effects. In its attitude the Government appears to be supported by public opinion, which is not favorable to that section of the railway men which is advocating the employment of strong coercive measures.

The various organizations of civil service employes have already planned at what points to erect barricades and are in readiness to take possession of various offices. They believe that they have some of the army on their side. Meanwhile all the army officers are under orders to join their regiments. Detachments have been concentrated at those places considered the most dangerous, especially in Milan and in Rome.

WORRIED THE BISHOP.

Suffragettes Insisted on Disturbing Lowestoft Church Service.

LOWESTOFT, Eng., April 13. — A large number of suffragettes disturbed the service at St. John's Church yesterday while the Bishop of Norwich was officiating. Several days ago the bishop was visited by a delegation of suffragettes, and after a long parley consented to see two of them. They protested to him against the terrible feeding of women, and he promised to take their protest under consideration.

Yesterday they kept up a continuous chanting of "God save Emmeline Pankhurst." Several were ejected. then others ran to the foot of the pulpit and exclaimed: "My Lord Bishop, will you protest against the torturing of women?"

These disturbers were also dragged from the edifice, after which the bishop was able to deliver his sermon.

MONSTER ANTI-LICENSE PETITION OF ONTARIO YOUNG MANHOOD ASSOCIATION.—This petition, bearing over 9,000 names, is 200 yards long. It is from the Conservative members of the O.Y.M.A., and asks the Government to pass an Act in the Legislature abolishing all liquor shop, bar, and club licenses, and to have a plebiscite on the question before the law comes into effect. Failing this, the petitioners declared it would be their duty to forsake the Conservative and join the Liberal "Abolish-the-Bar" party in Ontario. Acting-Premier Foy said the Government was inclined to think that total prohibition was somewhat premature, but promised consideration.

IDENTIFIED BY BROTHER.

Mystery of Toronto Suicide Is Cleared Up at Last.

TORONTO, April 13.—By means of a picture and a description published in local papers, the young lad who committed suicide at 926 Dundas street on the morning of Feb. 13 by shooting was identified by his brother, who came from Liverpool, England, for that purpose. The dead youth was Edward Johnson of Liverpool.

The lad's brother is unable to account for the suicide other than the fact that he was suffering from a religious mania when he suddenly left his home in England two years ago. Every effort was made by his parents to trace him, but without success.

Recently a newspaper with the lad's description was received by his brother. It tallied so closely that the brother at once left for Canada to claim the dead man's effects.

The suicide was one of the most peculiar that the police have had to deal with. Previous to taking his life Johnson destroyed all papers which would lead to his identity, and during the three days before he took his life he had occupied rooms in three different lodging-houses, all of which he paid for in advance and left without using. After his death a letter was received from a man in Hamilton, containing a quantity of religious tracts and offering some advice.

Cured For Spinal Paralysis.

PARIS, April 13.—Prof. Arnold Netter made an important statement at the Academy of Medicine regarding a new cure for spinal paralysis.

The cure, which Prof. Netter had sought since 1910, consists of an injection of serum collected from the spinal marrow of a sufferer from a similar disease. Apparently the microbes coming from the first sufferer kill those inhabiting the second.

Prof. Netter illustrated his theory by the case of a man aged 34, who had been reduced in six months to utter helplessness by paralysis. He was cured entirely in a few weeks by the new treatment.

To Disbar Hagel.

WINNIPEG, April 13.—At a meeting of benchers of the Law Society of Manitoba, a resolution was passed that the solicitor to the society be instructed to take immediate steps to have Percy E. Hagel's name struck off the rolls of the society. Hagel is now serving a prison term for having, as counsel for Krafchenko, assisted the latter to escape from custody.

Rumford Goe To Asylum.

COBOURG, April 13.—Wm. Bamford, the lunatic who last week ran amuck and tried to shoot up a town, was Saturday, on a warrant issued by the Lieutenant-Governor, transferred from Cobourg jail to the Hamilton Hospital for the Criminal Insane. As Bamford's insanity is hereditary it is not likely that his condition will improve.

Put Head In the Way.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 13.—For "placing an obstacle on the rail, thereby causing the train to stop," a peasant of Nijni Novgorod was fined $5. He was trying to commit suicide. The obstacle was his own head.

Okuma Is Popular.

TOKIO, April 13.—The selection of Count Shigenobu Okuma, Japan's foremost progressivist, who is engaged in forming a Cabinet to replace that of which Count Yamamoto was head, has created a profound impression. All classes consider that it denotes the dawn of a new epoch in Japanese history in the direction of a more representative government. Business men especially are pleased with the choice of Count Okuma by the elder statesmen, and the stock market is buoyant.

Postman Brother Visits Pope.

ROME, April 13.—For two weeks Pope Pius will enjoy the companionship of his brother, Angelo Sarto, who has abandoned his duties as a postman for that length of time that he may be near the pontiff.

After the first visit to the Vatican Signor Sarto said his brother appeared greatly pleased on seeing him, and with all cheerfulness and resignation remarked that he supposed this would be the last Easter they will spend together.

TURNS DOWN SUBSIDY.

Fielding Refuses To Aid In Establishing British Shipyard.

QUEBEC, April 13.—While the Borden Government is ready and desirous to give every reasonable encouragement to the promotion of the shipbuilding industry in Canada, and will insist that all vessels for the Canadian service must be built within the confines of the Dominion in future, it has no intention of establishing a precedent by subsidizing wealthy and powerful British concerns to enter the Canadian field and compete with this added advantage against the companies already established. This was the substance of Hon. L. P. Pelletier's reply on Saturday to a delegation of Quebec and Levis citizens who interview him with regard to the establishment of a branch of the Armstrong firm at Lauson, where the new drydock is to be built.

Mr. Gravel, president of the Levis Board of Trade and member of the Quebec Harbor Commission, put the case for a subsidy before the Minister, telling of the negotiations which are being carried on with the Armstrongs and urging that a steel shipbuilding plant would be almost a necessity to the drydock, as the repair of damaged vessels would call for the permanent employment of a staff of experienced shipwrights and a well-equipped plant.

LOSS IS CONFIRMED.

Wreckage Reported Indicates Sinking of Southern Cross.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., April 13.—Floating wreckage, believed to have come from the missing sealer Southern Cross, was reported by the sealing steamer Bloodhound, which arrived yesterday. The Bloodhound passed a large quantity of wreckage Saturday afternoon about 100 miles southeast of this port. It had apparently been washed from a sealer's deck, but as the crew of the Bloodhound had not heard of the loss of the Southern Cross no effort was made to identify it.

The steamer Kyle, which has been searching in the vicinity of Cape Race, was notified by wireless yesterday of the position of the wreckage, and started immediately for the scene.

AFTER GRIPPE

Made Strong by Vinol.

John C. Furman, of Clarion, Pa., says: "After a very severe attack of the grippe my system was in a weakened, nervous and run-down condition. I had no appetite at all. I was obliged to continue with my work, and nothing seemed to help me until a friend induced me to take Vinol. I began to note good results from the first bottle. I continued its use and am now sound and well as ever.

In health one cannot realize how depressed a person may become after trying one remedy after another without benefit for such a condition as Mr. Furman was in, or what a relief it is to find help and be restored to health and strength.

It is the combined action of the medicinal curative element of cods' livers without the greasy oil, aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron, that makes Vinol so efficient in building up the weakened run-down system.

We guarantee Vinol to give you perfect satisfaction.

TO-DAY YOUR DAY.

Good days and bad days exist only in your head. The weather has nothing to do with it. Each day is what you make it for yourself. Bad weather is only an unfortunate opinion.

Suppose it is raining to-day. You get word that your salary has been doubled, or that a forgotten uncle has left you a million dollars What do you care about the weather then? Or suppose the person you love is dying. Unexpectedly a turn for the better comes. The doctor says your dear one will live. What if it is hotter than Tophet? It is a good day, a great day, a happy day.

It's what you think and feel about it that makes each day what it is. You, within yourself, can make each day, every day, a good day. Put down in the notebook of your soul the poet Runeberg's thought.

'Each day is a life."

When you get up in the morning throw back your shoulders, take a deep breath. Meet the new day like a man. Say to yourself.

"Another day—another life!"

For all we know it may be the only day we'll ever have. Let's make it the best day we can. Let's strive to see that it is a day worth while. Let's move a step forward in our work. Let's do all the good we can. Let's get all the happiness we can—to-day.

Right now is the only time you can control. Yesterday is a record. To-morrow is a secret. To-day is yours, is mine..

Shock Fatal To Inventor.

MONTE CARLO, April 13.—Fernand Forest, an aged inventor of a motor, died suddenly yesterday while testing a new auto boat, in which he was about to attempt to break the yacht speed record. The boat came into collision with a jetty. It was only slightly damaged, but the excitement proved fatal to the inventor who suffered from heart disease. PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 13, 1914

AUSTRALIA WILL KEEP TO HER IDEAL OF A HOME NAVY---CHURCHILL IS CRITICISED

Hon. E. D. Millen, Minister of Defence For the Commonwealth Says Admiralty Has Violated the 1910 Compact Without Notifying Australia—Jap Alliance is No Solution of Problem.

POLICY REAFFIRMED

SYDNEY, N.S.W., April 13.—Hon. E. D. Millen, Australian Minister of Defence, has issued on behalf of the Commonwealth Government an important and comprehensive statement on the whole question of Imperial naval defence, in which he severely criticizes Mr. Churchill's recent speech and emphatically defends the Australian policy.

Australia, declares the Minister, is irrevocably committed to an Australian navy policy and needs her own ships. If Churchill's references to battle cruisers mean that the British Government thinks such vessels are unnecessary in the Pacific, then a most startling departure has been made by the Admiralty from the agreement of 1910 between Australia and the Mother Country.

It is impossible, he proceeds, for the Commonwealth Ministers to accept the existence of the Japanese alliance as a reason for this departure. Mr. Millen cites instances in which the Admiralty has violated the 1910 compact without acquainting the Australian Government, and declares that while the Imperial aspect of the Australian naval unit scheme still cordially commends itself to the Australian people, the latter are also wedded to the local control and defence system, as determined five years ago. He insists that until the Australian unit is placed on a thoroughly sound foundation Mr. Churchill's suggested Imperial squadron will not appeal to Australian sentiment.

In concluding, Mr. Millen says that Mr. Churchill suggests a reversion to the discarded policy of a contribution. He quotes Admiral Sir Reginald Henderson, in his report with regard to the establishment of an Australian navy, who said that continuity of policy was essential. "Yet almost before the foundations of the policy inaugurated in 1909 have been laid we are urged to adopt a radical modification."

"MUSIC OF THE RIFLE TO BE HEARD IN IRISH GLENS"

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BELFAST, Ireland, April 13.—The Irish Volunteer, a new Dublin paper, reports nine hundred Redmondites drilling at Limerick, two hundred at Fermoy, six hundred at Galway, and thousands more in other places. It says: "All summer, the music of the rifle will be heard in every Irish glen and valley. The Curragh incident has closed this chapter of England's European supremacy and reopened the book of "Ireland a nation." Despit all our struggls and sacrifices, the act of union was regarded as having bridged the English channel, and the resolutions to the contrary were regarded merely as dissatisfaction with the internal conditions. But the establishment of volunteers has changed all that, and in the chancellories of Europe, Ireland is a factor distinct from England, a nation in arms treating with England as an equal in right if not in strength."

The volunteers referrrd to are, of course, the Irish, not Ulster. The paper declared them "a nucleus distinct from the Irish army, under Home Rule."

TEN MINUTE SERVICE WILL BE PROVIDED

In the Near Future If Company Gets The Councils Permission to Lay Turn-out on Romaine St.

MAY BE FREIGHT SERVICE

Preparations for the ten-minute service promised by the Peterborough Radial Railway Co., are well under way and the Company has received permission from the City to undertake some of the work in connection with the provisions for this service. They have now made further application to the City to be allowed to put in a 350-foot turn-out on Romaine Street between Lock and George Streets.

The company intend to take up their railway tracks on Locke Street from Lake to Romaine Streets. The line will then turn straight down George Street to Romaine Street, and east on Romaine to Locke, thence south on Lock Street as heretofore. That will mean that the turn from George Street to Locke will be two streets south of where it has been in the past.

The City has already given the company permission to put in a turn-out on George Street at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets and on George between Antrim and Smith Streets. Their last request is now in the hands of the Board of Works.

Should they receive permission to carry out their plans on Romaine Street, the Company will do away with the turn-outs at Central Park and at the George Street wharf. They will operate four cars on the George Street line instead of three, and using the turn-outs on Romaine Street, at the corner of Charlotte and George Streets and on George Street north they will provide a ten-minute service on all lines of the company.

The curves where the cars turn from one street to another will also be increased in radius to permit the passage of freight cars over the whole of the system. This will enable the company to provide a freight as well as a passenger service.

The Board of Works inspected the site of the proposed turn-out on Romaine Street on Good Friday.

EASTER MUSIC AT THE CATHEDRAL

Easter music at St. Peter's Cathedral was featured by the singing of Kalliwoda's mass in connection with the Pontificial High Mass sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. Although a new and difficult arrangement the solos and choral work were capably handled, the soloists being Misses G. and M. Chaney, Eileen McCabe, N. Simons, Messrs. J. Minnecola, Ed. Hanrahan and A. New. Lambillotte's "Regina Coeli" was the offertory selection.

Pontifical vespers were sung in the evening. O Salutaris was beautifully rendered by a male quartette composed of Messrs. Geo. Daly, J. Minnecola, Ed. Hanrahan and Albert New. Verdi's trio "Jesu Dei Vivi," by Miss Genevieve Sullivan, Mr. Minnecola and Mr. New, was sung in a delightful manner. The special work was well prepared under the direction of Mr. New. The incidental organ selections by Miss M. Doherty were most acceptable.

BASEBALL GAME CULMINATED IN FISTIC ENCOUNTER

POLICE COURT

A baseball game that culminated in a fistic encounter, with a splash of profanity, landed the participants in the police court. This morning Frank Burke appeared before Magistrate Dumble, charged with assaulting Joseph Calhoun on Friday last. The accused pleaded not guilty. The charge was subsequently dismissed, when it was proved to the satisfaction of the court that the complainant had provoked the assault by the misuse of words, that are contained in every standard dictionary. It appears that a number of small boys were playing baseball on a corner lot, when a fight commenced. Burke and his wife watched the proceedings from their bedroom window. When baseball bats and other paraphernalia common to the game were substituted for nature's weapons, Burke decided to interfere. It was then that the defendant was made the recipient of various time-worn but unseemly appellations. He took exception to this form of abuse and undertook to thrash one of his offenders. Police court proceedings were instituted against him, with the result that the complainant and his friends were advised that the treatment administered to them was justified. It was suggested by the court that they behave themselves in future and restrain their pugilistic propensities.

Fined $20.

Sidney Crouter and Wesley Crouter are brother-in-laws in name only. On Friday evening last, whatever vestige of harmony and domestic felicity may have existed between them, was shattered. As a result Sidney Crouter was convicted in the police court this morning of having assaulted Wesley Crouter. The accused was fined twenty dollars to be paid forthwith, or in default of payment fifteen days in the Bastile.

It is stated that Wesley Crouter had occasion to visit his wife on Friday evening, prior to his departure for the woods. The accused, who was in the house, is alleged to have used a vile epithet towards Wesley Crouter, who was waiting at the door for his wife to come downstairs. The complainant invited Sidney to come outside and repeat the remark. This the accused did, but not in a manner that was at all congenial to Wesley. It is stated that he grabbed a mop handle on his way out, with which he attacked Wesley. The latter had several ugly-looking gashes to show for his encounter with his brother-in-law. These it was stated, were made by the spring of the mop handle. The cuts on complainant's chin corresponded with the coils of the spring.

In defence Sidney Crouter alleged that Wesley Crouter, while standing at the door, remarked that he did not want any "lazy men" under his roof. This aroused his anger, with the above results. He denied that he had used a mop handle in the conquest.

A friend of the accused was next put into the box.

"Did you see a mop used?" inquired the Magistrate.

Witness—"No."

"I don't think you were there."

"What put that mark on him?"

"I don't know. He may have put that on himself."

After further cross-examination, His Worship declared that he would accept the evidence of the complainant.

"Is there no ten days on this?" inquired Crouter after the fine had been imposed, with the injunction that it had to paid "forthwith."

"I dont see why I should allow you time. You didn't allow any time when you struck the complainant with the mop," countered the Magistrate.

MUCH INTEREST SHOWN

At a meeting held in the Dunham Hotel, Cobourg, on Good Friday, trap shooters from Campbellford, Peterborough, Belleville and Cobourg formed a League to be known as the Trent Valley Trapshooters' Association. The League proposes holding friendly shoots from time to time during the summer at the various towns represented. Any teams in this district not represented at the meeting who desire to join the association are requested to send their names to the secretary, Mr. F. C. Bonnycastle, Campbellford.

INJURED IN A RUNAWAY

DOURO, April 13.—Mr. Morris Tobin, while returning from Church yesterday morning, was thrown out of a vehicle and severely injured. Later in the day he was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. An examination by Dr. McGrath, revealed severe injuries to the head, besides several painful bruises to the body.

It was reported from the hospital to-day that the condition of the unfortunate man shows little improvement. It has been difficult to ascertain the exact nature of the injuries to the head. It is believed that the skull is fractured, as the preliminary examination disclosed a gaping wound.

A rather unusual occurrence, a whole family taking special parts in Easter services.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Todd were the readers at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, their daughter Grace sang a solo with her brother, R. S. of Toronto, playing the accompaniment, while the elder son, Wm. J., sang the solo part of an anthem in the Presbyterian Church, Cornwall, Ont.

WOULD RECEIVE 13 OTHER MINISTERS

As Ministers of the Presbyterian Church in Canada Was Notice of Application to the General Assembly Presented This Morning to Presbytery

NEW PASTORAL CHARGE

A meeting of the Presbytery of Peterborough was held this morning in St. Andrew's Church at which Rev. Mr. Brown of Warsaw presided. An interesting notice was that received regarding the intention of the Presbytery to make application on behalf of other presbyteries to the General Assembly for permission to receive as ministers of the Presbyterian Church, four Baptist, two Methodist and seven Congregationalists, and three Presbyterian ministers other than members of the Church in Canada.

Rev. Mr. Keith and Mr. Shurter gave an account of their visit to Omemee, Bethany and Mount Pleasant and sanction was given to the formation of Mt. Pleasant and Omemee into a pastoral charge, of which Rev. Mr. Keith will be moderator during the hearing of candidate for call. Rev. Jos. Skene, Havelock, Mr. J. E. Roxburgh, Norwood, A. Fairfairns, Lakefield, Rev. Mr. Rollins and Rev. Robt. Pogue were among those present.

Uhthoff Visited By Disastrous Blaze

Examiner Special:

UHTHOFF, Ont., April 13.—A fire which broke out here yesterday afternoon completely destroyed the Church, the residence of the station foreman, and the outbuildings of one of the local residents before it could be got under control. The fire started in the residence of the G. T. R. foreman and at once spread to the farmhouse across the road. The high wind blowing made it almost impossible to stop the progress of the flames and the Orillia fire brigade was sent for. Before the firemen had covered the seven miles between the town and the village, the local church was ignited by the flames and sparks and burned to the ground. The barn of one of the residences near the house that was first destroyed, was burned with its contents, and a pile of 12,000 cords of wood met the same fate. The arrival of the fire brigade meant the salvation of two other houses in the immediate vicinity, after a hard fight. A crowd of people from Orillia saw the blaze, which was a spectacular one, and residents from the whole countryside gathered before the fire was put out.

Christian Science Bill

Special to The Examiner:

ALBANY, N.Y., April 13.—Governor Lynn will to-day hold a hearing on the McClelland bill, designed to give Christian Scientists the same legal privilege as physicians in treating diseases. If successful in New York State they intend to seek a similar recognition in Ontario and other Canadian provinces where they are strong.

Dago Frank, Whitey Lewis, Gyp the Blood and Leftie Louie Pay Penalty for the Murder of Rosenthal.

LEWIS' STATEMENT

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OSSINING, N.Y., April 13.—Frank Cirofici, "Dago Frank"; Jacob Seidenshner, "Whitey Lewis"; Harry Horowitz, "Gyp the Blood"; Louis Rosenberg, "Lefty Louie"; the four New York gunmen, convicted of murdering Rosenthal, the gambler, were electrocuted at sunrise this morning. All of them except Lewis approached the death chair apparently in terror. Lewis, who was the second to die, made a rather remarkable statemnt as he was being strapped for death. He said all who swore that he actually shot Rosenthal were perjurers. None of the others made a statement.

BECKER IS SILENT.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 13.—Former Police Lieutenant Becker, condemned to death for the Rosenthal murder, but awaiting new trial, to-day evinced little interest in the fact that his four colleagues met death for the crime this morning. He slept soundly last night, and to-day would discuss with his guards only his own chances for getting off.

BUILDING BY-LAW REQUIRED TO BE REVISED AT ONCE

Is Old and Too Limited. Inspector Parsons will be Handicapped Under Present By-Law

NEEDS COUNCIL'S ATTENTION

City Engineer Parsons has been made building inspector to enforce a by-law that is mouldy with antiquity. It was drawn up in the days when concrete and steel were not considered as building material, and although the City Council has attempted on several occasions during the past six or seven years to revise and extend the by-law, so big an undertaking was it that they threw up their hands and said "not for us."

Ald. Johnston has been an advocate for a revision of this work, but several years ago relinquished the task when no one offered any support to his suggestion. The City has grown apace, but there is the old by-law dusty, inadequate and practically useless, something of a monument to the lackadaisical, self-satisfied, don't do anything methods of previous Councils.

When asked this morning, City Engineer Parsons stated this work applies only to the fire limits, but he hoped that the Council would increase the scope of the by-law.

According to the present arrangements, a prospective builder secures a permit from the City Clerk, but there is no later inspection to see whether the specifications on the permit have been carried out. Mr. Parsons considers that the permits should be issued from the Engineer's office since the building inspection is carried on from that quarter.

Several times already this year has the Council mentioned the building by-law and its need of a thorough revision, but it never gets past the discussion stage. In different parts of the City there are houses erected and under erection that are the veriest fire traps, and they are crowded together so intimately that one might fancy it was the heart of Chicago. The builder has a fine chance to cover up his work, to give it presentable appearance, but how is a purchaser to know whether he is receiving his money's worth or not. There is simply no protection whatever for the men who will purchase these houses for the purpose of living in them.

These are some of the criticisms you hear about the streets, and by reason of the recent appointment of a building inspector it is anticipated that the Council will put a little life into the building by-law. The inspector will have decidedly limited duties under the present legislation.

Young People's Union of Murray St. Church To-night

The Young People's Union of Murray St. Baptist Church will hold its weekly meeting to-night at 8 o'clock. The topic will be presented by Miss Agnes Smith, and at half-past-eight the study class in the life of Adoniram Judson, will be conducted by the pastor.

ZACKS BROS. HAVE NOW A MODERN DEPARTMENT STORE

Enterprising Firm Adds Furniture and House Furnishings to other Lines Carried

THE NEWEST GOODS

"Progress" has been the watchword of Zacks Bros., merchants, George Street, and that word has manifested itself in every transaction of this enterprising firm. Comparative strangers to Peterborough four years ago, by dint of hard work and progressive methods, they have won a place in the minds of local shoppers that is second to none. Zacks Bros. are now proprietors of a modern department store at 420-422 George Street. The business has grown from a small beginning until now it includes four departments, the last to be acquired being that of furniture.

When Zack Bros. started here, they handled only men's ready-to-wear, but it was not long before ladies' ready-made clothing and millinery were added. At the outset the ground floor was all that was utilized in carrying on business, but this was soon found to be inadequate, and the second and the third floors were taken over. Now the acquisition of an adjoining store is necessary for furniture.

This latter department will be devoted to house furnishings of the highest order, including furniture, curtains, carpets, linoleums, oilcloths, etc. Everything is displayed to the best advantage and inspection is invited.

At 422 George Street in the future, the ground floor will be devoted to men's wear, while the second will have ladies' suits, coats and dresses. The third is designated millinery. Throughout the store is found goods only of the most up-to-date character. Strict attention is paid to the newest styles in all lines, the object being to please the public, to give them what they want.

Blamed The Mother-in-law

Arthur Sims Bound Over to Keep the Peace—Assault Alleged

Arthur Sims was bound over to keep the peace upon agreeing to furnish sureties amounting to four hundred dollars. Sims appeared in police court this morning charged with having assaulted his wife, Mrs. Fannie Sims on Friday last. Mrs. Sims swore that her husband frequently abused her. She named the defendant's mother as the chief cause of her domestic difficulties. Mr. Gordon, who appeared on behalf of Mrs. Sims, asked that Sims be bound over to keep the peace.

TWO ORCHESTRAS TO PLAY

Tuesday evening, the initial performance of "Queen Zephra," one of the biggest musical and theatrical events ever witnessed here, will be produced at the Grand Opera House.

The Peterborough Conservatory Orchestra of 40 pieces will play the overtures while the curtain is down, and the Grand Opera House 3-piece orchestra will play the solos, duets, dances, drills and incidental music—35 numbers, while the curtain is up. Both orchestras will be under direction of Rupert Gliddon.

There will be a continuous performance of music of the highest class, and also of the popular class, interspersed with excellent and stirring dramatic work, graceful dancing, etc., etc.

Including the orchestras, there will be about 200 people directly concerned in the production of "Queen Zephra," and every one a trained musician, dancer or trained perfectly in dramatic work.

It is not likely that the public will have a chance to see and hear so much in one evening again as it is seldom that such an offering can be made.

Combined with all this will be the beautiful stage settings in spectacular scenery which the "Zephra" management carry (a taste of which was given Friday and Saturday at the Grand), the beautifully costumed people, appearing in clever parts, and the dazzling electrical effects.

The prices have been reduced to as low a figure as possible, considering the expense in producing. 25c, 50c and 75c are the prices with the gallery at 15c. Plan open at Grand.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, with a matinee Friday.

A full and final rehearsal will be held at Grand Opera House to-night, and all scenic effects, electrics, and orchestra, and all concerned will be given their final instructions.

BIG ATTRACTIONS IN MOTION PICTURES AT RED MILL

This combined programme of dramatic attraction, farce and news is probably the most notable motion bill ever offered the public, and is certainly the most exceptional attraction of this nature presented for the price of admission. The great feature, Lewi and McGuinnas can be seen at the Red Mill to-night and to-morrow. Remember that "seeing is believing"; still motto "give the public a chance to see and believe in the exceptional value of what we have to offer." Don't miss this great programme.

THE COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

In another place in this issue prominence is given to the report of the Collegiate Inspector, which gives our Collegiate Institute an excellent character for excellence of teaching and equipment and gratifying results. This is an important matter, as our Institute, as our other schools, costs a good deal. It is a matter of satisfaction, apart from the educational results, that we are getting something like our money's worth. Our local University, which represents university advantages, at our very doors, is a great boon to the ambitious students, who wish to get on; for, in spite of restricted means, they are provided with the opportunities for higher educational attainments which, at one time, were open only to the children of parents with considerable money.

Congratulations on these and other grounds are due the citizens, the Collegiate staff, and the Board of Education. Our Collegiate Institute will continue to be an aid and inspiration to higher and better scholarship if the spirit of its motto is given effect. On the official stationery of the Institute the motto of its "coat of arms" is "Nulla Dies Sine Linea." This motto is attributed to Dr. Arnold, one of the greatest of classical pedagogues. It refers to the scanning of Greek or Latin verse—a line every day. Paradoxical though it may seem, Dr. Arnold emphasized "quantity" as a means of gaining quality—the quality of thoroughness. If his motto were thoroughly followed out a lad who would scan a line of verse every day might, at the same time, commit it to memory, so that by the time he had read—in the proper sense—a book of, say, Virgil, or Homer, he would have it by heart, with a more adequate knowledge of grammatical and other values; in that regard, involving conditions of true scholarship.

The chief merit of this motto, however, lies in its impulse to thoroughness and incentive to profitable employment of time. All educationalists agree that our school curricula of all kinds are much overweighted with subjects, a condition that conduces to acquirement of a smattering, rather than thoroughness of mastery. It is better to know less well than to know more imperfectly. In one case we have permanent mental possession, in the other a great deal of the imperfectly mastered knowledge, which is speedily forgotten—smothered under other rapidly piled layers of superficial knowledge.

Observance of the motto, nulla dies sine linea—a little every day—means a diligent employment of time. It is the experience of those who have had experience that enough time is absolutely wasted and worse in the way of employment of time, to acquire without undue effort a great deal of useful knowledge. Even a little time every day systematically applied to the mastery of some educational subject brings extraordinary results. If this spirit is excited in the pupil at school, and carried with him into the out-of-school world, the educational process, necessarily only begun in the school, means continuous advance. Pupils will learn the fact that graduation from a collegiate institute, or even a university, is not an end—it is only the beginning—of the real education and acquirement of knowledge; it, at the best, represents a training in the best ways of studying and learning something. Canada has multitudes of university graduates, bachelors of art, etc., who have wasted their time, because they have considered graduation as representing a finished education; and indeed it has been finished, because they have not regarded it as a stepping stone—gradus—to higher attainment, to realization and application of the real object and significance of a college course. Nulla dies sine linea, is an educational complement of the divine precept—"line upon line, and precept, upon precept, here a little and there a little." If the staff of our Collegiate Institute succeed in inspiring, and the pupils succeed in grasping, its significance, better reports than that of Inspector Houston will come from the inspectorate and test of active life in the world.

"DASHING AWAY."

When Mr. Borden as leader of the Opposition denounced the public expenditure under the Laurier government as being so great that it was "prima facie evidence of corruption," one would have thought that so valorous a champion of political purity would have changed things when he came into power. He has not made any change except for worse, from his own point of view. He practically doubled the expenditure of the Dominion in his first two years of power. It would take too much space to detail the increase in the several departments. One may be taken as a type of a generally prevalent condition. The growth of expenditures in the Public Works department under the administration of Hon. Robert Rogers, who knows how "to win elections without prayers," accounts in large measure for the very rapid increase in expenditure under the present Government.

Here is the list of expenditures for the department for the past two years and the proposed expenditure for the present fiscal year:

	Expenditures.
1911	$10,818,834
1912	11,651,947
1913	13,158,077
1914 (Estimated)	18,000,000
1915 (To be voted)	28,330,048

The estimates already brought down for the current fiscal year are exclusive of supplementary estimates. In addition, over $43,000,000 is to be voted on capital account. Mr. Rogers will spend this year about one quarter of the total revenue from customs and excise. What his expenditure will be in an election year can only be left to the imagination.

It is pretty evident that the Borden cabinet as a body has taken to heart and is applying the motto of a government supporter from Prince Edward Island —"dash away and spend the money."

SOLECISMS OF WHITNEYISM.

"A parlour maid is no more privileged to use the front stairs than the cook."—Extract from one of the Whitney-Pyne school books.

This reads like a bit of "false syntax" set for correction on an entrance paper. Certainly the cook might object to being used by the parlour maid. Who cobbled up these Ontario school books? Is there not a suggestion of cheap-John about them?

Another authorized observation of our gentle Government: "God may forgive sins, but awkwardness has no forgiveness in heaven or earth." This sort of wisdom might be supposed to be sanctioned by a bar-room conclave, and a cabinet of cheap snobbery.—London Advertiser.

MORE OF IT.

"You need not answer that question," ruled Chairman Ferguson in the Public Accounts Comimttee of the Legislature.

The witness under examination was Inspector Snider of the Provincial License Department, who is said to have scooted around from one county to another where the Scott Act was recently being voted on, passing the "tip" to Conservative workers not to support the measure.

The question Inspector Snider was told not to answer was as to whether he had been in those counties at that time.

Chairman Ferguson's public career in Ontario seems to be largely occupied with standing between witnesses and questions that it would never do to let them answer.—Toronto Star.

PROTESTANTS AND HOME RULE.

That most of the great champions of Irish home rule during the last hundred years were Protestants, and frequently Presbyterian Protestants at that, is sufficient refutation of the cry from armed Ulster that a parliament at Dublin is part of a conspiracy of the Catholic Church for the crushing of Protestantism.

With the exception of John Redmond, the present leader of the Nationalists, and Daniel O'Connell, all the great leaders of the Irish national movement have been Protestants. It was with these men that the idea of home rule was generated and fostered, not with the Church, and one wonders if Sir Edward Carson, as he fans the fires of religious hatred, recalls that his father, a Protestant of Protestants, years ago championed home rule at a great meeting in Dublin.

The most eloquent member, and finest spirit in the last Irish Parliament was the Protestant Grattan, who fought bravely against the extinction of the Irish House; Curran and Robert Emmett, who strove so unselfishly for Irish self-government, the latter going to the scaffold; Wolfe Tone, Lord Edward Fitzgerald, Smith O'Brien, John Mitchel, grandfather of the present mayor of New York, Thomas Davis, the poet, were all Protestants, immovable so far as their religious convictions were concerned. And finally the greatest of all leaders in the battle for Irish self-government, Charles Stewart Parnell, who became the idol of Catholic Ireland, was a Protestant. Protestant minds conceived and launched the idea of Irish home rule. In the light of Irish political history, it seems ridiculous to attempt to read into it a plot to persecute Protestants.—London Advertiser.

DRESSMAKING

PETES READY TO START TRAINING--WILL ASSEMBLE AT YOUNGSTOWN TO-MORROW

Manager Blount Expects Most of His Squad Will Be on Hand to Start Wednesday—Tracey and Sterling Will Arrive Saturday.

EXHIBITION GAMES

If the weather man is on his good behaviour, the Peterborough Canadian League club will commence their spring training at Wright Park, Youngstown, O., on Wednesday morning. Manager Curley Blount writes that for the past week the weather has been cold and disagreeable, but that better conditions are looked for this week. Arrangements have been completed for the housing of the players and Manager Blount says they will be well looked after at the Ted Hayes, which will be the headquarters of the team for the next three weeks.

Blount has heard from nearly every member of his squad, and expects to have the majority of the players on hand on Wednesday morning. Pitchers Bob Sterling and Ken Tracey have written that they will be unable to report until the end of the week, but the rest of the crew will be along to-morrow night or Wednesday. Pitcher Stan Cresswell leaves Peterborough early to-morrow morning to report to Blount. Business Manager Dobson is finishing some work on this year's score cards and will probably not go south until Saturday.

The Petes will play their first practice game on Saturday with a semi-professional team, and on Sunday will clash with another independent team. Manager Blount believes in plenty of games as a feature of spring training, and the Petes will have seven or eight practice matches before the League opens.

Manager Blount has forwarded a contract to Outfielder Willie Swartz, and the Reading boy will likely join the squad before the end of the week.

The new home uniforms have been sent to Manager Blount, who has had them on exhibition in the window of Youngstown's biggest sporting goods store. He says the natty ball suits have created a great deal of favourable comment.

Many Pennant Races Start This Week

NEW YORK, April 13.—The umpire's cry of "play ball" will resound throughout the land this week and the baseball season of 1914 will be started in earnest. It will be the opening week in the two major leagues and the new Federal league. Several of the leading minor organizations also get under way, so that between now and next Saturday the hearts of thousands of fans will be gladdened by the first skirmishes in the pennant wars. For weeks are reports from the training camps, the exhibition games played on the road, and the recent inter-league series have sharpened the appetite of the baseball "bug" and he is longing for the sound of the bell announcing the first regular game of the season.

Rarely has a season opened in the big leagues with a promise of so much to interest the fans from the very start. The uncertainty of what the season will bring forth in the way of sensational developments is what adds spice to the national game. Thanks to the organization of the Federal League and its grabbing of many players from the National and American leagues, it has become impossible to figure out the winners in the two older organizations with anything approaching certainty. Heretofore the big league teams usually have been able to retain the most of their veteran players and the younger idols of the preceding season. But this year several of the clubs have undergone the greatest shake-up of players within memory. There also have been several changes in ownership and in club management, and on the whole the changes of various kinds have been so numerous and of such an important character as to render the "form charts" of last season practically worthless as an aid in doping out the championship races this year.

Weather permitting, the season in the National and American leagues will be ushered in to-morrow with eight games in as many cities that make up the two circuits. In the Nationals League Boston is to open at Brooklyn, New York at Philadelphia, Chicago at Cincinnati and Pittsburg at St. Louis. The race in the American League will be started with St. Louis at Detroit, Cleveland at Chicago, Philadelphia at New York, and Washington at Boston.

Two of the most prominent of the minor organizations, the American Association and the Southern League, will open their championship seasons to-morrow also. Opening games in the American Association will be played as follows: Columbus at Louisville, Cleveland at Indianapolis, Minneapolis at Kansas City, and St. Paul at Milwaukee.

In the initial games in the Southern League Nashville will meet the champions at Atlanta, Memphis will play at Chattanooga, Mobile at Birmingham and New Orleans at Montgomery.

Friday will see the beginning of the championship race in the Western League. On that day Denver is scheduled to open at Lincoln, Wichita at Topeka, Sioux City at St. Joseph, and Omaha at Des Moines.

The arrangements of the Federal League provides for the opening games to be played this week as follows: Monday, Buffalo at Baltimore; Tuesday, Brooklyn at Pittsburg; Thursday, Indianapolis at St. Louis, and Chicago at Kansas City.

Other baseball organizations that will play the first games of their season's schedule this week are the Texas-Oklahoma League, the Northwestern League, the Virginia League and the Georgia State League.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

MARIETTA, Ohio, April 13. — Had Bobbie Heck known that Rube Deneau would not manage the London club in 1914, London would have secured Pitcher Worfel, who will play with the Brantford Red Sox this season. Worfel was recommended to Deneau by Heck last fall when Rube was manager of the London team. He is a right hander and, according to Bobbie, a promising twirler.

Thought Deneau in London.

When Bobbie notified Rube to get after Worfel he did not know Deneau would not be at the head of London's 1914 team. When he did learn this, it was too late. Rube had been negotiating with the pitcher and had sent him a contract.

Worfel signed up and he will turn out with the Brantford club.

Heck has not had a ball in his hand this season. That is why he was so anxious to report to the club as early as possible. He will have to take off a few pounds in weight, but should be about right when the season opens.

Won't Work Too Much.

It is not likely he will be used to any extent in many of the exhibition games.

The Syracuse southpaw is out to duplicate his last year's record of 24 wins and losses again this season.

Ottawa Free Press—The acceptance of terms by "Lefty" Rogers, the premier all around athlete of the Fitzgerald circuit, just about rounds out the double belted champs at Ottawa. Coming one week before the Senators pitch camp, the announcement of Rogers' decision is a real thriller to local fans, just as it is to managers around the circuit, only with reverse English. Rogers will not only add strength to the hitting and fielding departments, but give the club one additional hurler of merit. Lefty's record last year stands by itself. In hitting, fielding, baserunning and pitching he was grouped up among the leaders. He was a big leaguer playing in Class C company.

With Rogers reporting next Monday week at Chatham, Manager Shaughnessy now only has to worry about a good shortstop and one more pitcher. Lines are out for the former and when training camp opens, it is expected both a shortfielder as well as an experienced pitcher, will be tacked onto the squad.

No less than nine men will make up the artillery brigade when the practice season opens. This will be the largest bunch of twirlers that ever showed up for trial with the Senators. The list includes: Kane, Rogers, Lill, Kubat, Hall, Newman, Durkee, Bernlohrs, Kohl.

Manager Yates has but nineteen players under contract to the Hamilton Ball club at the present time, and one of these is Bud McLeod, the Hamilton City League star. The list of players under contract is as follows:

Catchers—Red Fisher, Darlington.
Pitchers—Dougherty, Dolan, Donohue, Dwyer, Evans, Yates.
1st base—Dolan, Dudley.
2nd base—Connors, Gilhooley,
Short stop—Wetin, Broadbent, McLeod.
Third base—Baldwin.
Outfield — Corns, Durborow, Walmsley.

Random Ravings

With Joe Byrne ready to sign with Peterborough, the Federal League has sustained another deadly blow.

What Rube Deneau has to say of the London directors is only equalled by what the L. D. have to say about Rube. And both parties may be right.

An Easter Reflection.

We would like to have the imagination of the person who invented some of the hats on view yesterday.

It seems only a few days ago since the Ottawa Free Press solemnly announced that two Major League and three International League clubs had drafts in for Lefty Rogers. And 1914 finds the modest "Rog" back in Ottawa.

Reminds us of Kaufy Lee's remark that the only way Red Fisher would get drafted was to sit in an open window.

Outfielder "Tody" Krey—who rose to great fame towards the end of last season with the Toronto International League team, and whose work in training has been uniform good.

CURLERS PLAYED IN LINDSAY GOOD FRIDAY

Curling on Good Friday is a record very seldom achieved by the local ice, the besom and stane. Yet, this actually occurred and a number of good games were played Friday on good ice.—Lindsay Warder.

BASEBALL

The Cleveland Naps have shipped Pitcher Walker, the former Appalachian leaguer, to New Orleans for more seasoning.

Fred Clarke, who was tagged to quit five years ago, is now in his fifteenth year as manager of the Pittsburg Pirates.

A younger brother of "Stuffy" McInnis, the first-sacker of the world's champions, is working out with the Athletics.

The Nashville Southern League team has two fine hitters and infielders in King and Sloan. The latter was turned back by the St. Louis Browns.

Walter Clarkson, one of Harvard's greatest pitchers and later in the American League, will essay the comeback stunt with Topsy Hartsel's Toledo team.

Manager Doojn, of the Phillies is sweet on the second-base playing of Bobby Byrne. Dooin says Bobby will make the Philly fans forget about Otto Knabe.

Eddie Foster, the Senators' crack third-baseman, may not be able to play in the opening game, as he was badly spiked in practice the other day.

According to "Kid" Gleason, the White Sox tutor, Third-Baseman Harry Lord is going in midseason form and so far as had no trouble with his throwing arm.

The new Colonial League is to open its season May 15. Five days later the Pennsylvania and West Virginia League, formerly the O. and P., will get under way.

Seven former Boston players have joined the Federal forces. They are: Rariden, Campbell, Smith, Quinn and Myers, of the Braves; and Moseley and Anderson, of the Red Sox.

Hal Chase busted into print the other day with a choice panning for Frank Chance, whom he terms only a shine manager. But at last accounts Frank was still on the job with the Yankees.

Pitcher Casey Hagerman, who was tried out by the Boston Red Sox two or three years ago, is showing the regular big league article with the St. Louis Cardinals. As a member of the Denver team Hagerman led the Western League pitchers last season.

Pitcher Toney, the former Cub, now with Louisville, always can be depended upon to pitch a swell game against his former team-mates. Pitching for the Cubs Toney wouldn't do, but pitching against them he is a wonder.

Southern League is a Puzzle—Celtic and Hibernians Drew Game in Scottish Cup Final

West of Scotland soccerites are having their cup of blessings filled to overflowing at present. A week ago they had the international played in their midst. Saturday they had the Scottish cup final and because the latter resulted in a goalless draw Hampden Park will, on Saturday, again be the mecca of the followers of the game, for there the rival Irish teams, representing the East and the West of Scotland will meet to do battle forr the Blue Ribband trophy of Scottish football. Saturday's exposition of the game was nothing to rave over, not that the 64,000 spectators assembled on the classic sloping, save perhaps the more ardent of Celtics' supporters, came away disappointed, but the play throughout was typical of cup tie fare, plenty of dash, lots of erratic shooting, and but little of that combination play which has made the game as popular as it is. If ever a team entered upon a contest confident of winning that team was Celtic Saturday. Everything was in their favour, but as was pointed out in this column on Saturday the Edinburgh men have the happy knack of rising to a great occasion. True, their form until well on in the season was distinctly "rocky," but later on they developed more of their old style. Of recent weeks they have been well served by a steady defence, and it was the defence which came to the front Saturday and rudely upset the calculations of the Celts.

Shooting Was at Fault.

A strong wind helped to make impossible the finer touches of the game, and though Boreas was against them during the first forty-five minutes of the match the Glasgow team looked as if they would accomplish great deeds. They started many likely looking runs only to be brought to a halt when the "Hibs'" defence was reached. Celtic certainly had more of the game until the interval which came with the score sheet a blank. Hibernians took a better told of the rein on resuming and on two occasions looked like getting through the Glasgow defence which was showing up well, but lacked for the once part of that brilliancy of the Easter Road men. The Hibernians' halves and forwards showed some of their old-time dash for a period but against such heavy odds as the Glasgow cracks, aided by the breeze they faded away somewhat, and it was here that Celtic should have scored but their shooting was at fault. McAtee was their only forward, who seemed to know where the "sticks" were, and on three occasions he experienced hard luck in not scoring. It was about this stage that the Edinburgh club's defence rose to the occasion and defied the incessant efforts of the Celts to put the issue beyond doubt, for the Glasgow forwards toiled with almost superhuman effort to notch a point. They kept the "Hibs" pretty much confined to their own part of the field from now until the close, but could not score. In short it was only the brilliancy of the Hibernians' goalkeeper, full-backs and half-backs that really prevented the game from being reduced to a standard of mediocrity. The "Hibs" deserved all the glory they took back with them to Edina, while the Celts have themselves to blame for hazarding their chaices of winnin the cup by throwing away opportunities.

FEDERALS OPEN TO-DAY AT BALTIMORE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

BALTIMORE, Md., April 13.—The new Federal League opened the professional baseball season on the North American continent this afternoon by a game between Baltimore and Buffalo teams. All is in readiness for the grand opening of the National and American League games to-morrow.

Johnny Coulon, the bantam champion, has turned down an offer to meet Charles Ledoux in June next, because it would interfere with his contest with "Kid" Williams.

"Kid" Lewis, the Waterbury lightweight, will forsake the ring this summer and devote his attention to ball playing. He is to get a tryout with the Hartford team.

VILLA IS TROUBLED

Heavy Desertions For Ranks of Rebels Indicates a Crisis.

EL PASO, Texas, April 13.—Ciudad Parras, the Manchester of northern Mexico, in the battleground of the Federal and rebel forces. Communication has been cut from all directions, and only the most meagre details of the battle there have drifted through the corner at Torreon, who is holding every detail of Villa's troop movement away from the world. The situation is considered a serious one for the revolutionists. This is indicated by the departure of Villa from Torreon for a high-power limousine automobile at a time when he was most needed there to straighten out the tangle caused from the collapse of the Federal civil government and the possibilities of country rule under rebel control. Parras is 52 kilometers southeast of Torreon, and all of the available men and ammunition are being rushed in that direction to crush the cornered enemy by weight of superior arms. The ammunition is so strict that nothing of a military nature has been permitted to pass by telegraph, and only the most general descriptions of the battle at the Canadian factory town can be obtained.

The one great fear of the rebels is that the Federal columns which left San Pedro after the rebels occupied it have swung about and are marching to the relief of Parras from the northeast with sufficient men and means to overwhelm Benavides' brigade before Villa's main column under Jos. Aguirre can advance to support the mounted brigade.

Made Arrests For Arrest.

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—Assurances were given last night by Minister of War Blanquet that the incident growing out of the arrest at Tampico Thursday of several American marines had been "satisfactorily arranged," although he did not say in what manner.

No information has been received here since Friday concerning the incident, and the members of the American embassy staff and American flag was saluted in accordance with the demands of Rear-Admiral Mayo.

General Villa and His Gasoline Charger—The little Napoleon of the Mexican Republic, the acclaimed hero and the man of the hour, whose fearlessness has aided him in driving the Federals from Torreon, their last stronghold, is a motorist in the true sense of the word. Acknowledging the supremacy of motor-driven method of transportation, he has deserted the four-footed, sporting charger for the gasoline charger During the hammering away at Torreon, his motorcycle couriers covered themselves with glory. This photo was taken at Villa's headquarters at Juarez just before his successful advance on Torreon.

A GOOD REPORT ON COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The report of Inspector Houston, re the Collegiate Institute, which was read at the last meeting of the Board of Education, is the best that the school has received for several years. As your reporter passed it over almost in silence, may I ask you, in justice to myself and colleagues, to publish the following extracts?

I. Organization.

(a) Division of duties among teachers: "Very satisfactory."

(b) Provision for teaching the courses: "The organization and management are excellent. I know no school in which they are superior. Ample provision is made for all the subjects, so far as can be done without over-loading the pupils with work."

II. Character of the Teaching.

(I. indicates good; II., fair; III., poor; IV., bad).

"English and History I., Mathematics I., Science I., Latin and Greek I., French and German I., Commercial I., Art I., Reading I."

III. Character of the Pupils' Work.

(a) "The Reading, Writing and Spelling are of a high order."

(b) Book-keeping sets. "Satisfactory."

(c) Work in Art: "Excellent work done in both years and sufficient in quantity."

(d) Note-books in Science. "The work is all that could be desired in all the forms. Course is well covered."

IV. General Remarks.

"In organization, management, efficiency of staff, and general tone this is one of the best schools I have visited. So far as teachers and pupils are concerned, conditions are all that could be desired."

V. Accommodations.

"The building and everything about it appears to be kept in excellent condition."

Yours truly,

H. R. H. Kenner.

Note.—In reference to the remark that "the reporter passed it (the report) over almost in silence, in justice to the Examiner and its reporter, the following which is the first paragraph of the Examiner's report of the meeting at which the report was presented, is submitted:

At the regular meeting of the Board of Education last night the report of High School Inspector J. A. Houston was received, and the members were greaty pleased with his remarks as a result of his visit to the local Collegiate Institute. In the report all the subjects were graded "I" and the equipment was pronounced splendid. The Inspector saw fit to make only three recommendations, they being in connection with minor details of the equipment. A very small addition to art models, better physical advantages for the pupils and the installation of a motor in connection with the ventilating system were advised by the Inspector. The Board last night undertook to remedy one of these by making a grant of $15.00 for art models. The other matters were left for the proper committees to deal with, but the installation of the motor has been included in the plans of the Board for some time. The report says that "in organization, management, efficiency of the staff and general tone, this is one of the best schools I have visited."

HIS WOUNDS PROVE FATAL

Italian Workman In Ottawa Is Killed and Assailant Escapes.

OTTAWA, April 13.—John Stainni, an Italian, 25 years of age, died last night from wounds received shortly after two o'clock yesterday afternoon in a foreign boarding-house at 24 West George street. His alleged assailant, Antonio Pedro, commonly known in the Italian colony as Tony, escaped, and has not been seen since. His description has been sent to surrounding towns and cities.

All the murdered man would say before he died was that he knew the man who had shot him. The only distinctive feature which the police are counting on to aid in Pedro's capture is that his face is badly scratched. He is about 35 or 40 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, and weighs 175 pounds.

One Killed In Train Wreck.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., April 13.—One man was killed and six persons were injured when a suburban train on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, eastbound, was was wrecked at Clayton, two miles from this city Saturday. Five of the injured were passengers, and none suffered seriously. Engineer Frederick Benson of East Hartford, and fireman Henry V. Carroll of North Redding, Conn., were taken from the wreck unconscious and removed to a hospital, where Carroll died soon after. The cause of the accident has not been determined.

Three Men Drowned.

EMO, Ont., April 13. — A tripple drowning occurred Friday afternoon at Barwick, the first station west of Emo, on the Canadian Northern Railway, caused by four men trying to cross the Rainy River in a small canoe in a heavy wind storm, three of the men being drowned and the fourth escaping death by a small margin. The drowned were Carl Haglund, Eric Ericson and Albert Weeks. The bodies have not yet been recovered. George Smart, the survivor, was rescued by people on shore, who heard cries for assistance.

THE TRUTH ABOUT PRAYER

(Frederick Dixon in Occult Review, London.)

A writer produces from an anonymous publication what she fondly imagines is this dilemma: "If prayer can heal diseases, why should it not also bring business? and, if so, why trouble to work? Why not only pray?" Anything more foolish than this it would be difficult to conceive. Let me put the method of argument a little differently. If thought can produce a book, why trouble to go to the publisher, why not only think? Supposing that prayer would produce business, you would still, presumably, require an office in which to transact your business, just as if thought produces a book you still require a publisher to print it.

What, however, the critic has not grasped is the fact that prayer not only heals diseases, but it does bring business, though not perhaps quite in the way she imagines, and that for the simple reason she has not the faintest idea what Christian Science means by prayer. By prayer Christian Science does not mean making petitions to an anthropomorphic God for something for which the material senses create a desire. Prayer, in the words of Mrs. Eddy, is "a spiritual understanding of Him." Now "the "Him" being God, and God being Spirit, prayer is a spiritual understanding of spiritual things; in plain English, it is what Jesus meant by that understanding of the truth which was to make men free. Exactly in proportion as man understands absolute Truth he frees himself from the domination of the material falsehoods which have previously fettered him. He frees himself from sin, from sickness, from those limitations which constitute poverty and misery; and in doing this he realizes the truth about substance.

The ministry of Jesus was devoted to teaching men the truth which was to make them free, the truth not only about health and substance, but everything else in the material as in the spiritual universe. He showed the sick how they might be healed through prayer, and he showed, in the temptations, how man might live without bread. He did not, however, in any single instance, suggest to those who were slowly and painfully following His steps, that they should fling aside their daily occupations. He does not appear to have suggested to the disciples that they should give up fishing, and we know that Paul, who certainly knew somthing about the teaching of Jesus,—enough to heal the sick and raise the dead,—worked at his trade of tent-making, in Corinth. The work of Christian Science is to teach people how to make practical in this century what Jesus taught in the first century. In proportion as humanity gets rid of sin it may attain a spiritual insight, as a result of which it will not need to buy bread or to go a-fishing. Until then it is best for it to go on doing its business, only doing it honestly, as Paul did in Corinth.

Father's Sacrifice In Vain.

PARIS, April 13.—The eight-year-old son of a chauffeur was knocked down and seriously injured by an automobile Friday evening. Seemingly the only chance to save his life was by the transfusion of blood, and the boy's father at once offered himself for that purpose. A large quantity of blood was transfused but in vain; the boy died, and the father is in a critical condition.

PREPARING TO TRY BECKER ONCE AGAIN

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 13.—Interest in the Becker case was revived to-day when the second trial of the former Police Lieutenant now under conviction for the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, was moved before Justice Davis in the criminal branch of the State Supreme Court. It is expected the case will be set for an early date. District Attorney Whitman, it is said, has completed the bulk of the work incident to gathering the evidence for the second trial. According to reliable information the State will again rest its case upon the testimony of Rose, Weber, and Vallon, who were the chief witnesses for the prosecution at the first trial. It is said, however, that there will be much new testimony introduced to corroborate their evidence.

Jean Graninni—This is the boy who confessed to the murder of Lydia Beecher, the young school teacher of Poland. Police experts say the face is that of a born criminal.

Robber Endangers Ships.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Sleeping passengers on the steamship Vauban approaching New York early Saturday off Sandy Hook were aroused by an explosion in the baggage compartment of the steerage. Fire followed the explosion, but was quickly extinguished. Investigation showed that a Syrian, riding the baggage of a fellow immigrant, had opened a box of cartridges and in so doing set them off. He was badly burned.

King Gustave Progressing.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, April 13.—Further progress towards convalescence was announced in the surgeon's bulletin regarding the condition of King Gustave of Sweden, issued yesterday from the Sophia Hospital, where his majesty was operated on for ulceration of the stomach on Thursday.

Japan's most expert wrestlers are men who have inherited their ability from ancestors who made wrestling a profession for generations.

Evangelist At Gospel Hall

Mr. Robt. McMurdo of Chicago conducted a Bible reading in the Gospel Hall yesterday morning at nine o'clock, dealing with the Lord's Supper, showing its institution on the same night in which He was betrayed, its purpose, viz., for a remembrance of Himself and the participants, only those who have been born again; all such should partake of it and all others should be excluded.

In the afternoon at three o'clock the address to Christians was a rare treat, the subject being, the Church, its work and purpose. This meeting was largely attended.

At night the hall was filled to hear Mr. McMurdo again. The address was based on the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of Luke, dealing with first things of earth in the 14th chapter, the various excuses given why men refuse to obey the Gospel message. The fifteenth spoke of Heaven as a place of joy. "There is joy in the presence of the angels over one sinner that repenteth. The sixteenth spoke of hell as a place of torment, and the inevitable end of all who obey not the Gospel.

Meetings will be conducted every night this week at eight o'clock, the subject being 'Problems of Life,' from the Book of Job.

SPEAKING IT THE BEST WAY OF LEARNING THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

It is necessary in his own interest that everyone in Canada should learn to speak the English language, even if he never learns to read and write it. English is the language of business and of public life. It is so great a handicap on an individual not to know English that he has just cause to feel aggrieved at those who may have been responsible for his comparatively helpless condition.

There are two classes of people who have to learn English as beginners—infants and foreigners—and they have to learn it in precisely the same way. They have by degrees to acquire a vocabulary and to learn how to combine individual words into groups that make sense and convey thoughts. The normal child accomplishes these formidable undertakings before he is three years old; a non-English boy or girl should be able to do it in a comparatively short time if the right method is adopted in tuition. There is only one effective way to impart a practical knowledge of English to a non-English person of any age; require and, if need be, constrain him to speak it. The time necessary to his success will depend on the amount of practice he gets, and this will always be greatest when his teacher has no knowledge of the pupil's mother tongue.

This has been abundantly demonstrated by experiments carefully conducted in Western Canada and the Western States, and, under the auspices of the Board of Education, a thorough test has been in operation for some years in Toronto. In some of our public schools the great majority of the pupils are Jews, and Yiddish is their mother tongue. The teachers of these pupils are unanimous and enthusiastic in their testimony that the parents are most cordial in their support of the school authorities. Jewish children are proverbially docile in the matter of discipline, and untiringly eager in their desire to learn English. It is quite certain that where the teachers do not know the pupil's language the pupil will very speedily learn that of his teachers, and he will do so all the more rapidly if he is in an English-speaking environment at school.

During the past few months in one of our Toronto schools a more than usually competent staff of teachers have conducted night classes made up largely of adolescent and adult Jews, most of whom have just arrived in this country. They learn English with wonderful rapidity, and they sing Canadian patriotic songs with a verve that surprises the chance visitor. This experiment should be a source of inspiration and encouragement to those parents who desire to have their children learn English in order that they may have a fair chance in the never-ending struggle for the survival of the fittest. Children who do not learn English in school will always speak it with difficulty, and will always realize with resentment the wrong inflicted on them by people who should have known better.—The Globe.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

Count Michael Karolyi, president of the Hungarian Independent party, has arrived here on a mission that is exciting great interest in Hungarian political circles, for it is believed he will direct his efforts toward drawing Hungarians now in America into the home parliamentary campaign. He plans to visit Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Chicago, and a number of other cities. The Count belongs to a family that has for ages taken a leading part in Hunkarian affairs. The fainaly is not altogether unknown in the United States, owing to the sojourn here a dozen years or so ago of Count Geo. Karoyi. About the year 1900 this member of the afmily attracted attention by marrying a Hungarian actress after a precipitate flight across the Atlantic. The marriage eremony was performed in the City Hall in Boston and later there was a second ceremony in Oakland, Cal. The young Count and his actress wife spent three years in California, running a hotel in San Francisco, of which all the employees were broken down nobles, and possessed of perfectly authentic and, in some cases, historic titles. The enterprise, however, resulted in ultimate failure and the couple returned to Europe. Later the Countess obtained a divorce from her huband.

A wrecking crew is demoishing the old buildings of Washington Market, and when it has finished its work there is to be built on the site one of the finest and most sanitary markets in the word. Feelings of sorrow and regret filled the breasts of the scores of butchers and produce merhants tenanting the market when they saw the pik and axe applied to the old buildings. Washington Market is more than 100 years od and has been one of the few remaining landmarks in lower Manhattan. The market was completed and opened in 1813. These were war times, and the marketmen soon had an occasion to celebrate, when, on October 23, the City was illuminated in honour of Perry's victory on Lake Erie. All of the tenants of the Market illuminated their stalls with a profusion of coloured lights. A few years later the market was enlarged to two stories, having a cupola and a watch tower with a bell on top. This bell did servie for many years in sounding alarms of fire. Many of the old-time butchers in the market were men of influence in the civic and financial life of the city.

No doubt the science of eugenics is a fine thing. But just as you have convinced yourself that the babies should be bred to measure, you visit the New York or Boston or Philadelphia dog shows and see what practical eugenics have accomplished. Then you go hooting out and throw a rock through some laboratory window.

Most men remember some cheery, honest, nippy little mutt — smart enough to take care of himself, willing to hunt anything from a rabbit to a tramp, and with a mania for shoving a wet nose in his master's hand. The eugenic dogs are not that sort at all. They wheeze and slobber and snarl. The more highly bred they are the more completely useless they are—between Coney Island's seasons.

Thomas W. Lawson has a herd of bull dogs playing the Big Time on the Canine circuit. Any one of them has cost as much as a nice farm. They have been eugenized into idiocy. Turn one of these bench legged, shovel jawed jokes into the street and he would die in a week. Four dollars worth of hide, $2 worth of wrinkles, and a quarter's worth of dog made a bloodhound. His virtue is that he realizes that fact. That's why he suffers from melancholia.

The Sealyham terrier was originally a grand little dog. He is being bred by rule into a cripple. The modern St. Bernard is just a splay-footed flabby flea garage. He is only fit to be killed for beef. And the toy dogs, with their little pink tongues forever lolling out of their little dripping mouths, and their little women forever wiping their little snouts with their lace-edged handkerchiefs—Lord preserve us!

Why doesn't someone start a mutt circuit and show us some real dogs?

CELEBRATION IS APPROVED

Bill Provides for Appointment of Commission and Appropriation of Necessary Funds.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13—The Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives has ordered a favourable report on the bill to approve the celebration of the one-hundredth anniversary of the signing of the Treaty of Ghent between the United States and Great Britain and Ireland, and of the century of peace and amity between the United States and other nations.

There was not a dissenting vote in the committee, and Chairman Flood expects to present the bill shortly to the House some day next week. Just when it will be acted upon is problematical, although an effort will be made to put it upon the unanimous consent calendar. In case this is accomplished the bill may be considered within a couple of weeks.

The bill provides for the appointment of a commission and the appropriation of necessary expenses. This commission will co-operate with other commissions and committees in making arrangements for the celebration and render a report of the conclusions to Congress.

THE SALVATION ARMY HELD SPLENDID SERVICES YESTERDAY

In Commemoration of 29th Anniversary Of its Establishment Here

CLOSES TO-NIGHT

To-night, with its young people's rally, will see the close of the celebration of the 29th anniversary of the Salvation Army in this City. It has been continued during the past four days with unabated enthusiasm, and Adjutant McElheany is to be congratulated on the success of the celebration.

On Saturday night the Old Time meeting was held in the Salvation Army Temple, when the veterans present gave incidents of their experiences, which were very much enjoyed. The band was dressed in old time uniform, used old instruments and rendered the favourite compositions of years ago, made a big addition to the pleasure of the evening. At that meeting Staff Captain and Mrs. McAmmond, from Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough, were given an enthusiastic reception.

Yesterday morning at half-past six o'clock, nearly one hundred marched up Aylmer Street to Murray, to Rubidge, to Charlotte, to Aylmer Streets, and wound up at the Christian Scientists' Church, where the first Salvation Army in this City met for the first time. The meeting there was led by Adjutant McElheany.

At 10.30 o'clock an open air meeting was held in front of the Fire Hall, and at 11 o'clock the morning service was held in the Temple. It was led by Staff Captain and Mrs. McAmmond, and Mrs. McElheany addressed the meeting. At 2 o'clock the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes were addressed by Staff Captain McAmmond.

An open meeting was held in the Temple at 3 o'clock, and a large number attended. Mr. J. S. Burnham, M.P.; Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P.; Mayor Fuller and Ald. Johnston gave brief addresses, which were listened to with interest by those present. The speakers reviewed the history of the Army in this City and paid several well-deserved compliments to the members in connection with the work they had done, were doing, and proposed to do. Adjutant McElheany, on behalf of the Army, thanked the gentlemen for their presence and remarks. Staff Captain McAmmond presided at the meeting, and the band rendered special Easter selections.

In the evening an evangelistic service was held and resulted in a number of conversions, owing to the stirring appeal of the speakers to the audience. It was a fitting close to the services of the day. To-night the young people will render an appropriate Easter demonstration, entitled "The Floral Crook."

Thirty-four Were Baptized

Easter was a red letter day at Park Street Baptist Church. The edifice was beautifully decorated with flowers and large congregations filled the building at all services. In the morning the Pastor preached on Baptism, treating it under three different headings, namely "Baptism enjoined of Christians," "Significance of Christian Baptism," and "Examples of Christian Baptism." At the close of the morning service thirteen were baptized.

In the afternoon, at the Pastor's Bible Class there were thirty-eight men in attendance.

In the evening the auditorium was packed, when Rev. Mr. Connors preached on the Resurrection. He presented Christ in His representative capacity, which is a two-fold one, namely, as God's representative to man, and as man's representative to God. Christ was our example in life, also an example of God's holiness. Christ was the sacrifice for sin, and our advocate. "He passed through the grave for us," said the speaker, "and we pass through the grave in Him." Twenty-one were baptized at the evening service, making a total of 34 for the day, this being the largest number in any one day in the history of the Church.

Presentation To Mr. Sandy

Departing G. T. R. Agent is Honoured This Afternoon

Mr. Frank Sandy, who for a number of years has been G.T.R. agent here, and who is leaving on Wednesday to accept a similar position in Lindsay, was the recipient of several presentations this afternoon, testifying to the high esteem in which he is held. Two delegations invaded his office at 3 o'clock, the first representing the cheese buyers of the district. On their behalf Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie presented Mr. Sandy with a splendid club bag. A deputation representing the business men of the City presented Mr. Sandy with a beautiful silver service and a handsome Morris chair. The deputation consisted of Mayor Buller, J. A. Cameron, E. Hicks, R. Fair, J. H. Ferguson, G. A. Gillespie and John White. Mayor Buller was the first speaker, and the others spoke briefly, all referring to the loss the City would sustain in the departure of Mr. Sandy. The latter made a suitable reply.

BOY FATALLY SHOT

OTTAWA, April 13.—Alfred Ambridge of this city, aged 12, was shot through the body and probably fatally wounded while out crow hunting near here. A rifle in the hands of a companion was discharged accidentally, the bullet passing through the abdomen of young Ambridge, who was standing a few paces away.

Disastrous Fire at Uhthoff.

UMTHOFF, April 13.—Driven by a strong wind a fire which started in the home of J. Antonio yesterday afternoon, spread rapidly to an adjoining church, burning it to the ground and then ignited a big pile of cordwood in the G.T.R. yards. Eight hundred cords awaiting shipment were destroyed.

SCHOONER RUNS ASHORE

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Apr 13.—The British schooner Percy from Port Clyde, N.S., for New London, Conn., with wood pulp, ran ashore on East Chop early yesterday and was still fast yesterday. There was little wind and sea during the night, and it was expected that the schooner would be floated without serious damage.

Willie's Peril.

Apropos of the opening of the schools and colleges, Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University, said at a dinner at Worcester:

"We all incline to think our own seat of learning the best one, but we should beware of this inclination, for in its nature it is unpleasantly like the letter a Worcester schoolma'am received the other day—

"'Dear Miss Teacher,—Please do not push Willie too hard, for so much of his brains is intelleck that he ought to be held back stead of pushed hard or he will run to intellect entirely, and I do not desire this. So please hold him back hard so as to keep his intelleck from getting bigger than his body and so injuring him for life.'"

GYPSIES ACCUSED OF CLEVERLY SWINDLING TORONTO DOCTORS—How a band of traveling fortune-tellers, professing to be driving across Canada from coast to coast, got money out of prominent Toronto physicians, was told in the Police Court. The gypsies, on receiving charitable treatment, offered to tell the doctors' fortune. They claimed it was impossible to fulfil the fortune-telling unless the doctors let them place a roll of bills of the doctor's money under his chin. When this was accomplished, they went through the usual tactics, at the same time drawing several bills from the roll. The missing money was not noticed until after they had left the home of the second doctor, who notified the police.

GEORGE ST. CHOIR PRESENTED FINE EASTER PROGRAMME

Church delighted the congregation at the morning and evening services on Sunday with a special programme of music prepared for the occasion. In the morning Granier's "Hosannah," with tenor solo by Mr. J. Browne, and chorus by the choir, was very well rendered. Miss Etta Kemp sang "Resurrection Morn" in fine voice. A special musical programme was offered in the evening to a very large congregation. Rev. Mr. Peever curtailed his sermon on this account.

The anthem, "God so loved the world," from the "Crucifixion," was splendidly rendered by the choir. "Christ is Risen" was another beautiful number. Miss Blunt, soprano, was heard to good effect in this offering. Miss Ida Sanderson's contralto solo and a quartette by Miss Hanson, Mrs. Rehill, Mr. Miller and Mr. Dartnell were most acceptably presented. Mrs. Renwick's solo, "I know that my Redeemer liveth" was sung with fine effect. The choir in its ensemble work gave another evidence of its superior work, and the large attendance at both services were indications of the appreciation on the part of the congregation.

Mr. Renwick presided at the organ, his work leaving nothing to be desired. The day's music was most appropriate for the Easter occasion.

117 MOTOR CAR LICENSES OUT

During the last week there has been a great rush on the part of automobile owners to secure their automobile licenses, and Mr. Gerald Rackham, issuer of licenses for the district, states that 117 licenses have already been issued the majority of them during the past few days. At one time this morning there were seven cars outside Mr.

Easter Music At The Church of The Sacred Heart

Easter Sunday music at the Church of the Sacred Heart was featured with a rather difficult new mass which was handled in a manner that reflected much credit upon the group of singers who give their time and attention to the new south-end church's music. It was quite the best work that they have done thus far. Rev. Father McCauley, Miss Simons and Mr. J. Armstrong gave considerable time to the Easter music, and their efforts were well repaid. The Gloria was a beautiful number. The offertory selection was Regina Coeli. Mr. Ed. Hartley and Mr. Peter Henshaw, baritone and tenor respectively, have been most valuable to their efforts to build up the choir, and yesterday, as usual, carried the most of the solo work. Miss A. Simons sang the soprano solos effectively.

Miners Give Up The Battle

Special to The Examiner:

CALUMET, Mich., April 13. —The announcement was made at the American Federation Miners' headqaurters to-day that the copper miners, who have been on strike for nine months, will return to the mines on practically the same conditions prevailing before the strike, renouncing their claims to higher wages, shorter hours and other concessions.

EASTER AT ALL SAINTS'

The services in All Saints' Church, yesterday, were truly of an Easter nature, a large number partaking of Holy Communion, of which there were three celebrations. The preacher at both morning and evening service was the Rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, who was heard by large congregations. In the afternoon His Honour Judge Huycke addressed the Sunday School scholars and, with his usual aptitude, held them all, from the smallest to the eldest, intently quiet to what he had to say to them. Both services were attended by a choir numbering some thirty-five voices and in the morning Jackson's 'Te Deum' and an anthem, 'We Will Rejoice,' (Simper), was sung. Miss Williams rendered the solo in a creditable manner.

In the evening an ambitious musical offering had been prepared by the Choir Master, Mr. George E Chandler, the unaccompanied pieces being particularly good. Mr. T. H. Boddy singing the bass solo 'Be Thou Faithful' offering had been prepared Miss Fowers played at all the services in her usual very efficient manner.

The Easter music will be repeated next Sunday.

CARSON'S WORDS

Examiner Special:

BELFAST, April 13.—(Cable.) —Reviewing twenty-eight hundred volunteers at Antrim to-day, Carson declared: "We are an army of peace, asking nothing but to be left alone, but I can tell the men who come to take away what we have that we will never submit to it as long as we have a single man. You have the spirit of self sacrifice, which goes further to win victories than the best artillery."

EASTER DAY AT ST. LUKE'S

Easter Day at St. Luke's Church, East City, was marked by services of an intensely interesting and joyful character. Large congregations were present, and the great festival of the Resurrection was undoubtedly an occasion of great blessing. The number of communicants was the largest in the history of the Church, the total for the day being two hundred and eighty-two. This with several members who, owing to illness, were unable to come out to Church, but who will receive communion privately during the week, will bring the number up to three hundred.

The rector Rev. F. J. Sawers, preached at both services, his discourse in the evening being particularly eloquent and instructive. He laid emphasis, in the course of his remarks, on the absolute fact of the Resurrection. It established the great hope of immortality, and in the words of an eminent theologian, was the outstanding rock of the Christian religion, on which the hammers of criticism had not chipped a fragment.

The music at yesterday's services was splendidly rendered, the anthem in the morning being: "They have taken away my Lord," with soprano solo by Miss Phyllis Dawson. In the evening the choir sang, "Why seek ye the living among the dead," with a solo by Master Sam Whitehouse and a duet by Mr. Greenslade and Master Whitehouse.

The wardens of the Church asked for a special Easter offering of $300, but the generous response of the congregation exceeded the required amount by over fifty dollars.

Trade Conditions Will Be Discussed

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13.—The Dominion Royal Commission, the inter-Imperial body appointed at the last Imperial conference to inquire into trade conditions throughout the empire, will arrive at Sydney on August 15. Hon. George E. Foster, who is the Canadian representative on the Commission, will submit statistics relating to the trade of the country. Meetings, at which leading business men and people interested in all phases of Canadian commerce will be asked to give evidence, will be held at various Ontario cities.

Detectivies Found Hidden Explosives

Members of Local Police Force and Lindsay Police Find Dynamite in Orillia

The Orillia News-Letter says: An organized gang of burglars, with headquarters at Orillia, have been operating throughout this district for some time, according to the story of one Herbert Smith, a youth of Midland who, with a companion named Wilson, was arrested last Wednesday in Peterborough, after a raid on Lindsay stores the night before.

After hearing Smith's story, Detectives Newhall and Meagher, of Peterborough, and Chief Chilton of Lindsay, came to Orillia on Friday to investigate. They were joined here by Chief Reid and Constable Wright and went over to Barnfield, situated about half way to the Narrows, on the north side of the railway tracks, where they had been informed by Smith, the gang had their headquarters for this district in a shack. They found the shack as described by Smith. It is built of boards and was fitted up with boxes for seats, while the floor was littered with straw. Some bed clothes were also in the place. Cotton batting, used for packing around explosives for safe blowing, cartridges, railroad tickets and other goods were found.

The officers expected to land some of the gang here, as several of them had been described by Smith, but they found the birds had flown. The local police are on the lookout for these men.

On Sunday Constables Tinkwon and Richardson made a trip of investigation to Barnfield. Crossing over to Leacock's point, they found that Prof. Stephen Leacock's cottage had also been used by the gang and this is probably where they slept. Five sticks of dynamite and a number of cartridges were found in the cottage.

About a year ago when Dr. Leacock returned to town for the summer he found a pile of dynamite in the lot adjacent to his, left there by the C.P.R. construction gang. He was justly indignant and took immediate action with the proper authorities and had them remove it. He will be somewhat shocked when he learns that a band of thieves had taken possessionof his cottage and kept dynamite carelessly around inside. These recent developments may give Dr. Leacock enough new material for another volume of "Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town."

Miss Harriette Pierce, a pupil of St. Mary's Convent, gave a very successful recital at the Toronto College of Music, Toronto, on Tuesday, April 7th. OUR BARBERS PRAISED

Travellers and Others Compliment Peterborough's Tonsorial Artists

Strangers in the city have frequently been heard to remark upon the satisfactory service given them by our local barbers. The other day a gentleman dropped into Mr. Snelgrove's chair in Spence's barber shop on George street, and appears to have left it so well satisfied that he aired himself to a newspaper reporter after this fashion:

"You have some pretty slick barbers in Peterborough. I never come here but I have something done by one or other of your tonsorial artists. I have just had one of the best general 'trims' I can get anywhere."

"Glad to hear our boys so well spoken of—who 'fixed' you up?"

"Snelgrove, I think his name is, if I remember right, in Spence's barber shop. Why, he's a real artist in wielding the razor and shears — and I should think he could get all sorts of money if he wanted in Montreal. He could make any establishment a favourite resort for the fashionable portion of the citizens. I noticed he has a combination of the latest fads and fancies in hair dressing, shampooing and shaving that should be the delight of the most fastidious of customers."

Real Estate Transactions Are Decidedly Brisk

In direct contradiction to the statement of some pessimists that times are hard, and money is tight, comes the remarkably good stroke of business of Mr. H. J. McCannan, real estate dealer. From Monday to Saturday his business transactions amounted to $12,260, which is a striking illustration of Mr. McCannan's industry and enterprise in the field of real estate. Mr. McCannan is a firm believer in the future of Peterborough, and judging from the number of buildings to be erected this year the city is bound to take a big forward step. Other real estate men are equally optimistic.

Owing to a typographical error, Mr. Robert Hicks' coal advertisement on Saturday was made to read as though a ton contained but 200 (two hundred) pounds of coal. GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC STEEL NOW LINKED UP

Last Link Joined That Girds Continent With 3744 Miles of 80 lb. Steel Rails—Best New Railway Ever Built

OPENS NEW CONTINENT

NECHAKO RIVER CROSSING, B. C., April 11.—Steel east and west on the Grand Trunk Pacific was linked up Tuesday, the last mile being laid in the presence of Mr. Morley Donaldson, Vice President and General Manager, and other officials of the Company. The point is 371 miles east of Prince Rupert and 1,375 miles from Winnipeg. There was no elaborate ceremony, and only officers of the railway were present. The formal ceremony, to include the driving of the golden spike, will take place later, when additional facilities will permit a number of distinguished guests to be present.

Since the beginning of the year steel has been laid on 143 miles of line. Contractors have been straining every resources to get the grade finished ahead of the track-laying gangs, which were pressing them hard from both directions. The rapidity of progress since the beginning of the year has been partly due to the fact that heavy mountain work was conquered, and construction has been going on in the broad agricullural belt of central British Columbia. This point, which saw the joining of the steel, is itself in that district, for the Nechako River gives its name to the most noted of the agricultural belt of central British

The main line of the Grand Trunk Pacific extends from Winnipeg, Man., to Prince Rupert, B.C., a distance of 1,7.6 miles. The line first follows the Assiniboine Valley in Manitoba, and runs through a district well settled before the advent of the railway. From Portage la Prairie west, however, the whole district traversed was practically a new one, and one in which colonization and development has been due to the railway. Now, however, the country is dotted with towns in all stages of development, from tiny hamlet to flourishing divisional or junction point, with graded streets, cement sidewalks, sewers, municipal water and eectric light.

In British Columbia the greatest agricultural area in the Province, formerly shut off from the world, has been opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific.

The Grand Trunk Pacific is described as the best new railway ever constructed. The route through the Yelowhead Pass in the Rocky Mountains is an exceptionally favourable one, offering the lowest grades of any transcontinental—four-tenths of one per cent., or twenty-one feet in the mile, against east-bound traffic, and five-tenths of one per cent., or 26.4 feet in the mile, against west-bound traffic. This means an ability to haul longer and heavier trains than could otherwise be accommodated, but to take ful advantage of the route, engineering skil of the highest class was required. A grade has therefore been constructed equal to that of most lines after many years of service, and solid steel bridges have been used instead of the timber trestles so often employed. A road-bed eighteen feet wide has been constructed and laid with rails weighing eighty pounds to the yard. Six per cent. is the maximum curvature employed, and even this has been used very sparingly. On the prairie there are tangents as long as forty-seven miles.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company was incorporated by act of Parliament in 1903, which authorized special arrangements for bond guarantees for the company. Construction was begun in Manitoba in 1905, and on the Pacific end in May, 1908. The first steel was laid in September, 1906.

FASHIONABLE NOW TO WORK.

Not so very long ago work was thought to be something to conceal. If a girl had to earn money she tried to kep the fact hidden from all her friends. It wasn't genteel to work; and if a thing weren't genteel—well, enough said!

Nowadays it is the people who do no work who are ashamed of the fact. Rich men and women are no longer content to sit around and be waited on by the world at large; they too, desire to be up and doing. The better their type, the more earnest they are to find some work worth the effort.

Yes. To be modern you must work. To be happy, sane and interested in life, you must work.

he girl who has to earn her living, and who works at a congenial job is the luckiest girl in the world to-day. She makes the better wife and mother when her time comes to marry, and unless her home duties completely fill her time she usually keeps on doing at least some outside work, and is the better for it. Often she joins forces with her husband and keeps her youth and his love the more surely.

Don't, be content just to shuffle through your jobs, girls. Train yourselves to like and respect work to give it energy, brains and spirit. Remember that ours is the country of work, and be glad you are of it. Work brings you into contact with all there is worth while, opens every gate worth opening, and broadens the mind.

AN EASTER ANNIVERSARY.

Easter this year falls upon almost the identical date which marks the second anniversary of that terrible night when the itanic sank in mid-ocean. The first thrill of horror, the first hot emotions of indignation, have long since dwindled. Perhaps some memories of them linger. But deeper than those are the great qualities enshrined by that awful night; the two ideals of duty and courage. Even after these twenty-four months the recollection of duty fulfilled has increased rather than diminished in beauty and inspiration. o know one's duty is no tremendous thing; to do it in a crisis is to achieve nobility of character. Wordsworth has told of the man

Whom neither shape of danger can dismay,
Nor thought of tender happiness betray;
Who, not content that former worth stand fast,
Looks forward, persevering to the last.
. . . . . .
Finds comfort in himself and in his cause;
And, while the mortal mist is gathering, draws
His breath in confidence of Heaven's applause:
This is the Happy Warrior; this is he Whom every Man in arms should wish to be.

Along with duty went courage—so great that the very quality has taken on a new glory. From a mere image of philosophers courage became a real thing. That cowardice lurked in a few quarters only renders the true quality more conspicuous. Some have long been inslined to bewail the gradual disintegration of all the finer ports of character. They have cried that so-called civilization is onyl a mockery, a mask to cover the aspect of dwindling virtues. To such a disaster was a lasting rebuke. After all the months, like a trumpet call to mankind, comes the piercing recollection of bravery and self-sacrifice. It has helped to restore the vision that enobles life in this work-aday world. The pain was great, but greater still has been the inspiration. —Collier's.

HAIR DOESN'T DIE—
IT HAS TO BE KILLED

Hair often continues to live and growing after the death of the body. But it is often killed through neglect or misuse. Almost always the woman or man whose hair is falling out, or is stringy, lifeless and dull-looking, is entirely to blame because of not giving it the proper care. It is easy to take care of the hair—easy to make it more beautiful. Use Harmony Hair Beautifier, to make it glossy, soft and silky, and Harmony Shampoo to keep hair and scalp thoroughly clean.

Harmony Hair Beautifier, delightfully perfumed with true rose, is very easy to apply—simply sprinkle a little on your hair each time before brushing it. It contains no oil, and will not change the color of the hair, nor darken gray hair.

To keep your hair and scalp dandruff-free and clean, use Harmony Shampoo. This pure liquid shampoo is most convenient to use, giving an instantaneous rich, foaming lather that immediately penetrates to every part of the hair and scalp, insuring a quick and thorough cleansing. It is washed off just as quickly, the entire operation taking only a few moments. Contains nothing that can harm the hair, and leaves no harshness or stickiness—just a sweet cleanliness.

Both preparations come in odd-shaped, very ornamental bottles, with sprinkler tops. Harmony Hair Beautifier, $1.00. Harmony Shampoo, 50c. Both guaranteed to satisfy you in every way, or your money back. Sold in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—one of the more than 7,000 leading drug stores of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which own the big Harmony laboratories, Toronto, where the celebrated Harmony Perfumes and Toilet Preparations are made.

SIMPLER STUDIES

Committee of Ontario Educational Association Present Report

MORE OPTIONAL SUBJECTS

TORONTO, April 14.—The simplification of the common school curriculum, which has been long demanded by a section of the public, is provided for in the draft of the new regulations and courses of study of the public and separate schools of this province, just completed for presentation to the Ontario Educational Association for study this afternoon. These amended rules have not been submitted to Hon. Dr. R. A. Pyne, Minister of Education, yet, but go directly before the association through John Seath, Ontario superintendent of education. The simplification of the school studies is made through the extension of the optional principle, so that a school board is at liberty to pare down the number of subjects taught to a minimum. In formed one to four, the subjects to be taught are now divided into three groups. The first group comprises reading literature, composition, spelling, grammar, history, geography, writing, arithmetic, manners and morals, and is made compulsory. The second group includes hygiene, physical culture, art, nature study and vocal music. When the teacher is qualified this group may be taught with the omission of topics duly authorized by the inspector, or local chief inspector. Group number three comprises bookkeeping, manual training, handsewing, household science, agriculture and horticulture, which are made entirely optional, but the school board may select for teaching any subjects that are desirable and practicable under the conditions of the school. In the fifth form foreign languages, commercial subjects, manual training, household science, horticulture and agriculture, are optional.

The new rules also provide for religious instruction in the schools after hours by the clergy of any denomination to the pupils of that faith, once a week. Any number of denominations may agree to send a particular clergyman to teach the pupils of their church members. Religious exercises consisting of the reading of selected portions of the Scriptures, the recital of the ten commandments, or a Scripture reading of the International Sunday School Association, are compulsory, but a parent may have his children absent themselves from the schoolroom during the rendering of these exercises.

Changes are made in the basis of the grants to rural schools. These formerly used to be made on attendance. Now teachers' salary and school equipment are the main considerations in the suggested rules. Formerly no rules for equipment obtained in urban districts. The new rules give explicit instructions in this respect.

Women are employed in road building in Singapore, breaking up much of the material with small hammers.

WASN'T NEAR SCENE.

Gunman Made Anti-mortem Statement—Exonerates Becker.

ALBANY, N.Y., April 14.—Shortly before "Dago Frank" Cirofici went to the death chair in Sing Sing prison early yesterday, he told Warden Clancy that "Gyp the Blood," Horowitz, "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and Harry Valios, the informer, fired the shots which killed Herman Rosenthal, for which crime the four gunmen paid their lives.

The formal statement of the warden is in part as follows:

"About eight o'clock Sunday night Rosenberg asked me to save Frank, saying he had nothing to do with the shooting, as he was not there. I went over and asked Frank why he did not tell the truth. He replied that he knew what was going on, but was not there when the shooting took place. I advised him to tell the whole story. He said if he did they would kill his brother. I asked whom he meant by 'they.' He replied that there were fifty men in New York he could name. He said, 'I don't care about myself; it's my family I care for.'

"He finally made the following, among other statements, in the presence of myself, Principal Keeper McInery, the chaplain, his mother and sister. They urged him to tell the whole truth. He hesitated and said:

"'I don't want to make any statement for the public. I do not fear for myself, but I do fear for you.'

"His sister replied: 'Don't have any fear for us; we will take care of ourselves; God will protect us.'

"His mother and sister continued to urge him to tell the truth. He said: 'I did not do the shooting. The men who fired the shots were Gyp, Louie and Vallon.'

"He said: 'I was five miles away at the time. So far as I know Becker had nothing to do with the case. It was a gamblers' fight.'

The executions of the four men began at 5.27 yesterday morning and in forty minutes all were dead. The only statement at the last was made by Frank Seidenshner ("Whitey" Lewis), who declared that he did not shoot at Rosenthal.

Three Nova Scotia Sailors Lost.

LUNENBURG, N.S., April 14.—With her flag flying at half-mast, the Lunenburg fishing schooner Associate, Captain Albert Backman, arrived here yesterday from the banks and reported the loss of three of her crew. They were all young Nova Scotians, and they lost their lives while setting their trawls. The victims were two brothers, Cleveland, and a man named Rafuse.

Wandering Lunatic Taken Back.

LONDON, April 14.—August Hihn, of Walkerton, who when arrested by the county police, claimed to be a member of Parliament for No. 14 constituency, was discovered yesterday to be an escaped inmate of the London Hospital for the Insane. He will be removed thither from the county jail immediately.

DEATH CLAIMS BROTHERS.

Pioneers Who Gave Name To Davisville Die Almost Together.

TORONTO, April 14.—Two brothers, F. H. Davis, aged 74, 32 Joseph street, Davisville, and A. J. Davis, 76 years, 12 Imperial street, North Toronto, died within four hours of each other yesterday.

Both of them were old residents and well-known figures in North Toronto, their father, the late John Davis, being the first postmaster of Davisville.

The late A. J. Davis died from the effects of an accident which occurred on Saturday. He was crossing the corner of Shaftesbury avenue and Yonge street when he was run down by a wagon belonging to the Canadian Transfer Co. and so severely injured that death resulted yesterday morning at his home.

The late A. J. Davis was associated for many years with the pottery works in Davisville but had retired from business a few years ago.

F. H. Davis, whose death occurred at 7.30 yesterday morning had been living in retirement for many years and previous to his death had been in bad health for about eight months. He is survived by one brother, four sons, John J., Fred. H., C. R. and H. B., all of Toronto, and two daughters, Alice, and Mary (Mrs. John Cook).

The funeral of F. H. Davis will take place on Wednesday at three o'clock to Mount Pleasant Cemetery, and that of his brother on Thursday to the same place.

BOKHOM GIVES PREMIACH.

Liberal Minister Who Succeeded Gladstone Now a Viscount.

LONDON, April 14. — Sidney C. Buxton, the newly-appointed Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, was yesterday created a viscount. He was formerly President of the Board of Trade, and at one time Postmaster-General, in which capacity he introduced two-cent postage for letters between the British Isles and the United States.

The new viscount is an authority on the question of the relations between employer and workman, having participated in the settlement of many disputes. His experience in this connection is expected to be very useful to him in South Africa, where the labor problem is very acute.

St. C. & R. Commission Goes East.

OTTAWA, April 14.—The Departmental commission on the high cost of living will be kept busy if it is to complete its investigations and submit its report before Parliament prorogues, as was at first intended. The members, John McDougall, K. C. Fraser, R. H. Coats and J. W. Vincent, left for Halifax yesterday to look into conditions in that part of the country. They will return about the end of the week, and will leave shortly after for Vancouver.

In twenty generations every person has had 130,078 direct ancestors.

PRIESTS ARE ATTACKED.

Easter Riots In Italy Assume Serious Proportions.

MILAN, April 14.—An extraordinary series of religious disturbances spoiled the Easter festivities in various parts of Italy. At Pagnano, in the province of Treviso, the parish priest and acolytes were shot at and wounded while carrying the sacred image in a public procession. One of the religious canopies was riddled with bullets. At Porto Ferrajo Cathedral, where about 3,000 worshippers were present, a dispute between rival religious confraternities for precedence in the procession developed into a riot. According to Corriere della Sera many women and children and old men were injured during the panic-stricken rush for the doors of the cathedral.

Similar disgraceful scenes occurred at Santo Stefano, near Messina. The peasantry of two adjacent Sicilian villages fought for precedence in the open-air cortege. Sticks, stones and hayrakes were freely used, and the clergy and monks were put to flight. All the sacred images were smashed to pieces. Scores of people were injured. Reinforcements of carabinieri had to be summoned by telegraph.

Catanzaro Cathedral, in Calabria, was also a scene of amazing riots. A new archbishop attempted to suppress certain popular local customs involving the use of pagan symbols, and owing to his instructions being openly disobeyed had laid a neighboring church under three days' interdict. When the archbishop appeared in the cathedral to celebrate Easter High Mass an infuriated throng threatened a tumult, and shrieked curses at him. As it was feared he would be assaulted the clergy hurried him away by a private exist. Troops were sent for to drive the mob out of the cathedral.

A MESSAGE TO THIN, WEAK, SCRAWNY FOLKS

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. Your druggist has Sargol, or can get it from his wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh builder.

READY FOR STRIKE

Italy's Labour War May Break Out Any Moment

"SABOTAGE" HAS BEGUN

ROME, April 14.—The question of a strike of the railwaymen throughout Italy still hangs in the balance, but the Government, in order to be in readiness for any eventuality, has already occupied certain stations with detachments of troops. Arrangements have been made to replace with bluejackets the sailors on postal steamers plying between the continent and the islands, while the engineers and stokers of the warships will, if necessary, assist the military engineers to carry on the train service.

In several cases damage has been done to the engines, and those responsible have been dismissed. The leaders of the railway men have been holding secret meetings, but what they have decided upon it not known. It is thought by some that the strike may be suddenly proclaimed.

The operating forces permanently engaged by the Italian state railways, including officials of all classes, number about 115,000 individuals, who are joined in a league which has been pressing for increases of wages and diminution of hours of work.

The men's chief demand is for a minimum wage of sixty cents a day. Some get only thirty-four cents a day. Twenty cents extra per night for night work is demanded. More reasonable hours are also asked.

The guardians of the flag stations and the grade crossing women are to work ten hours a day, with one day of rest a week, the latter having no night hours and no work when maternal duties interfere.

Exceptional pensions are demanded for all the employes who are obliged to leave the service through infirmity caused by their service. A minimum pension of one hundred dollars yearly is asked.

The Government asserts that these claims cannot possibly be granted, as they would involve a yearly expenditure of over $20,000,000, which the budget of the country cannot stand.

MAY BE MURDERER.

Man Suspected of Slaying Sistani Is Captured at Prescott.

OTTAWA, April 14.—A man believed to be Antonio Pedro, who on Sunday afternoon shot and killed John Sistani, another Italian, in a boarding-house in George street west, was arrested yesterday afternoon at Prescott, Ont., while attempting to cross the international line at Ogdensburg. Two friends, Tony Mandell and Tony Giratu, both of this city, were apprehended at the C. P. R. station yesterday afternoon, after returning from Prescott, and were held on a charge of aiding and abetting a fugitive from justice.

Immediately following their arrest the police made a round-up of foreigners who were present when the shooting occurred, and as a result six men and Donato Maraschino, the woman who is one of the central figures in the case, were taken to police headquarters last night and locked up. They will be questioned closely by the authorities.

PLOTTERS ARRESTED.

Portuguese Royalists Quarrelled Over Choice of a Ruler.

LISBON, April 14.—A well organized royalist conspiracy has been discovered, according to semi-official reports. It appears that the royalists, disheartened by lack of support they had received from the members of the House of Braganza, decided to find foreign support and to place a foreign prince at the head of the monarchy.

The plan was carefully matured, but opinions were divided as to the person to be asked to accept the throne. One faction wanted a British prince, while another preferred an Italian ruler. The dissension at last grew so bitter that the plot leaked out. Several arrests have been made.

Bride Accused of Murder.

TAUNTON, Mass., April 14.—Mrs. Bradford Scudder, a bride of three months, was arrested on a charge of murder after her brother-in-law, Edgar Scudder, a farmer, had been shot and killed in her apartments yesterday. According to Medical Examiner Charles A. Atwood, the woman admitted that she fired the shot because "there was no privacy in the house."

Scudder was 54 years of age. The woman is 30 years of age.

Schooner In Bad Plight.

EASTPORT, Me., April 14. — The three-masted schooner John Paul of Franklin, Me., ran ashore near Head Harbor, Campo Bella, N.B., yesterday while bound for St. George, N.B., to load pulpwood. A tug was unable to float her and as the schooner lay in a bad position it was feared she would break in two.

MONTREAL, April 14. — Mayor-elect Martin has issued an appeal to citizens to support, by their presence, the delegation from different cities of Quebec and Ontario, which will, on Wednesday, wait on the Government at Ottawa and ask the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal.

WOULD BAN SHRAPNEL.

Expert on Surgery of War Urges Nations to Abolish It.

NEW YORK, April 14.—The modern rifle used by the armies of the world was called "a comparatively harmless weapon" yesterday by Dr. A. Depage, president of the International Surgical Association, at the opening of the fourth congress of that organization. President Depage, one of the foremost surgeons of Europe, spoke on the surgery of war.

He protested, in the name of the association, against the use of shrapnell, and urged that the civilized nations abolish these death-dealing projectiles for the same reasons that brought about the banishment of explosive bullets.

Wizard of Assouan Dam In America.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Sir William Willcocks, who designed the Assouan Dam on the River Nile arrived here last night on board the steamer Celtic. Sir William has been in India recently working to restore the channels of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, in order to reclaim vast areas of territory. He is one of the principal speakers at the National Drainage Congress, to be held in Savannah, Ga., April 22 to April 25.

Trust Busting To Be Thorough.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 14.—Proposals in Congress to curtail the administration legislative trust program were not regarded yesterday with favor by President Wilson. He said that while he had heard suggestion to cut the program short and enact only a trade commission bill, he deemed it necessary to keep faith with the country and carry out measures for a comprehensive trust reform.

Elections In Manitoba.

WINNIPEG, April 14—That a provincial election is pending is indicated by the fact that Premier Roblin has already arranged for the first speech of the campaign. On Thursday evening next Sir Rodmond will deliver an address at Neepawa, and public meetings in other parts of the province are being arranged.

Great Smokers, the Dutch.

A census of smokers taken the other day among the boys attending nine elementary schools in a suburb of Amsterdam, Holland, reveals that among the six-year-olds they number 10 per cent, among those of seven years 16 per cent and 22 per cent among those of eight, while in the sixth schooling year, at which the average age is twelve, the percentage has risen to 88. As it falls rapidly after the limit of compulsory attendance, the early use of tobacco would not appear to be an incentive to learning. It is the cigar, not the cigarette, which these Dutch youngsters delight in.

Banana Plant Foods.

Many parts of the banana plant are used in the Malay peninsula besides the fruit. Flower heads are cooked, generally in curries, and the inner portion of the stem is also edible. Sheets and tops of the young plants are used instead of other vegetables. The outer sheeting are valued as elephant fodder.

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

"Drawing back in terror from the road, I watched him fling that letter off from his fingers as he would a biting snake, and, striding to a cupboard high up on the wall, take down something I could not see and did not guess at all till the sharp sound of a pistol-shot cleft my ear, and I beheld him fall face downward on the carpet of fresh autumn leaves with which he had hidden the bare floor in expectation of his bride.

"The shriek which involuntarily went up from my lips must have rung far and wide, but only the groaning of the night-wind answered me. Driven by my fears to do something to save him if he was not yet dead, I tried the door, but it was locked; so was the window. Yet I might have battered my way in at that moment had I not heard two men coming down the road, one of whom was shouting to the other: 'I did not like his face. I shan't sleep till I've seen him again.'

"Somewhat relieved, I drew back from the road, but did not quit the spot till those men, seeing through the window what had happened, worked their way in and lifted him up in their arms. The look with which they let him fall back again was eloquent, and convinced me that it was death I saw. I started again upon my shuddering flight from Boone, secure in the belief that while my future would surely hold no remorse for me, it would nevermore burden me with a hindrance in the shape of an unloved husband."

CHAPTER XXIII.
THE SINS OF THE FATHERS.

The suspense which had held us tense and speechless was for the moment relieved and Mr. Steele allowed himself the following explanation:

"My hand trembled and the bullet penetrated an inch too high." Then he relapsed again into silence.

Mrs. Packard shuddered and went on:

"It may seem incredible to you, it seems incredible now to myself, but I completed my journey, entered my uncle's house, was made welcome there and started upon my new life without letting my eyes fall for one instant on the columns of a newspaper. I did not dare to see what they contained. That short but bitter episode of my sixteenth year was a nightmare of horror, to be buried with my old name and all that could interfere with the delights of the cultured existence which my uncle's means and affection opened before me. Two years and I hardly remembered; three years and it came to me only in dreams; four and even dreams failed to suggest it: the present, the glorious present was all. I had met you, Henry, and we had loved and married.

"Did any doubts come to disturb my joy? Very few. I had never received a word from Minnesota. I was as dead to every one there as they all were to me. I believed myself free and that the only wrong I did was in not taking you into my confidence. But this, the very nature of my secret forbade. How could I tell you what would inevitably alienate your affections? That act of my early girlhood by which I had gained an undeserved freedom had been too base; sooner than let you know this blot on my life, I was content to risk the possibility—the inconceivable possibility—of Mr. Brainard's having survived the attack he had made upon his own life. Can you understand such temerity? I can not, now that I see its results here before me.

"So the die was cast and I became a wife instead of the mere shadow of one. You were prosperous, and not a sorrow came to disturb my sense of complete security till that day two weeks ago, when, looking up in my own library, I saw, gleaming between me and the evening lamp, a face, which, different as it was in many respects, tore my dear past out of the grave and sent my thoughts reeling back to a lonely road on a black hillside with a lighted window in view, and behind that window the outstretched form of a man with his head among leaves not redder than his blood.

"I have said to you, I have said to others, that a spectre rose upon me that day in the library. It was such to me—an apparation and nothing else. Perhaps he meant to impress himself as such, for I had heard no footfall and only looked up because of the constraining force of the look which awaited me. I knew afterward that it was a man whom I had seen, a man whom you yourself had introduced into the house; but at the instant I thought it a phantom of my forgotten past sent to shock and destroy me; and, struck speechless with the horror of it, I lost that opportunity of mutual explanation which might have saved me an unnecessary and cruel experience. For this man, who recognized me more surely than I did him, who perhaps knew who I was before he ever entered my house, has sported for two weeks with my fears and hopes as a tiger with his prey. Maintaining his attitude of stranger—you have been witness to his manner in my presence—he led me slowly but surely to believe myself deceived by an extraordinary resemblance: a resemblance, moreover, which did not hold at all times, and which frequently vanished altogether, as I recall the slight-featured but often uncouth aspect of the man who had awakened the admiration of Boone. Memory had been awakened and my sleep filled with dreams, but the unendurable had been spared me and I was thanking God with my whole heart, when suddenly one night, when an evening spent with friends in the old way had made me feel safe, my love safe, my husband and my child safe, there came to my ears from below the sound of a laugh, loud, coarse and deriding,—such a laugh as could spring from no member of my own household, such a laugh as I heard but once before and that in the by-gone years when some one asked Mr. Brainard if he meant to live always in Boone. The shock was terrible, and when I learned that the secretary, and the secretary only, was below, I knew who that secretary was and yielded to the blow.

"Yet hope dies hard with the happy. I knew, but it was not enough to know,—I must be sure. There was a way—it came to me with my first fluttering breath as I recovered from my faint. In those old days when I was thrown much with this man, he had shown me a curious cipher and taught me how to use it. It was original with himself, he said, and some day we might be glad of a method of communication which would render our correspondence inviolable. I could not see why he considered this likely ever to be desirable, but I took the description of it which he gave me and promised that I would never let it leave my person I even allowed him to solder about my neck the chain which held the locket in which he had placed it. Consequently I had it with me when I fled from Boone, and for the first few weeks after arriving at my uncle's house in Detroit. Then, wishing to banish every reminder of days I was so anxious to forget, I broke that chain, destroyed the locket and hid away from every one's sight the now useless and despised cipher. Why I retained the cipher I can not explain. Now, that cipher must prove my salvation. If I could find it again I was sure that the shock of receiving from my hand certain words written in the symbols he had himself taught me would call from him an involuntary revelation. I should know what I had to fear. But so many changes had taken place and so long a time elapsed since I hid this slip of paper away that I was not even sure I still retained it; but after spending a good share of the night in searching for it, I finally came across it in one of my old trunks.

"The next morning I made my test. Perhaps, Henry, you remember my handing Mr. Steele an empty envelope to mail which he returned with an air of surprise so natural and so seemingly unfeigned that he again forced me to believe that he was the stranger he appeared. Though he must have recognized me at a glance—for he was an adept in this cipher once—the seven simple symbols in which I had expressed the great cry of my soul—'Is it you?' he acted the innocent secretary so perfectly that all my old hopes returned and I experienced one hour of perfect joy. Then came another reaction. Letty brought in the baby with a paper pinned to her coat. She declared to us that a woman had been the instrument of this outrage, though the marks inside, suggesting the cipher but with characteristic variations bespeaking malice, could only have been made by one hand.

"How I managed to maintain sufficient hold upon my mind to drag the key from my breast and by its means to pick out the meaning of the first three words—words which once read suggested all the rest—I can not now imagine. Death was in my heart and the misery of it all more than human strength could bear; yet I compared paper with paper carefully, intelligently, till these words from the prayer-book with all their threatening meaning to me and mine started into life before me: 'Visiting the sins—' Henry, you know the words—'Visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.' Upon the children! Henry he mean Laura! our little Laura! I had wakened vengeance in a fiend. The man who had calmly smiled in my face as he handed me back that empty envelope inscribed with the wild appeal, 'Is it you?' was the man I had once driven to the verge of the grave and who had come back now to destroy us all.

"Yet, such is the reaching out of the drowning for straws, I did not utterly despair till Nixon brought me from this man's lodging-house, where I had sent him, a specimen of his hand-writing.

"Nixon is the only confidant I have had. Nixon knew me as a girl when he worked in my uncle's home, and has always had the most unbounded, I may say, jealous affection for me. To him I had dared impart that I did not trust your new secretary; that he looked like a man I once knew who was a determined opponent of the party now trying to elect you; that a specimen of his writing would make me quite sure, and begged him to get it. I thought he might pick up such in the little office below, but he was never able to do so—Mr. Steele has taken care not to leave a line written in this house—but he did find a few lines signed with his name in his own room at the boarding-house, and these he showed me before he told me the result of his errand. They settled all doubts. What is to be my fate? Surely this man has no real claim on me, after all these years, when I thought myself your true and honest wife. He may ruin your campaign, defeat your hopes, overwhelm me with calumny and a loss of repute, but surely he can not separate us. The law will not uphold him in that; will it, Henry? Say that it will not, say—oh, so that—it—will not—do—that, or we shall live to curse the day, not when we were born, but when our innocent little child came to us!"

CHAPTER XXIV.
THE FINGER ON THE WALL.

At this appeal the mayor rose and faced his secretary and the spectacle was afforded me of seeing two strong men drawn up in conflict over a woman both had cherished above all else. And it was characteristic of the forceful men, as well as the extreme nature of the conflict, that both were quiet in manner and speech—perhaps the mayor the more so, as he began the struggle by saying:

"Is what Mrs. Packard says of your playing with her fears during these two weeks true, Mr. Steele?"

Without a droop of his eye, or a tremor in his voice, the answer came short, sharp and emphatic:

"Yes."

"Then you are a villain! and I shall not feel myself called upon to show you any consideration beyond what justice demands. Have you any plea to urge beyond the natural one of her seemingly unprovoked desertion of you? Has not my wife—" the nobility with which he emphasised those two words made my heart swell—"spoken the truth?"

Ah! then the mask of disdainful serenity with which the other had hitherto veiled the burning anguish of his soul fell in one burst of irresistible passion.

"True! yes, it is true. But what does the truth involve for me? Not two weeks, but seven years of torture, five of them devoted to grief for her loss, and two to rage and bitter revulsion against her whole sex when I found her alive, and myself the despised victim of her deception."

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone in The Bladder
GIN PILLS PASSED IT
JOLIETTE, P.Q.
"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.
He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.
They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.
GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life". 170

A Red Nose is Mortifying.

The red nose is a true danger signal. A simple diet should be indulged in, the feet and ankles rubbed well every day. To keep the ankles warm it is well to wear woolen bands under the stockings. Rubbing the body from chin to toes with a hair mitten dipped in alcohol will improve the circulation and prevent a chill when going out on a cold day after a bath. In the open air always breathe deeply through the nostrils, and in this way many colds will be prevented. If these rules are followed the red nose will eventually disappear.

Make deep breathing a habit. It will improve the health as well as the appearance. Men seem to be ashamed to complain of cold and, as a rule, face the winter blasts bravely. They eat a good breakfast, take long strides and long, deep breaths, walk erect with feet and body comfortably clad. Of course they do not feel the cold as a shrinking little woman in low shoes, thin stockings and diaphanous waist would feel it.

Care of the Hair.

The hair often becomes unruly in windy weather. Curly hair when affected by wind or dampness can be coaxed back to its natural state. Wet the hair with hot water, push it up into loose waves and stick a little fine side comb into each wave, tie a soft veil over the head and allow it to dry. Never use hot irons on hair that is naturally curly.

If the hair looks dull and lifeless it requires oil and massage. The hair should be kept scrupulously clean to be either healthy or good looking. There is no danger of cold after shampooing if the hair is dried at once with hot towels, followed by a tonic and massage, as there is usually more or less alcohol in the tonic, and the massage causes good circulation, thus preventing a cold.

To give luster to the hair use five drams of castor oil, four drams sweet almond oil, six ounces of alcohol and three of any extract preferred. Drop a little in the palm of the hand and on the brush, then brush the hair.

Homemade Nail Paste.

A good paste to use where the nails are dry is made of sixteen grains each of powdered resin, table salt and powdered alum. Add a quarter ounce sweet almond oil, forty grains white wax and a grain of carmine. A little of this should be well rubbed into the nails every night and soon relieves the dry condition which causes them to break easily. As the manicuring should only be done once a week, this paste may be applied every night the week previous, and effects will be very apparent in a short while.

After the process as given is finished the nails are ready for the polishing process, and this requires care also, as if the buffer is used too long or too hard the nails will soon get very tender and too thin.

The Face in Windy Weather.

The face must often be exposed to the spring blasts protected only by a thin veil, which many times serves to make the lips and nose chap more than if it had not been worn. It is a very excellent plan to use a little good massage cream before facing the cold winds, rubbing it in gently for only five minutes, then wiping it off and using a good face powder. Literally rub both in, for the powder and cream will afford great protection to the skin and not injure it, as so many claim. But, of course, the face must be thoroughly cleansed with a cream before retiring.

Dry the Hands Carefully.

Always dry the hands carefully after washing them. A very healing, softening lotion is composed of glycerin and one ounce of witch hazel. A few drops rubbed into the hands every time they are bathed before retiring will usually keep them soft and white. Soft, white cotton gloves two sizes larger than the hands require can be worn at night if the hands should be badly chapped, but if the lotion is rubbed in while the hands are warm and moist after bathing it will be absorbed and gloves will not be necessary.

The Best Skin Tonic.

Exercise is a splendid skin tonic. A brisk walk, no matter if in the rain, will freshen the complexion, even as it freshens the flowers, and a simple aperient will do wonders for a muddy skin. It remains for all women to preserve such beauty as they have and to cure the defects which are peculiar to them or that time has wrought. Every skin is different and must be treated accordingly, and it takes a reasoning woman to experiment carefully and find out the proper method of treatment for her skin.

Spice Sachets.

Egyptian spice flower bags are the newest of the sachets. The bags are made of ribbon decked bolting cloth and are filled with fragrant flower petals and oriental spices. Old fashioned lavender flowers, which many housekeepers contend are absolutely necessary to give the required fresh scent and delicacy of odor to household linen, may be put up in this way. Dried rose and violet leaves also serve the same dainty purpose.

The Last Straw.

"What was the matter with the maid you got the other day? I hear you have discharged her."

"She didn't seem to have sufficient intelligence to get along here. Her cooking was fair, but when she used my husband's tango shirt for a dust cloth we just had to part with her."

TOOK SEVERE COLD.

A bad cough accompanied by that distressing, tickling sensation in the throat is most aggravating.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is rich in the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and for this reason it will stop that tickling in the throat which causes that dry hard cough that keeps you awake at night.

Mr. Sanford Roode, Antrim, N.S., writes:—"Last fall I took a severe cold which left me with a terrible hard cough and a nasty tickling sensation in my throat. I tried many cough medicines, but they did not help me so I got a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before I had used half of it the cough had left me, and the next one made a complete cure, and I will recommend it as the best cough medicine on the market."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it. Do not accept any imitation. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price, 25 and 50c., and manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Little Rose Fairy Tale

Rose is the name of the smiling little lady in the picture. Not satisfied with just an ordinary photograph, she posed with her face close up against a mirror so that two portraits were made at one snap of the camera. In fact, it is a double faced girl that we see. Not by any means is Rose two faced, however. She is honesty and simplicity itself. It is only on very rare occasions that she wears any other than a sweetly smiling expression. Sometimes—we are glad to say that it happens very seldom—when things don't go just right she has just a little bit of a frown on her face. But that quickly goes, and Rose is smiling again. Her full name is Rose Murphy, and she lives in Brooklyn. Rose is just three years old.

A Little Girl's Composition.

There was once a little girl who wished to write a composition. At least she didn't wish to, but she could not help it, because her teacher said a composition was to be written. The little girl got out all her pencils and sharpened them carefully and ruled neat margins down the side of her paper and then gave a great deep sigh and looked out of the window.

"I don't know what to write about," she said, just as you and every other child has said a hundred times. And her mother said, "Write about what you see."

"I see the willow tree," said the little girl, "but I can't write much about that. Well, perhaps I can start with it."

So she looked hard at the willow tree and wrote a line about how she loved it because she had always climbed in it ever since the beginning of time. And she wrote another line or two about how bright the leaves looked where the sun touched them and how gray they looked in the shadow, and then she told how the wind made them sway like long fringe. And she told about how dark the trunk was back of the leaves, and how it bumped out curiously in places where straight willow stalks shot up, and about the grasses that grew around the foot. And she was just finishing a description of how it looked in the rain when her mother, who had gone out, came back and asked how the composition was getting on.

"Why, it is all done," said the little girl. "And I don't think I'll ever be afraid of compositions any more. Next time I'll write about the apple tree."

The Blue Grotto.

The Blue grotto is a famous cave on the island of Capri, near Naples. It is about 170 feet long, 100 wide and 60 high, and is reached from the sea by a narrow arch in the limestone cliff. The water within resembles, according to one eyewitness, "liquid sapphire" and glitters with a pale blue light.

Walls and roof of the Blue grotto are ultramarine in color.

The general blue tone of the place is said to be caused by the reflection of the sun's rays in passing through the water in the cave.

The opening of the grotto is so exceedingly small that the light which enters must first pass through the water.

A stay of at least twenty minutes is necessary to accustom oneself to the light in the Blue grotto.

What He Was Told.

Mother—Willie, put away those drumsticks. Don't you know your father has a headache?

Willie—But, ma, when I was going into the parlor with my drum he told me to beat it.

THE SUCKING FISH.

It Rides A-horseback Around the Seven Seas.

You have all heard of fishes that fly, but how many know of fishes that ride? The riding fish, known as the sucking fish, most often uses a shark for his sea-horse. He chooses the shark because where the shark goes there is sure to be plenty of food and the sucking fish can gulp down all he wants without dismounting from his steed.

But why does a great, fierce creature like the shark allow a comparatively small fellow like this to use him for a horse? you wonder. For the very good reason that he can't help himself. The sucking fish has a long, powerful suction apparatus extending back from his head and when he grabs hold the shark has no choice as to whether he will carry a rider or no.

Sometimes the sucking fish mistakes a ship for a shark and gripes the side like a barnacle, and then he has a most gorgeous time, for he rides around the seven seas with so much to eat that he can't gobble half of it down.

Sometimes, too, when there is no other "horse" at hand, the sucking fish goes a-hunting on a turtle's back. But he does not like it very well, for the poor old turtle travels so slowly that the sucking fish fares poorly as to meals.

The sucking fish never lets go of anything he once gets a grip upon. So the natives of Zanzibar and other places have learned that they can play a great trick on the turtle with his help. When their mouths are watering for turtle titbits they catch a sucking fish and paddle out into deep, clear water where they can see the turtles crawling over the bottom. Then they let down the sucking fish, who, once more in his own elements, sees a steed and gets astride.

Jerk! Plop! Up comes the sucking fish with the turtle attached. And by and by somebody has nice turtle soup for dinner.

So She Wouldn't Be Shocked.

It was the fourth consecutive night he had been away until late.

The old lodge theory would seem to be threadbare, but he sprang it again.

"What was going on at lodge this time?" she asked coldly and incredulously.

"Insulation of officers," he replied.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The Tango.

The tango mystery grows all the time. It is asserted upon every hand that nobody dances it. Still, the furor continues. Ask a dancing master if he teaches the tango and he will tell you no. He knows what it is—he has seen it done by experts—but he doesn't teach it. It is not a popular dance.

There seems to be two tangoes. One is the tango which comes to us from the Argentine Republic—a dance for experts—a slow, difficult thing that is not worth doing at all unless one can do it very well, indeed. The other tango is any new dance—the Castle walk, the hesitation waltz, or anything our fathers did not dance. This latter is the popular tango danced all over the country. It is the one at which the people who do not care about dancing continually thunder. It is not the tango at all. The tango is a myth, and they are knocking the daylights out of it every day.

THE CURSE OF A SENSITIVE NATURE.

Don't conclude my love is waning!
Why, she's just as sweet to-day
As she was the day we wedding,
dodged the rice and drove away;
No, I've nothing worth complaining
all these years we've wandered through,
But I hate to have her tell me what
I used to be and do!

How I hate to see her digging through the ancient, musty draws
With her cheeks both flushed with pleasure and with sentiment, because Then I know full well she's digging for some old poetic gush
That I penned her when we courted, and I know she'll read the mush!

How I hate to have her tell me how
I used to be and look,
And bring out that haunting photo
with my right hand on a book!
Why, my gentle nature sizzles and I fairly long to die
When she cites my paper collar and my plaid, old-fashioned tie

Don't, I beg, misunderstand me! I'm the happies of men,
And to me she's just as worthy and as treasurable as then—
I'm sure few men are favoured as the
Fates have favoured me,
But I hate to be reminded of the chump I used to be!

PARENTS' LEAGUE TO GUIDE SCIONS OF WEALTH

"Poor Little Children of the Rich" Require as Much Protection from Evil Influences as Young Tenement Dwellers

"We want to make it fashionable to be sensible and unfashionable to be foolish."

Thus Mrs. John Henry Hammond, the president of that lusty infant organization the Parents' League, summarizes the purpose of the organization.

Slender, alert, quick in every motion, Mrs. Hammond gives the impression of possessing in her own person all the energy that is needed to make possible even such a paradoxical state of affairs.

The organization of which she is president, the Parents' League, although it is only a few weeks old, has already 400 members. It is the first organization formed in New York with the object of protecting the children of men and women of wealth and social prominence from the unwholesome influences of the city. There have been innumerable societies which have concerned themselves with the well being of the boy or girl brought up in the tenements, but none that have performed a similar office for the children of well to do parents.

"It is evident that there was a demand for an organization like the league," said Mrs. Hammond, "for we already have four hundred members, and more names are being presented at each council meeting. Out of town leagues are also being formed, and it is expected that all large cities will soon form a similar organization. With these we are not connected in anyway, but we are glad to think that other localities are interested in the idea."

The league grew out of a meeting held at the Cosmopolitan Club at which teachers and parents who were present decided that some steps must be taken to solve the problem of late hours for boys and girls and also the theatre problem. At Christmas time, and during the Easter and Christmas holidays especially, it seemed to the originators of the league, the conditions affecting boys and girls have been contrary to their best development.

"Some of the teachers said to us, said Mrs. Hammond:—"If we sent you children back to you in the condition in which you send them to us after the holidays you wouldn't have it at all. The children are absolutely exhausted very often when they return to the schools after their holidays, because they have been going to so many entertainments that they had no time to rest. Not only that but they have been permitted to attend all sorts of theatrical performances and are full of the ideas they have picked up at the vaudeville houses or at the musical comedies. Sometimes it is several weeks before they can settle down to a real interest in their studies or be content with the steady routine of school life.'

"At present," said Mrs. Hammond, "we are confining our work to children of school age. Later, perhaps, after we have found the proper way to deal with some of the problems which affect the school boy and girl, we shall take up the problems of the débutante and the older boy or young man. But just now we are concerned in trying to unite the parents in an effort to establish wholesome standards in matters affecting the education, amusements and home life of children fifteen years old and under.

"Boys and girls have been having a great deal too many parties, and they have been going to the theatre entirely too much. There has also been far too little supervision. The plays which children are permitted to attend are frequently not well selected, as often their parents have not even seen the play. They may not even know what play has been selected by the hostess of a children's theatre party. We believe that the parents should not permit a child to accept an invitation to the theatre unless they know what play has been selected. When children are invited to parties we think the hostess should state the hour of leaving as well as that for arriving."

One of the measures by which the league hopes to spread its influence is the adoption of recommendations which are bulletined to the members.

The recommendations already adopted are as follows:

That no boy and girl of school age refuse all invitations to parties, theatres, &c., during the school term, except occasionally on Fridays or Saturdays, and that parties and theatregoing be limited during the holidays.

That parents arrange simple and appropriate forms of recreation for the children; for instance, attendance at young people's concerts, visits to the country, museums and places of interest, and that they reserve time during the holidays to join their children in such recreations.

That parents advocate reasonable hours for beginning and ending dances for young people, that they state them in all invitations, and that they carefully supervise the manner of dancing.

That a theatre committee send bulletins at regular intervals to all active members of the league suggesting the most suitable plays for young people. That parents in sending invitations to the theatres state the name of the play.

That parents confer frequently with the teachers of their children in regard to questions affecting the education and general welfare, and that they co-operate with the teachers in upholding the rules and standards of the school.

That articles bearing on vital questions relating to the upbringing and education of their children be circulated among the active members of the league, and that active members hold informal meetings for the discussion of these questions.

"There are very many musical productions which are entirely proper for children to attend," said Mrs. Hammond. "In making out the theatre list our committee does not find so much from which to choose. Three members of the committee visit each play and then a majority vote is taken as to the suitability of each one. We include musical comedies and farces on our list because the children like them, but it is necessary that we should be particularly careful about musical comedies. They are often more harmful than plays, for while the problem play may present an unsavory subject it does so seriously, while the musical comedy bases many of its most highly humorous situations on some of the oldest and most demoralizing features of modern life. The divorce problem, disloyalty of husband and wife. The children laugh at these situations because they are funny, and meanwhile their ideals are being shattered and their sense of right and wrong confused, because what is really ugly and sad in life has been made to appear light and amusing.

"We are very anxious that this should be truly a parents' organization and not solely an organization of mothers. We feel that the American father sometimes plays too little a part in the upbringing of his child and that he has much to give that is most valuable in this relation. Therefore we want the fathers to take an equally active part with the mothers in the affairs of the league. We hold our meetings at nine o'clock in the morning because this seems the one time that the men members are able to be present. We have also adopted a rule that in the payment of dues parents are considered as a unit; the dues of either one or both parents elected as active members are $5. The active members are all parents, but we have also associate members who may be older persons interested in the work but who are no longer parents of school children or are unmarried persons. These associate members pay no dues."

"Will the Parents' League take any action in regard to the recent statement that American boys are two years behind British boys in education?" asked the interviewer.

"Not at present," said Mrs. Hammond, "although the question has arisen. I have been told that the reason why American boys are two years behind the boys of the English schools is that the holidays are so much shorter in England that the boys make up by the time they have reached sixteen fully two years' more work than our boys. I think that the Christmas and Easter holidays are perhaps longer than they should be because it is really very difficult to keep a boy who is used to the crowded activities of a school day sufficiently provided with profitable entertainments during his long Easter and Christmas holidays, especially if he passes them in the city. We shall later confer with the teachers in regard to educational matters and then we may take up the question of shortening the holidays.

"One thing we regard as most important," continued Mrs. Hammond, "and that is the participation of the parents in the holiday diversions of the children. If the parents accompanied the children to the theatre it would be possible for them to point out what in the play was worth while and what should be discarded and forgotten as unimportant or unlovely. But when they do not go with their children it is all the more necessary that the list of plays suitable for young people to attend should be rigidly scrutinized.

"If the parents accompany the children on some of the pleasure expeditions which we recommend, the children will be pleased and satisfied with these wholesome diversions. But when the child hears his father and mother and all of his older friends constantly talking of the theatre and what they have seen there, naturally the child also wants to go to the same plays. A boy or a girl can be quite as readily interested in other forms of entertainment if parents and older friends are also genuinely interested in these more natural and more profitable pleasures."

In addition to Mrs Hammond, the officers of the league are Mr. Carl A. de Gersdorff, first vice president; Mrs. Walter Damrosch, second vice president; Mrs. Frederick W. Lord, secretary; Mr. Henry P. Davison, treasurer.

The council includes Mrs. William A. Read, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mrs. Edwin O. Holter, Mrs. Walter B. Jones, Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, Dr. Hanley B. Williams, Mrs. Elwood Hendrick, Mrs. John Sherman Hoyt and Mr. Dave H. Morris. Mrs. John Sherman Hoyt, Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin and Mrs. Russell Headley constitute the Committee on Recreation.

The Easter holidays will be the first occasion on which the league will have the opportunity to put its recommendations into execution on any very large scale. In order that there may be no remissness on the part of any parent a bulletin will be sent to all members preceding the holidays calling their attention to the principles at stake in controlling the holiday festivities and carrying out the recommendations of the league—early hours, few theatre parties and the substitution of other forms of entertainment.

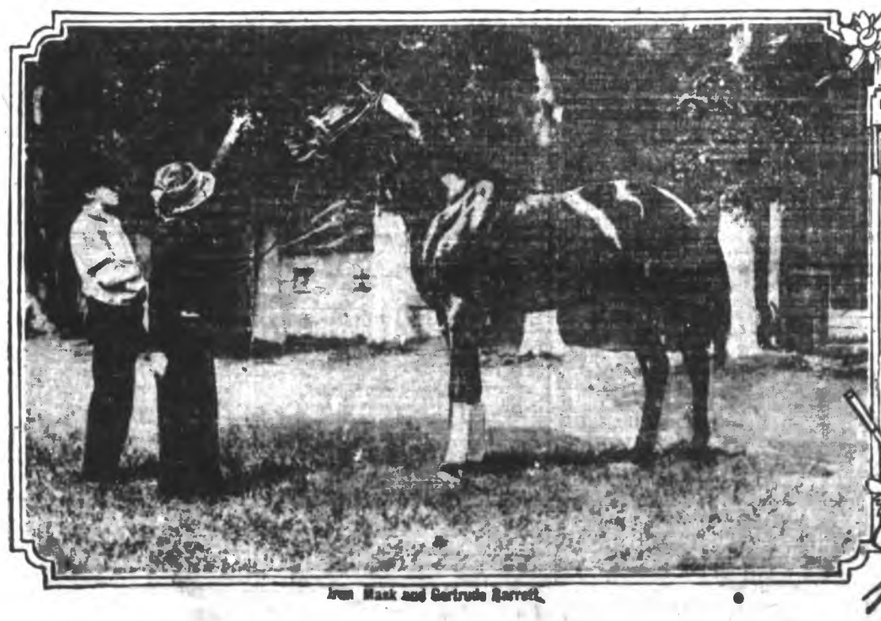
Visits to the points of historic interest in New York are among the recommendations of the Entertainment Committee as a substitute for less desirable entertainments. It is also suggested that parents who wish to give a "movie" entertainment which they can closely control may rent from the Parents' League a ball in which a moving picture machine has been installed, on which they can have shown only such films as they select.

Another entertainment which has been suggested is a visit to an electrical workshop conducted by a woman under whose supervision the children can make electrical toys. Nature study classes whose studies are pursued during walks in the park are also recommended. It is suggested that the children be taken to inspect various interesting factories, to see the drills at the armories, the hockey matches at St. Nicholas Rink, to the various museums and to Bronx Park.

All applicants for league membership are proposed by members and voted on at the following council meeting.

"We have thought of many things for our future work," said Mrs. Hammond. "We would like more parks in the city for one thing, but that, of course, is a matter that has barely been mentioned. At present we have all we can do in planning for more rational amusements."

How Iron Mask "Came Back" and Justified the Faith of Miss Gertrude Barrett, Who Helped Him



Iron Mask and Gertrude Barrett.

GERTRUDE BARRETT.

PERSONAL friendship with the fastest horse in the world is enough to make any girl proud and happy. When both were bred and born in old Kentucky, make friends while both are strangers in a strange land and later in their own country the girl sees the horse rob Father Time of a lordly strip of his priceless domain, no wonder the girl is proud. No wonder Miss Gertrude Barrett would not let any hands but her own stitch the silken blouse, lavender, scarlet hars, white sash, for "Johnny" Loftus to wear when he rode Iron Mask over six furlongs of ground on January 4, at Juarez, Mexico, in less time than horse ever covered the distance on a circular course before. One minute nine and three-fifths seconds was the official time—one and one-fifth seconds faster than the previous record in which Iron Mask had covered the same distance last September at Louisville, Ky. Miss Barrett was present on both occasions.

When she was a tiny tot the front gate of her father's place on the old Madison pike, near Walton, Ky., was the goal of her baby rambles. There was a daily procession there of the race horses quartered at the Latonia track, taking their exercise. Even as an infant she was surrounded by the Kentucky atmosphere of the thoroughbred; for she was born near Covington, in the blue grass region.

Three years ago in England she first met Iron Mask. Miss Barrett left Kentucky in search of fame on the stage or with her pen or brush in New York. She was leading lady to "The Prince Chap," with Cyril Scott; was with Elsie Ferguson in "Such a Little Queen," and before that she played often every feminine part in "The Lion and the Mouse" in its long run.

Iron Mask is six years old, a big, upstanding black, and was bred in the Castleton stud of the late James R. Keene, in Kentucky. He is by the imported English stallion Disguise out of Royal Rose. Iron Mask was sold to Mr. Henry Payne Whitney and taken to England to race. He started nine times as a three-year-old in 1911, won twice and was second three times. It was at Newmarket in September of that year, when he won the Queensberry Handicap at five furlongs, that Miss Barrett first met Iron Mask.

When there is racing anywhere near by and a Kentucky girl is taking a vacation there is only one place to find her. That day found Miss Barrett at Newmarket, and an American horse with American colors up swinging home many lengths in the lead made her heart glad. It helped her to recover her health. After the race she went out with some American friends to see the winner. The friendship of the Kentucky thoroughbred and the Kentucky girl began then and there. They did not meet for a long time afterward.

Mr. Whitney brought some of his racers to America last year to give racing in New York the loyal support it has had from him in its dark as well as its good days. He won the Toboggan Handicap at Belmont Park with Iron Mask, but after that the horse did not do well. At Saratoga last September, with the end of the season approaching, he decided to sell several of his racers. Iron Mask, a gelding, with no value in the stud when his racing days should be over, was five years old and was one of those offered. Prince Eugene, a young stallion, was another and a first rate performer.

Mr. Jefferson Livingston was at Saratoga seeking to strengthen his already large stable. He bought Prince Eugene, and even while he was talking with "Jimmy" Rowe, Mr. Whitney's trainer, Miss Barrett came up with some friends. She wanted to see her old pet, Iron Mask, and their reunion attracted attention from everybody.

"Buy Iron Mask. He is a great race horse and he is a darling and you will never regret it," she told Mr. Livingston. He bought Prince Eugene, however, and left Iron Mask in the Whitney stable.

He made it his business, however, to have a long talk with Miss Barrett later in the day. By the time she had told half she thought of the big black racer Mr. Livingston was afraid to go to bed lest he should oversleep and rise too late to purchase Iron Mask the next morning. He shipped the two horses to Louisville, and was there, of course, when the meeting at Douglass Park began. Foundation, the Livingston candidate and a very speedy three-year-old then, was favorite in the Kentucky Derby, but was beaten by Donerail. Iron Mask was entered in the feature event the following Saturday, a six furlong race.

Miss Barrett in New York could think of nothing but Iron Mask and how he might conduct himself in that, his first race since her praise had prompted his new owner to purchase him. At last she decided that there was only one place for her on that Saturday and she went to Louisville. Her fondest hopes were realized. Iron Mask won from Leochares, and not alone that. Iron Mask ran the three-quarters of a mile in 1:10 4-5, breaking the world's record at that time. Miss Barrett stayed on to see her darling again show his mettle in a race.

Victories brought heavier loads to the back of Iron Mask. A week after his record breaking performance he was entered again at six furlongs, and again Leochares was one of his rivals. But Iron Mask bore the handicap of 132 pounds of lead, and jockey. The start was poor and the speeding horses jammed at the turnout of the backstretch, with Iron Mask the heaviest sufferer.

When he struggled home third one of his ankles was cut and torn and he "finished on three legs and his courage," as they say at the race tracks. It nearly broke Miss Barrett's heart, but a Kentucky baby girl knows how to spell "g-a-m-e" when other little girls are learning how to spell "c-a-t."

Iron Mask was put out of racing by the injuries then sustained, but they were not vital. His wounds healed, no tendons were permanently hurt and late last year he was sent with others of the Livingston stable to Juarez. That Mexican town is just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, as a great many people have probably learned since the Mexican revolutions began to figure in the daily news. The race course there has a footing of sandy loam and is very fast.

Finding a race in which Iron Mask might be entered was the hardest task. The majority of the horses at Juarez are of the cheaper type and the programmes are prepared to suit them so that there may be liberal entries to all. This means many selling races whose winners are put up at auction immediately after a race is run. If Iron Mask were priced at anything near his worth in such a race he would have to carry an enormous load, because the lower the price placed on an entry by his owner the less weight that horse carries. If Iron Mask should win any one might bid him up above his entered price, and should his owner wish to outbid all to keep him he would forfeit to the local management one-half of the sum. The final bids might exceed the entrance price. If Iron Mask should lose the owner of any other horse in the race would be privileged to claim Iron Mask at the price for which he was entered. Mr. Livingston did not want to lose Iron Mask.

Local pride solved that problem when the owners of Pan Zareta, a very fast Texas bred sprinter, and of Ulendi, another animal of the sprinting type, agreed to go into a special event with Iron Mask. The race was made the feature of the card for January 4, a Sunday, the great day of the week for all sorts of sports in Mexico, often even for battles. The distance was six furlongs on the circular course.

Miss Barrett was in New York doing her Christmas shopping, writing vaudeville sketches and scenarios for moving picture plays and occasionally practising her skill with brush and pencil. Her sketches, known to the American art world as E. H. Orr, has won recognition for her pictorials in oil. But Iron Mask was never far from the girl's thoughts, and she was informed of the approaching race as soon as it was arranged.

The first thing she did was to telegraph "Johnny" Loftus that she would make his "colors" for that race and she basted his chest, shoulder and arm measurements by telegraph at once. She had the bright silks ready when the measurements came, and next day the jockey's trousseau was on its way to Juarez. So was Miss Barrett. She had to be there, she said, to see her old darling run. Again, the faithful "Mose" had to throw out his pickets and keep Iron Mask safe from the excitement of a reunion with his dearest friend.

Then the race was on. Pan Zareta was quicker on her feet at the start and led in the first brief stage. When Iron Mask got into his stride he moved up beside the mare, held her for a few seconds, then went on. He was five lengths in the lead when he swept past the half-mile post.

Men with stop watches in their hands could hardly believe their eyes as they marked the time at each fraction of the course. The eighths of a mile were run in this order:—11 2-5s., 21 2-5s., 32s.; the half mile in 45s., the five-eighths in 56 4-5s. and the six furlongs in 1m. 9 2-5s. Iron Mask had clipped one and two-fifth seconds from his own world's record.

Be sure that one of the first to pat and praise him was Miss Barrett. She was tickled to death to see her, and did not seem to think anything of his famous gallop of a few minutes before. Mr. Livingston came up and his friends crowded about to congratulate him.

"Oh, Iron Mask can run faster than that, can't you, my old darling?" said Miss Barrett. Iron Mask whinnied and tossed his head. They agreed on it.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE OLD DESK

When John Dustin first brought his bride to the pretty little home that was to be hers for the future, she was enchanted with its quaintness and charm. True, it was an old-fashioned little house, painted a dull brown, and weather beaten here and there, but the roses that climbed about the little porch and up to the small diamond paned windows more than compensated for other adornment.

There had been no heirs to take the place, and when the "old man Adams," as the neighbours called him, had died, the place was sold for taxes and Dustin was the only purchaser that appeared.

"There's a good deal of truck up in the attic, Mr. Dustin, but I guess you can attend to that after you move in. You see, we're pretty busy haying now, and we can't well stop to fix the old place up; and, anyway, you are getting it dirt cheap," so spoke the auctioneer when Dustin came to claim his new home.

Betty, his wife, was a neat little soul, and when she saw the littred condition of the od attic she straightway began to clear it up. There was almost everything, or so it seemed to her, that had ever been invented, stored away there, but at last nothing remained but an old trunk and an ancient desk.

The trunk contained nothing but moth-eaten clothing and was at once taken downstairs and burned. The desk was full of letters, and Betty hesitated long ere she touched them. She thought they did not concern her or any other living mortal, so why should she bother to save them? But several times, when she brought up the waste paper basket to collect the stuff to take it down to burn, she stopped; and finally, after cleaning up the attic thoroughly, she left the desk, and the letters as she found them. Shortly after that she had occasion to go to the old desk again, and upon turning over the letters, found a faded packet of them tied carefully with a cheap blue ribbon.

"A package of love letters," she smiled to herself, and smiled a tender smile and thought of similar ones tucked away in a corner of her own desk. "I will just leave them because they were dear to someone once — and somehow I can't fee llike destroying them." So she went downstairs humming a ittle love song and for many days the old attic was left alone.

At first, prosperity seemed to have settled down on the little home to stay; but suddenly bad luck came, and like the old adage that "misfortunes never come singly," o it proved true for the Dustins.

With the coming of the baby Betty's health began to fail; then doctors' bills soon ate the small amount that John had saved. Work grew scarce and bills collected until finally there seemed not a place to turn for help. John grew desperate as he watched the thin, white face of his once smiing, rosy wife, and the small delicate fac of his baby boy. He searched long and earnestly for work but there was none to be had, and his neighbours were not much better off than himself.

The worst finally came when he knew he could not keep the little home longer. He must raise what he could on it and go away somewhere and try again. Betty grew heartsick when she realized the need for this, for her heart was twined about the little house where she had come as a happy bride, and where her baby had been born, but she tried bravely to bear up when John could see her.

She started to clean the home thoroughly before leaving it, and began with the attic. It was almost empty save for the old desk when she climbed the attic stairs and flung open the blinds and let in the spring sunshine. She looked at the desk longingly, thinking what a thing of beauty it could be made had she the means to do it, and then she remembered that the old letters were still in it.

"I might as well clear them up and burn them after all as to leave them for someone else perhaps to pry into," she said aloud to herself, lifting up the cover as she spoke. Taking up te pile of letters tied with their faded ribbon she reached for another bundle, and in doing so the ribbon parted and a few yellow envelopes fell into the broad path of sunshine at her feet. As she picked them up she noticed the words written in a shaking hand on one envelope, "To whom it may concern." For a second she stood looking at it and then drew out a piece of paper, and written on it were the words:

"If the person reading this has not touched or read any other letters or papers in this desk, let him go with a clear conscience to the little drawer in the left-hand orner of this desk and see what will be found there."

Trembingly Betty drew out the drawer in question and back of the drawer was a deep pocket in the wood. Pacing her hand in that, she found a wrue envelope of brown paper. It was simply tied about with a bit of string, and opening it she found bills, dozens of them, crisp and new. Her strength failed her, and she sank down on the dusty attic floor and buried her face in the pile of old letters. The thought that she had almost burned up this fortune left her weak and sick. After all it had only been her kindly thought for the fingers long since cold in death, that had tied those letters, that had saved this wealth for them.

Holding the letters and envelopes tightly, she went downstairs just as John had come back from another fruitless search for work. Laying the papers in his hands, she told him how she had found them, and then together they counted the money. There was enough to keep them comfortably for many years, even if work was as scarce as it was then, and it was with grateful hearts that they knelt together and thanked God for their good fortune.

Betty had the old desk brought down and restored to its old-time condition, and though she was offered many times a large amount of money for it, she always said as she laid her hand lovingly on its shining mahogany case:

"No, indeed, I prize this desk more than anything else money could buy. While I live I shall always keep it."

IN THE WAKE OF WAR.

Memories of Many Yuletides Spent In Strange Lands.

Few men can conjure up memories of more Yuletides spent in strange lands and under still stranger conditions than Mr. William Maxwell, whose wanderings in the wake of war have made a network over more than half the globe.

Only seven years separate him from a Christmas dinner eaten and enjoyed in the Black Sea, when he was hurrying from Cairo to Teheran at the first rumbling of a revolution after the Shah's death.

Twelve months earlier Mr. Maxwell had seen Yuletide come and go in a very different environment. Then he was luxuriating in a silken tent under the sweltering sun of Central India, with the Maharajah of Gwalior for host, and the Prince and Princess of Wales as fellow-guests—feasting right royally, and finding it difficult to realise the discomforts of his last Christmas, with the thunder of cannon in his ear, and shells shrieking over his head.

This memorable Christmas he had his cheerless lodging in a hill-cave within sight of Port Arthur; and with his fellows he was drinking healths, a few days later, when the feasting was interrupted by news that a Cossack had just come in from Port Arthur, carrying the white flag of surrender.

Christmas of 1903 found him crossing the world to Manchuria on the trail of war. Twelve months earlier he ate his Christmas dinner at Durban while waiting to accompany Mr. Chamberlain on his tour through South Africa.

In 1899 Mr. Maxwell was spending what promised to be the last of his adventurous Christmases among the besieged in Ladysmith. A few days only had passed since the beleaguered garrison had received General Buller's paralyzing message, "I have made my effort and failed." And disease and hunger had already began their ravages.

But Mr. Maxwell and his gallant companions were not the men to allow their spirits to be damped by any conditions. Though shells and shrapnel were raining around them, they sat down as light-heartedly to their Christmas dinner as amid the security of their far-off homes. Even plum-pudding was not lacking at Mr. Maxwell's table, spread under a sailcloth, with Admiral Lambton as genial host; and there was a bottle of whiskey to drain in toasts.

Other Christmases Mr. Maxwell has seen as far apart as Canada and Morocco. One he thankfully spent in Egypt, after accompanying the German Emperor in his breath-taking Palestine pilgrimage; another, but six years ago, he passed most uncomfortably in the train on his way back from the Continent, after attending the Swedish King's funeral.

The Christmas of 1908 found him in Bosnia, which he reached after a perilous journey through the snows of Montenegro and Herzegovina.

MOTHERS WILL YOU RISK IT?

Your child—or some member of your family—has a bad sore, cut or ulcer, or eczema. Whatever you put on that sore place will get into the blood as surely as if it were swallowed into the stomach. Now what are you going to use?

Many ointments are not antiseptic.—Zam-Buk is.

Many ointments cause pain.—Zam-Buk kills pain.

Most ointments contain mineral poisons.—Zam-Buk does not.

Most ointments have as a basis animal oils and fats.—Zam-Buk is purely herbal.

Most ointments suitable for adults are unsuitable for children.—Zam-Buk is suitable alike for babes or adults.

Most ointments, if not used up, go bad.—Zam-Buk retains its power for years. Economical.

The deeper you look into it the more clearly you see the foolishness of taking risks. Don't you think your children should have the best? Zam-Buk is the standard by which ointments are to-day judged. Some dealers will tell you they have something "just as good as Zam-Buk." Why spend money on imitations of Zam-Buk when you can get real Zam-Buk? Take no risks. Try Zam-Buk for cuts, burns, eczema, piles, scalp sores, eruptions and all skin diseases and injuries. See name on box before buying. THIS WAS SO SUDDEN.

Harry T. Duffy, district passenger agent for the Soo line, received the other day notice of his transfer to Minneapolis. On the evening of the same day he carried to the Western Union booth in the Hotel Multnomah a telegram which he filed with Miss Vada E. Watts, the operator.

Miss Watts started to send the telegram, which was addressed to W. R. Calloway, general passenger agent of the Soo at Minneapolis.

"Am bringing with me as souvenir of Oregon a wife," clicked off Miss Watts.

There she "broke" and said "Oh!" pointedly, but quickly resumed.

"Hope to have your blessing and a good job," finished the mesage.

"Let me congratulate you, Mr. Duffy," said the fair operator.

"Thank you," said Duffy; "you know I really am tremendously lucky. I am going to marry a splendid girl."

"Anybody I know?"

"Sure, it's you," said Duffy.

"But, we've not even been engaged," stammered Miss Watts.

"Even so, I've got to make good on that telegram, haven't I?"

"Yes," agreed Miss Watts.

So just before Mr. Duffy left for his new field of duty, he and Miss Watts, who is a beautiful woman, were married. They have been acquainted for a year.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

Do Not Use Too Much Meat While Clogs Kidneys Then Get Busy

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have headache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming trouble while it is only trouble.

GUNS N. B. PREMIER.

Lynch Company Will Try to Recover Bonus Charges.

WOODSTOCK, N.B., April 14. — A Supreme Court writ has been issued against James K. Flemming, Premier of New Brunswick; W. H. Berry and Edgar R. Teed on behalf of Timothy Lynch & Co., Ltd., lumbermen, for the recovery of $1,630 and costs in connection with the alleged payment of money by the Lynch estate in the matter of timber bonus charges made on the floor of the New Brunswick Legislature a few days ago. This action is taken by F. B. Carvell, K.C., M.P., who is solicitor for the Lynch Company.

It is announced that the basis of this suit is information in the possession of Mr. Carvell to the effect that the Lynch Com. any, without the knowledge and consent of a sufficient number of the directors, is alleged to have paid over $1,630, amounting to $16 a square mile of its timber limits, in connection with timber bonuses.

Mr. Carvell says that the serving of the writ at this time is due to the fact that he has heard that one of the defendants contemplated a journey out of New Brunswick for his health, and that serving the writ will inform him of the fact that his presence in this province is necessary during the immediate future.

Woman Froze To Death.

MONTREAL, April 14.—The body of a woman, believed to be Mrs. Kate McGuiggan, a servant, was found yesterday on the water front.

She had gone into an old shack apparently to get away from the cold Sunday night, and had been frozen to death.

Fusillade From the Dark.

SOMERSET, Pa., April 14.—John and Joseph D'Angelo, cousins, were shot and killed, and Mrs. Frank D'Angelo, Joseph's mother, was dangerously wounded at Bodwell, near here yesterday.

Seven persons were arrested, five of them blood—relatives of the D'Angelo family. The boys were returning home from Easter festivities at the house of a friend. The police have no motive for the assassination.

Guarding Against Mishaps.

The kid came into the library and politely begged his father's pardon for disturbing him.

"Well, what is it?" asked the father.

"I hate to bother you, dad, but Sister Ann is going to elope with that young Mr. Taylor tonight."

"How do you know?"

"He has a rope ladder hid in the garage."

"Thanks for telling me, son. Now, look here; you run right upstairs and tell your mother what you've just told me. If she doesn't know about it beforehand she might think it was burglars when it comes off and raise a row."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Chile.s Humor.

Two Chinamen, Chung and Kung, were warming themselves before an open stove. Chung, who was remarkable for his coolness and lequacity, said to Kung, who was an excessively hot-headed person: "My dear Kung, there is something that I should like very much to say to you. It relates to a circumstance I have observed for a little time past and have desired to mention to you; but, bearing in mind the somewhat fiery and quarrelsome disposition that is commonly attributed to you, I have hesitated to express myself. However, I have at last resolved that if I do not mention the matter to you I shall do wrong, and I have consequently determined to ask your permission to speak to you about it." "Well, what is it?" "Your coat, my dear Kung," said Chung quietly, "is on fire." "For pity's sake!" exclaimed Kung angrily, jumping up and shedding his coat nearly burned off. "Why in the world didn't you tell me before?" "There it goes. What a frightful temper!" Chung murmured as he moved away. "Foolish man gotta-stinks about me."

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, offerings this morning for sale were 60 cattle, 25 sheep and lambs, 1400 hogs and 100 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady, owing to the small offerings and the limited demand. Packers and butchers generally carried over their stocks after supplying a very good Easter trade. On the whole trade was slow, and, while the supply was small, it was in excess of the requirements.

Demand for calves was fair, and the supply was ample, with steady prices. Trade in sheep and lambs was slow. The feeling in the market is being confirmed very firm under a good demand from packers, and sales of Ontario selected stock were made at $10 per 100 pounds weighed off cars.

ERADICATES DANDRUFF; STOPS FALLING HAIR

Others Imitate and Make Similar Claims, But the "Genuine and Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer" is Newbro's Herpicide.

The discovery of the dandruff germ as the cause of all hair troubles is not a recent event. Prof. Unna gave the germ theory to the world in 1887 and two years later Sabouraud by his experiments with a rabbit proved beyond a doubt the actual existence of this germ.

On the heels of this establishment of the germ theory came the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. This was the first and only remedy ever prepared in harmony with this theory.

There are other preparations for which the same claims are made as for Herpicide. But the thousands of enthusiastic users testify to the genuine merit of Newbro's Herpicide as a scalp prophylactic. It does as promised. For this reason it has long been known as the original remedy and the only one that is genuine.

Don't be fooled by preparations which are trading upon the marvellous success of Herpicide. Remember you take no chances with Newbro's Herpicide. It is absolutely guaranteed.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Nerves Were on Edge She Could Not Sleep

Great Change Brought About Dr. Chase's Nerve Food --System Built Up—Nerves Strong—Sleep Natural and Refreshing

Nothing can give you so good an idea of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do for you as reading the letters from persons who have been benefitted by its use. That is why we are publishing such letters daily in this paper.

Diseases of the nerves are manifested in different ways. With some it is sleeplessness and inability to rest. Others have frequent headaches and neuralgic pains. Indigestion is a common symptom, and depressed spirits and discouragement are usually manifest. Whatever may be the warning, the principal thing is to restore the wasted nerves before paralysis or locomotor ataxia claim you as a victim.

Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., writes: "I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am never without it in the house. I have been using the Nerve Food for months now and am still taking it, as it just suits my needs, and is building up my system wonderfully. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights, and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition, and am change for it. My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles, and has been entirely cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment."

By noting your increase in weight you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue are being added to the body. Naturally and gradually vigour is restored to the nervous system by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food until you find yourself again feeling and looking well and ready to fight the battle of life. NEW REGULATIONS FOR CLEAN BREAD

Board of Health Took a Step This Morning to Demand the Care and Attention of Bakers and Their Employees—Bread Must Be Wrapped According to One Clause.

NOT ENTIRELY COVERED

Employees must wear clean white overalls, smocks and caps.

Doors and windows must be fitted with fly screens.

Lavatory accommodation must be properly located. ....

..The premises and utensils to be kept in a perfectly clean condition.

Premises to be whitewashed or painted at least twice a year . . . .

Delivery waggons to be kept in a clean condition.

Bread to be wrapped before put in delivery waggon. ....

The above regulations, prepared by Sanitary Inspector Spence, were endorsed at the Board of Health meeting this morning, and it was stated that if they are not adhered to by bakers who have been careless or negligent, their shops will be closed up.

Dr. McPherson—In regard to the second clause there is simply no option. The law requires that all hotels, restaurants and bakeshops must have screens on their windows and doors, and we are determined that this law shall be enforced.

Dr. Amys stated that he knew of employees of bakeshops who were tubercular. He said that if the local Board of Health was powerless to move against such a condition a recommendation should be sent to the Provincial Board of Health or the Legislature, asking for the required authority.

Dr. McPherson expressed the opinion that the local Board had some power, although it may be limited.

Moved by Dr. McPherson, seconded by Mr. Murty, that the above regulations be adopted and a copy of them sent to each baker in the City.

Manner of Wrapping.

There was a brief discussion regarding the manner of wrapping the bread. Dr. McPherson was in favour of having them entirely covered.

Ald. Duncan said that if a paper 'sleeve' were pulled over each loaf of bread it might be sufficient for the present. If this method does not give satisfaction the Board could order the complete covering of bread.

Ald. Duncan related an incident he had noticed a week ago that evidenced lack of thought and a certain amount of carelessness.

Another incident that might have been interpolated was that of a bread delivery man who reached into his waggon for a loaf, and as he approached the particular house tossed it into the air several times as an exhibition of his juggling ability. The handling of the bread by hands that hitched up the horse, drove it, and otherwise attended to it is the reason given for the adoption of the above regulations. The first clause pertains to clothes to be worn in bakeshops.

TO-NIGHT!

"Queen Zephra" With Two Orchestras

This is the evening that has been talked about and looked forward to by all.

Queen Zephra and her brilliant court will make their first appearance before the Peterborough public at the Grand Opera House.

Nothing has been left undone to make this the most artistic and beautiful production ever seen on the local stage and you can be assured of seeing and hearing more of real meritorious work in drama, music and fancy dancing than has been advertised.

Those interested in Queen Zephra wish to thank the management of the local picture shows for running advertising slides in their theatres. While the regular price has been paid for this, it must be remembered that they have been advertising a counter attraction. This is a spirit of "boosting" that it is hoped the whole public will take up in connection with "Zephra."

The Conservatory Orchestra and Grand Opera House Orchestra will both be present at the performance this evening.

There will be no tiresome waits between acts and curtain will raise sharp on time.

Plan open at Grand. Prices, 25c., 50c., 75c., with gallery 15c.

ANOTHER GIFT FOR MR. SANDY

Is Presented With a Writing Desk by a Number of Local Employees of the G. T. R.

AN ADDRESS READ

Mr. F. Sandy, the local G. T. R. station agent who is being transferred to Lindsay, was again honoured last evening at six o'clock, when a number of the employees of the company gathered and presented him with a beautiful solid mahogany writing desk.

The presentation was made in Mr. Sandy's private office, and took him completely by surprise. It was the third expression of regret at his approaching departure that had been made to him through a presentation yesterday, the others being from the business men of this city, who gave him a silver service and a fumed oak morris chair, and the cheese buyers of this district who presented him with a solid leather club bag.

The presentation last evening was made on behalf of the employees by Mr. F. V. Clementi, and there were about a dozen present, Mr. Clementi also read the following address, which was presented to Mr. Sandy:

It is with feelings of deep sorrow that we, your subordinates, learn that you are to be transferred. During the seventeen years you have been agent here we have always found you to be exceedingly considerate to all the employees of the Company who have come under your jurisdiction. Your loss to the City was clearly demonstrated this afternoon and this evening, and we wish in like manner to show our regret at your departure. We ask you to accept this writing desk as a slight token of our esteem, and our best wishes for the welfare of yourself and Mrs. Sandy in your new field.

Signed on behalf of the employees,
F. Clementi,
C. McGee,
J. Smith.

Mr. Sandy replied in a few words, thanking the employees for the writing desk and the feelings toward him that had prompted them to give it.

Mr. Sandy will leave Peterborough on Thursday, or Friday, and it has been with sincere regret that a large number of the residents and business men of this City have learned that he is going to leave. Mr. Sandy was day operator at the local station from 1883 to 1890, and in the latter year was promoted to the position of Station Agent at Lakefield. After a year in that position he was promoted to Stirling and six years later came to this City as Station Agent. For seventeen years he has been identified with the Grand Trunk System here, in that capacity, and has attended to his duties during that time in a way that has made him very popular here.

COULD NOT BUY LAND

It is understood that expropriation proceedings will be taken by the Dominion Government to secure several of the properties to be used in East City, in connection with the installing of the Dry Dock. Among the properties affected are those of F. Kano, Chas. Noyes, as well as others. Mr. Pope, of Belleville, representing the Government, endeavoured to purchase the properties from the owners, but was unsuccessful. He was followed by Messrs. J. B. Annual Meeting Of George Street Epworth League Monday Next

The George Street Epworth League held a very successful meeting last night. There was a large attendance, and the chair was taken by Mr. C. S. Thompson the president of the League. A splendid paper upon Easter was read by Miss Ethel Miller, the vice-president of the Literary and Social Department. Miss E. Bentley and Miss N. Wright rendered a very excellent duet, entitled "Watchman, what of the night?" The paper of the League, "The Criterion," which is contributed to by the members, and is published monthly, was then read by Miss Bedford, the editress. The contributions to this paper, as well as the comments upon current topics, are always enjoyed by the members, and Monday was no exception in this respect. The annual meeting of the League will be held next Monday evening, and all members are requested to make a special effort to be present, as some important business is on the agenda.

Sanitary Inspector Spence Visited the Premises, Reported to the Board of Health and Received the Authority to Deal Quickly and Thoroughly With the Situation—Air Space at a Premium

LOOKING FOR OTHERS

Sanitary Inspector Spence paid a visit to an Italian lodging house at the corner of Smith and Reid Streets this morning at an early hour and found the following number of lodgers:

Eleven men sleeping in the attic with a floor space of 28 ft. by 18 ft., and about 2,000 cu. feet of air.

Five men in a bedroom 11 ft. by 12 ft. by 10 ft.

Four men in another bedroom, and four in another.

The cellar, the Inspector stated, was practically a cess pool. The water, etc., passed through to the cellar with no more attention paid to it than if it were passing to the sewer. Complaints had been received that the men caused a disturbance on Saturday and Sunday nights by their noise, and the neighbours were greatly annoyed by the conditions.

Dr. McPherson added that a former occupant of the premises was in the hospital with apparent tubercular infection.

Mr. Spence explained that he had asked for a by-law to license houses of this kind in order that complete control could be exercised before they were occupied. The Council had turned down the by-law which had been prepared, and he asked for power to deal summarily with the particular premises. He had warned the keeper of the house without effect. The Board of Health this morning told Mr. Spence that he had the authority upon an order from Dr. McPherson to order the removal of the inmates or forcibly eject them. Whatever is done, sewer connection must be secured, and only a reasonable number of inmates allowed as indwellers.

The Box Cars.

Mr. Spence stated that he had also investigated the conditions in the freight cars used by the Italian workmen as living quarters on the spur line of the C.P.R. He found that eight men slept in less than 800 cu. ft. of air space, and six men in less than 500 cu. ft. These were only a few of the details.

Dr. Amys remarked that conditions of this kind explained how these men can work more cheaply than Canadians. The law requires that each person should have 600 cu. ft. of air space.

Mr. Spence stated that he was determined to eradicate living conditions of this kind, and promises immediate attention to any complaints from citizens regarding other places similar to that outlined above.

COLONEL SAM FOR PETAWAWA CAMP

Examiner Special:

LINDSAY, April 14.—It is understood the 45th Regiment and the last Ontario Militia will this year be camped at Pettawawa instead of Barriefield, Kingston, which has been the camping grounds of the regiment for years past. It is also understood that Colonel the Hon. Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, will himself personally supervise and be in charge of the camp at Pettawawa this year in June.

LET IRELAND WORK OUT HER OWN SALVATION

Suggestion in "The Times" (London,) Says Take Question Out of Politics

CARSON LOYAL TO ULSTER

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., April 14.—(Special Cable)—So far as the Irish question is concerned, all eyes are now on Carson. It is admitted that he is at the present moment occupying probably the most responsible position in the United Kingdom to-day. Comments on his speech to the Ulster volunteers yesterday indicate that it is generally accepted that his speeche will be belligerent, but by no means closing the door to propositions of settlement. His position is tactfully but solidly loyal to the Ulster people. A prominent writer in the Times this morning advances the suggestion that Redmond and Carson would more likely come to some agreement if Asquith and Bonar Law dropped out of negotiations altogether.

This writer declares it is time Ireland ceased to be a football for political parties of England, and tried to work out her own salvation through her own statesmen, of which she has many brilliant ones.

Baseball Scores At The Examiner

The major baseball leagues open today, and the Examiner has made arrangements to secure the scores. They will be bulletined in front of the office as soon as received. This will be a daily arrangement throughout the season.

MEXICO MUST DIP FLAG TO OLD GLORY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, April 14. — This Government's policy toward Mexico hung in the balance to-day. Whether there will be a radical change will be determined within the next forty-eight hours. While Special Envoy John Lind conferred with Wilson and Bryan to-day, two squadrons of warships tugged at their anchors in Tampico and Vera Cruz harbours, waiting and watching for orders. Unless the Mexican Federal Commander at Tampico salutes "Old Glory" at the mast top of Admiral Mayo's flagship very shortly the United States may be forced to make its first warlike move. Mayo has informed the President through Secretary of the Navy Daniels that unless some definite action is taken his squadrons remaining at Tampico would only increase the Mexicans' contempt for everything Yankee.

A SHADY POOL GAME SHOWN UP IN COURT

BURGLARS SENTENCED

Two Thieves Arrested by the Local Police Receive Short Terms —One Goes to Central

McGILVRAY SENT DOWN

Two years less one day in the Central Prison, now known as the Ontario Reformatory, was the sentence meted out this morning at Lindsay to Les McGilvray, by His Honour Judge McMillan. McGilvray, it will be remembered, was charged with administering poison in a glass of beer some weeks ago. The investigation has been continuing for some weeks.

Sentences Were Light.

The two young and daring burglars who were arrested in this City after having got away from Lindsay, with nearly half the town, received their sentences from Police Magistrate Jackson this morning. Smith, the younger of the two, will serve 6 months on the prison farm in Guelph.

Wilson was sentenced to two years less one day in the Ontario reformatory on the charge of burglarising Britton's jewellery store, and to 6 months on six other charges, with an additional 6 months for breaking into the Grand Trunk station offices at Penetang. The sentences in this case will also run concurrently. Mr. G. A. Jordan, defending the lads, made a splendid plea for leniency. In the case of Smith he pleaded for a light sentence, asking the Magistrate to take into consideration the fact that his youth, and also the fact that he had been almost dragged into these associations, and was but an amateur at the business. He also made a plea for Wilson on behalf of his father.

An Investigation.

An investigation, or something near one, was held last night in Lindsay, into the methods of the Police Department. After a considerable number of explanations the matter fizzled out.

U. S. FLEET IS ORDERED TO TAMPICO

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 14.—"This is not the time to discuss subjects of grave national import," was the significant statement of Secretary of State Bryan this afternoon coming from a meeting at the White House on the Mexican situation. It is known that the cabinet was furnished with up to the minute cipher reports from Tampico and extensive instructions were sent to Admiral Mayo. The tension of the situation increased as the day wore on.

The United States has ten warships with fifteen hundred sailors and twelve hundred marines ready for action at Tampico and Vera Cruz.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 14.—Bulletin—Admiral Badger with the entire United States Atlantic squadron has been ordered to concentrate his ships off Tampico. Evidently the United States intends to make a demonstration there. Three cruisers also are ordered from South American waters.

Mr. A. H. Stratton received the following over his special wire to day:

NEW YORK, April 14.—The Lannin News Bureau has received a despatch from Washington, saying that the Atlantic Fleet has been ordered to Tampico.

Standard Is Swept By Fire

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Ont., April 14.—The offices of the Kingston Standard were swpt by fire this morning causing a damage of twenty thousand dollars to the building, machinery and stock. Employees in the upper stories escaped suffocation by fire escapes, installed only a few weeks ago.

NEW RIFLES FOR CADETS

One hundred and ten new pattern Ross rifles arrived at the Collegiate Institute yesterday for use among the Cadet corps of that school. They will be used for drill purposes.

$125 Was Bet on a Game Which Had All the Appearances of a "Frame-up"— Something Was Wrong

AND THE BITER WAS BIT

There arrived from Toronto a week or more ago, two expert pool players, who wished to pick up some easy money from the innocents abroad in this fair little town of ours. Just how well they succeeded was brought to light in the Police Court this morning. After sizing up the situation they finally picked upon a local young man as a side partner in the effort to walk away with the cash. The man they picked upon is no mean pool-player himself, but the slick young man from Toronto could close one eye, use his left hand, and still spot him 50 balls in a 100-ball game. However, it was arranged that the local young man would win, and he was given $120.00 to which he added $5.00 of his own money to bet, and the Toronto artist, who was ably assisted by his friend, hustled out to get another local man to back him to the extent of $125.00, and who would, it was supposed, lose the money by the local young man winning a fixed game.

However, the local young man not caring to have $125.00 leave the city these hard times, managed in some way to have what is known as "the double-cross" worked on the two Toronto boys, and agreed that he would lose the game that it was fixed he would win.

The result was two pretty fair pool players trying to lose a game of pool that might have been going yet, only it was won by the Toronto man through the local boy being conversant with some rules of the game that helped him out.

The Toronto man's money was bet against himself, and instead of $125.00 leaving the city, a like amount has been left by him in exchange for as many dollars' worth of experience he hardly expected to find here.

TAIT OPTICAL COMPANY

Easter Visit of Mr. Joseph G. Tait of Hamilton to Peterborough

Mr. Joseph G. Tait of Hamilton, senior member of the Tait Optical Company of Peterborough and Hamilton, spent Easter at the home of his parents in this City.

It was learned from Mr. Tait that the growth of his Optical Company in Hamilton has been quite marked. The demand for "Tait Quality Glasses" has so developed that the premises on James Street, where they first opened out, has expanded from a fifty-foot store in depth to one of one hundred and fifty feet. Not only has their trade in Hamilton been built up rapidly, but they have attracted a large foreign business, extending as far as Mexico and the Southern States.

WILL HASTEN TRIAL

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, April 14.—District Attorney Whitman said to-day that "Dago" Frank's confession would only serve to materially aid in sending Becker to the electric chair. To-morrow he will try to have Becker's second trial fixed for the first Monday in May.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed.

TUESDAY, APRIL 14, 1914

"I TOLD YOU SO."

Doubting Thomases who could not see the great national advantages of placing the Borden Government in power, who predicted all sorts of unpleasant consequences, can now indulge the vaunt "I told you so." We have had the hardest, and still have, at the middle of April, the hardest, winter in our memory; we have had hard times, and the high cost of living at its highest notch; we have had a falling revenue, and an addition this year of 19 million dollars to the net public debt. We have had the drill hall at Omemee burnt; we have a twenty-six mill rate; we have had the greatest epidemic of mumps in our history; we have had an unprecedented volume of "truck and trade with the Yankees" we have had enough of calamaties under the Borden Government to justify the pessimist's "I told you so."

THE LAW MUST BE SUPREME.

The position of Ulster is that it will not be "coerced" into accpting the will of the British Parliament in the matter of Home Rule. If the doctrine of this attitude to "coercion" were accepted—resistance to law that did not meet our approval—we should have universal anarchy. We are all under some form of coercion every day. There is hardly a law of the land that does not run counter to the opinions of somebody, and interfere, to a greater or less extent, with the right of free action. Yet good citizens and even bad citizens submit to laws that they regard as a form of coercion. Submission to law is the universal rule; it is what constitutes civilization. Exception to the rule that all must obey the laws enacted by constitutional authority is inconceivable. The Maritime Provinces at the time of Confederation had confederation virtually forced upon them, but they submitted without armed resistance, and few, if any, of the evils they foresaw, have been experienced. Armed resistance to the will of the British people cannot be permitted, even if in momentary madness it is attempted.

THOROUGHNESS.

At the Ontario Educational Association at its fifty-third annual meeting in Toronto this week, the president will introduce the subject of "A Simplified School Programme," involving fewer subjects to be taught—at. His address on this subject will be an expression of the opinion of the mass of teachers, based on their experience. There is no doubt that the adoption of such a scheme would be of the greatest educational advantage. There is likewise no doubt that our school curriculum is much over weight — top heavy and unwieldy, leading to cramming and superficiality of attainment. There is likewise, no doubt, that even the thorough teaching of the "three R's"—reading, writing and 'rithmetic, would equip a pupil more effectively for the duties of active life than a flimsy smattering of these and of a score of other, and unpractical, subjects. The average school child has a limited time for education, and in that limited time there is no opportunity of doing more than laying the foundations thoroughly, of learning as thoroughly as possible the foundation subjects. The other subjects taught, or rather catalogued, in the public school course, are not at all depreciated as to their importance and value; but it is a fact than the imparting of even a superficial knowledge of them must be done at the expense or neglect of approximately thorough mastery of the cardinal, the basic subjects. If a school child is thoroughly grounded in reading, writing, arithmetic and grammar—if the teaching has given the ambition and impulse to study and self improvement, the child will be equipped for self-teaching, for study in after-school life. He or she will also be infinitely better equipped for wrestling with the problems that confront him or her in the world of practical affairs. It is sometimes painful to see the inefficiency that handicaps many a girl and boy on his or her entry into the duties of so simple a thing as, say, stenography and typing. The patient employer has to exercise unlimited forbearance and perform a supplementary teaching to make his employee only fairly capable of proper performance of work. Such an employee has gone through school and has had his or head filled with a jumble of a little of a dozen subjects, with the really essential subjects characterized by similar superficiality and—practical uselessness. Is it not true that nine-tenths of the people in the practical affairs of the world only employ the rudimentary subjects of the school course in the practical business of their occupation? A university gold medallist in mathematics, if in business, has no occasion once in a thousand times, to use more than the four rudimentary "rules" of arithmetic—addition, subtraction, multiplication and division—and does not often have to go beyond the other of the three R's. Thorough knowledge of these and of the principles of grammar and writing is a practical equipment, much better than a mere smattering of other subjects. These other subjects may be good to know; but if they have to be taught and learned at the expense of solid grounding in absolute essentials, the essentials should have the preference.

HOW THE COST OF LIVING STANDS.

The department of labour's index number of wholesale prices rose slightly in March, standing at 136.7 as compared with 136.1 in February, and 136.0 in March, 1913. The more important increases occurred in grains and fodder, animals and meats (especially in poultry), canned salmon, apples, beans, potatoes, flour, oatmeal, beefhides and muskrat skins. Important decreases occurred in eggs, juite, brass and lead, and in some grades of pine. In retail price beef, veal, bacon, flour, beans, prunes and potatoes were upward, while there was a general decline in eggs, and butter showed a downward tendency.—Monetary Times.

CREDIT TO WHOM CREDIT.

It is a ewll-known fact that it is as a result of continual prodding by Mr. N. W. Rowell that the Ontario Government has at last introduced a Workmen's Compensation Act. In fact, the leader of the Opposition did not content himself with constant appeals to the Government to take action, but he introduced a bill of his own dealing with this question. The result is that to-day many of the Conservative members are endeavoring to placate the manufacturers by throwing the responsibility of the Government's action in putting through the act upon the opposition, claiming that Mr. Rowell's persistence forced its hand. It is a pity to deprive the Conservative party of the credit for even this one measure in behalf of Labour, but comomn honesty requires that this be done. —Brantford Expositor.

ABOUT COWS

The following general rules for calculating the actual selling value of grade cows and pure bred females and bulls have been compiled by a well-known western dairy authority, Mr. Geo. P. Grant.

1. The value of any dairy cow, granting she is sound and not too old, should be based upon her ability at the pail.

If she produces 160 pounds of butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $48.

If she produces 260 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $78.

If she produces 360 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $108.

If she produces 460 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $138.

If she produces 560 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $168.

If she produces 660 pounds butter in a year at 30 cents, she is worth $198.

2. The estimated value and selling price of a yearling heifer is half that of her dam as figured above.

3. The estimated value of a pure bred cow is four times that of a grade based on the above figures. By this way of figuring, the 160 lbs. pure bred is worth $192. As a matter of fact, the 160 lbs. pure bred is not worth anything if that is all she is ever capable of making.

4. The estimated value of a pure bred bull calf is the average of the sum of his dam's record in pounds of butter taken with the average production inheritance of the bull's sire; for example, if a well marked and good individual bull calf is out of a 400 lb. fat dam or 480 lbs. butter, and his sire has two A.R. daughters whose average record is 500 lbs. fat or 600 lbs. butter, or his dam has a record of 500 lbs. fat, and the grand sire two A.R. daughters with an average of 500 lbs. fat, and 600 lbs. butter, we add the 480 lbs. and 600 lbs. together, divide by 2, and we have 540 lbs. of butter, multiplied by 30 cents gives $162, the estimated selling price of the bull calf.

5. Some animals whose prepotency has been demonstrated are priceless in building up a good herd.

—Farm and Dairy.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Real and Mother:

We, a few of your many friends, have assembled to-night to show in some small degree our appreciation of your labour among us, and give some token of the respect and esteem we have for you. We look back with pleasure upon the four years of your ministry among us, and regret that they soon must end. We feel that God has blessed your efforts; the church has been uplifted, and we have all been spiritually benefitted, and greatly helped on our way. We trust that in whatever part of the Lord's vineyard you are called to go that the coming years may be crowned with prosperity and blessing. We shall not soon forget the kind and thoughtful sympathy we have received in times of bereavement and sorrow.

Please accept this clock as a remembrance of the kindly feeling and love of your people, which prompted the gift, and not for its great value. And may it recount to you many happy years. And our aged mother we ask to accept this small token, and as her past life has been an inspiration and blessing, may the Saviour's presence brighten and gladden her future days to the end. And when the roll is called, and the last trumpets shall sound, may you each hear the Master's: Well done, good and faithful servant enter thou with the joys of the Lord."

Signed on behalf of the Trent Bridge members and friends.

WOOD SMOKE SMELLS.

I.

I want to take a good, sharp grubbing hoe—
Ax-end—and gouge around a lot of stumps
And yank them out from where they used to grow
And stack them—gnarled with big, dirt-crusted lumps—
Into a monster heap and let them dry,
Then on some later day, pile up some chips
And bleached out fodder stalks strewn 'round near by
And some dry bark all shredded into strips,
And set fire to it on the windward side
And watch the smudge, and then the first wee blaze
Come creeping out, then rear like Fundy's tide
And eat its way into that rorty maze.

II.

Lord, how I yearn to smell the wood smoke smells
And watch, triumphant with an artist's glow,
The fire I made! In every breast still dwells
A savage instinct for the things that go
To make up camp life on the faint blazed trail—
A hunger to grow hungry like a feast—
That we may eat—life's joy would never fail;
Each fire a luxury, all food a feast—
Each craving daily satisfied — not sated;
Each day those yearnings bringing back again
To be re-satisfied. How poorly mated
Are "civilization" and the hearts of men!

The addition of a little turpentine makes the stove polish blacker, more durable and more glossy.

TRADE STAGNANT IN MADOC SINCE BANK AFFAIR

The Dale's bank situation continues to be practically the only topic of conversation in the Madoc section. This is not to be wondered at, for the list of unfortunate depositors includes the great majority of the adult heads of families of the village and surrounding district. Should the depositors not realise a fair percentage of their deposits, as some predict will be the case, it would leave some in a serious position.

With some of the customers of the bank, the deposit represented practically the savings of a lifetime. Some of these are widows, some are mechanics or labourers, and other business men or farmers. One widow, we are told, had nearly her whole estate, amounting to more than five thousand dollars, on deposit.

If the patrons of the bank do not get back a fair share of their holdings, the result would be almost tragic in its effect in many cases.

Business is in a stagnant condition. It is even reported that building contracts have been cancelled as a direct result of the suspension.

Some of the depositors claim that the law governing such cases as the Dale Bank suspension is defective. When the bank was closed, there appeared to be no person clothed with th proper legal authority to step in and take charge of the assets of the institution on behalf of the depositors. They think that the Government should have been prepared to come in at once and assume complete control. While they have no suspicion that everything that is now being done is not on the square, they feel that where such weighty interests are involved and hundreds of thousands of dollars of the people's money are tied up such matters should not be left to individual initiative, but become a proper function of Government. A general law governing suspensions of this nature in all lines of business, they contend, is very necessary.—Belleville Ontario.

SCHOOL REPORTS

Report of S. S. No. 2, North Monaghan:

Senior Fourth — 1, Stanley Whitfield; 2, George Robinson; 3, Clara Robinson; 4, George Moore; 5, Gordon Stevens; 6, Hazel Henry; 7, Harvey Webber.

Junior Fourth—1, Eva Lawless; 2, Ross Payne; 3, Mary Morton; 4, Joe Forster; 5, Edna Bingham.

Senior Third—1, Herbert Tranter; 2, Leonard Vass; 3, Clifford Rusaw; 4, Winnie Cooper; 5, Harry Partridge; 6, Archie Robinson; 7, Minnie Warman; 8, Winsome Collin.

Junior Third—1, Janet Houston; 2, Laura Thomas; 3, Mabel Scott; 4, Willie Clelland; 5, Frank Bougard; 6, Harold Collin and Fred. Panter (equal); 8, Arthur Bishop; 9, George Tranter; 10, Hugh Collin; 11, Jim Connors; 12, Rollie Vass.

E. A. RAE, Principal.

The following is the report of the Ennismore Continuation School for the term between Christmas and Easter. The percentages indicate the average percentages obtained on the examinations for the aforesaid period:

Form II.—James Meguire, 79 (honours); Marguerite Castello, 73; Mollie Kennedy, 69; Ethel Kennedy, 63; Essie O'Rielly, 50; Johnny Scollard, 48.

Form I.—Geraldine Kennedy, 65; Joseph Leahy, 64; Ethel O'Rielly, 64; P. J. Scollard, 62; Kent Killen, 59; Monica Young, 57; Stafford Killen, 55; Mamie Twomey, 49; Arnold Crough, 42; Michael Crough, 41; Ronald Galvin, 40.

It should be clearly understood by pupils and parents that in all Departmental examinations set for continuation schools, the requisite for pass standing is 40 per cent. of the marks assigned for each paper and 60 per cent. of the total number of marks. In view of this fact, I would ask, is it wise that pupils should be urged to waste time and money and energy by writing on a final examination when the school report shows them quite unprepared for it?

ELEVENTH HOUR LEGISLATION

Mr. E. A. Peck is Harbouring a Bill To Amend the Municipal Act

TORONTO, April 9. — Owing to the near approach of the end of the session of the Legislature, the time for presenting petitions for private bills has pased. In view of this fact, several members asked for the indulgence of the House yesterday to bring down eleventh-hour legislation. The matter was opened up by E. A. Peck (West Petesborough), who had a bill to amend the Municipal Act, but Mr. Hanna asked that the bill stand over for a day, as he knew of a dozen similar bills, and if the way was opened for one the privilege would have to be extended to all, and the House would never complete its work.

Toronto's Post Office Square.

Mr. W. K. McNaught North Toronto) was, however, more fortunate. He asked for the suspension of the rules to present a petition from the city of Toronto with respect to a bill authorizing the city to negotiate with the Dominion Government for the purchase of some land on Lombard Street for a post office square. Mr. Lucas demurred, but the Attorney-General stated that he had received a number of letters from property owners affected by the proposd improvement, and as there was no objection he could see no good reason for refusing the request. The rules were suspended, the petition received and subsequently the bill was introduced and read a first time.

A BETTER REMEDY THAN NASTY SALTS

Few people like to take physic, especially salts, because they are so disagreeable to take and because of the griping and pains they cause. Rexall Orderlies enable you to take less physic, and all without griping, purging or excessive looseness. Salts and harsh physics usually give only temporary relief and often leave the bowels worse off than before.

Rexall Orderlies move the bowels promptly, and soothe, tone and strengthen the intestinal muscles, leaving them healthy and regular in action. They taste like candy, and the movement they cause is as easy and natural as though your bowels were in perfect health and you never had to take any physic at all. We have so much faith in Rexall Orderlies that we urge you to try them with the understanding that, if they do not satisfy you in every way, all you have to do to get your money back is to tell us. We honestly believe them to be the best bowel remedy made. In vest pocket tin boxes; 10c, 25c, 50c.

You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at The Rexall Stores, and in this town only of us. —McDermid & Jory, E. L. Payne, Peterborough, Ont.

Man From Montana On Visit to Peterboro'

Mr. Morgan O'Connell, of Clifford, Montana, has been visiting friends in Lindsay for some days and is now spending a few days in Peterborough. Mr. O'Connell remarked on the great strides towards advancement made by Peterborough during recent years, and spoke very highly of the town's lighting and paved roads.

When asked if the money stringency effected his State to any great extent he replied that money had been exceedingly free and the past winter has been by no means marked with the generally prevailing hard times. The Dakotas are going back and a few more years will see Montana producing the greatest portion of American grain. Mr. O'Connell is living on a farm which he homesteaded five years ago, and with 160 out of 320 acres under cultivation, he reckons it is worth between $9,000 and $10,000.

THE MIRACLE.

"A miracle!" he craved,
My eyes would fain behold
What cannot be explained
By science hard and cold.
If ever one occurred
As ancient stories tell,
Why, then, should it not be
Vouchsafed to me as well?

"A miracle!" he craved,
"To save my soul from doubt,
Break through my senses dull
And put my fears to rout."
And even as he cried,
Through wodlands green and dim
As it had come of yore,
The springtime came to him.
—McLandburgh Wilson.

Big Contract For Wm. Hamilton Co.

The iron standards are practically identical with those that now decorate Simcoe and Hunter Streets. The Hydro-Electric system in Windsor is being extended through Walkerville to Ford, and will cover a very extensive teritory when completed. The work will be completed in about three months.

EIGHT LIVES LOST

Special to The Examiner:

BOSTON, April 14.—Seven or eight persons, nearly all women, lost their lives to-day in the destruction by fire of Melvin House, a kitchenette apartment place, where thirty families were trapped in their beds. One woman attempted to slide down a linsy rope of bed clothing and smashed her skull on the stone pavement. Two others, driven to desperation by the flames behind them, jumped from the fifth storey windows. There were pitiful scenes of women standing way up on balconies and waving arms for assistance, which came too late. The fire started in the base ment from an unknown cause, and quickly licked up the building.

VESTRY MEETINGS IN THE LOCAL ANGLICAN CHURCHES PROGRESS IS REPORTED

The vestry meeting of St. Luke's Church was held last night, with a large attendance. The church wardens presented their financial statement, showing the church to be in a very flourishing condition. Messrs. A. G. Carruthers and A. Moffatt were appointed auditors. The vestry elected Mr. Geo. Curtis as people's warden, and the Rector appointed Mr. Stephen Gaskins as Rector's warden. Mr. R. B. Rogers was nominated as vestry clerk. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. J. J Turner, Jr., for his faithful and efficient services as people's church warden for the last four years. Messrs. Claude Rogers and Sidney Gibbs were elected as assistant wardens.

The Advisory Board was then elected as follows: The Rector, wardens, assistant wardens, E. A. Peck, J. J. Turner, Jr., Wm. Maniece, T. G. Denne, A. Fitzgerald, Wm Gibbs, Jos. Ball, H. Nesbitt, G. Carpenter, F. Adams, R. H. Turner, R. B. Rogers, S. Whittaker, R. A. Wilson, R. H. Parsons, A. G. Carlis R. Long, F. Whitehouse, A. F. Calder, A. Moffatt.

Mr. E. A. Peck was appointed to represent the church on the Nicholls Hospital Board, Mr. R. H. Turner on the Protestant Home Board and Mr. S. Gaskins on the Charity Board.

The meeting adjourned until Monday, April 27th, when there will be a large congregational gathering and social evening in the Sunday School.

Lay delegates were appointed to the Synod at a congregational meeting which followed the vestry—Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. Wm. Maniece, Mr. T. H. G. Denne.

The annual Easter Vestry meeting of All Saints' Church was held last evening in the Parish Hall with the Rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., in the chair.

The meeting was very largely attended and a great deal of interest was displayed in the reports of the year. These showed encouraging progress in all branches of the work.

The financial statement was presented by Mr. T. H. Dawson, the People's Warden, and the missionary report by Mr. H. P. Morgan, the Rector's Warden.

The following reports were also presented: 'The Choir,' by Mr. Chandler; 'The Sunday School,' by the Rector, in the unavoidable absence of Mr. Weller, the Sunday School Superintendent.

The progress of the Sunday School during the year has been most encouraging. The increase in the number of scholars requiring the addition of five extra teachers.

'The Woman's Auxiliary,' by Mrs. Harris; 'The Women's Guild,' by Mrs. Haskill; 'The Talent System' by Mrs. Dobbin; 'The Anglican Young People's Association by Mr. Clarke, and the 'Bible Class' by Mr. C. E. Sisson.

The Rector presented the Poor Fund report, and also gave a resume of the year's work, and expressed the personal appreciation of the support he had received during the year.

The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows:

Rector's Warden—Mr. C. E. Sisson.
People's Warden—Mr. H. P. Morgan.
Vestry Clerk—Mr. R. E. Clarke.
Chairman of Sidesmen—Mr. Thos. Dawson.
Advisory Board — Mayor Buller, Messrs. T. H. Hooper, T. H. Dawson, Jas. Mulholland, E. L. Davis, R. N. Jones, Robt. Cottrell, William Rogers, C. A. G. Spence.
Representative to Charity Board—Mayor Buller.
Representative to Protestant Home Board—Mr. Jas. Edgar.
Representative to Hospital Board—Mr. John Green.
Lay Delegates to the Synod—Messrs. Jas. Edgar, J. W. Worth and Wm. Howden.
Auditors—Mrsars. Charles Lacheur and R. E. Clarke.

Many votes of thanks were passed including Mr. F. H. Dawson, the retiring People's Warden, and the workers of the various branches of Church activity.

The matter of the completion of the Church was then discussed. It was announced that the contracts for the work would be proceeded with as soon as the weather permitted. Much interest was displayed by those present and it was very evident that the project has the enthusiastic support of the congregation. All were encouraged by the announcement that the Easter collection had amounted to $911. This will be devoted to the Building Fund.

The meeting closed with the general thanksgiving and the Benediction.

ST. JOHN'S.

The Easter vestry meeting of St. John's Church last night was more largely attended than it has been in years. The Rev. Canon Davidson occupied the chair, with Messrs. Ritchie and Morphet and Vestry Clerk W. H. Walkey at the table.

Reports were read from the Bible classes, the three branches of the Women's Auxiliary, the Chancel Guild and the ChurchWoman's Association. The reports from all these departments showed that much had been accomplished during the year.

Mr. C. E. Jamieson reported for the Sunday school and Mr. R. J. Devey for the choir. This last report evoked a vote of thanks to the members of the choir and much appreciation of the high standard of singing maintained in the Church. Attention was drawn to the unsatisfactory condition of the Church organ and a committee was appointed to take immediate steps to put it in thorough repair.

Mr. H. W. Morphet presented the financial statement for the year, which showed increased receipts, especially from envelope subscriptions, and a substantial balance was carried forward. It was pointed out that this balance would be required for the imperative future needs of the Church. Mr. Ritchie, Rector's Warden, seconded the report.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer reported in regard to the missionary contributions which had been very largely increased during the past year. The Missionary committee was re-appointed for this work during the ensuing year. Much praise was given by both wardens and others to the leaders of the 'Every Member Canvass for the splendid results obtained.

Nearly $200 had been paid from the various poor funds of the Church for provisions, gifts and loans. That is a larger sum than has ever before been devoted by the Church to that purpose.

A vote of thanks to the retiring warden, Mr. H. W. Morphet, was passed. Mr. J. J. Howden was appointed Rector's Warden and Mr. Hazen Ritchie was appointed People's Warden. The delegates appointed to represent this parish in the senate were Messrs. W. T. Johnston, Joseph Mills and G. A Smith.

The meeting was a most harmonious and gratifying one.

ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

The annual meeting of St. George's vestry was held last night in the School room, with a large attendance Rev. J. Price, the Rector, presided. Mr. Fred Holmes was elected People's Warden, and Mr. Herman Wilson, Rector's Warden. Those chosen for sidesmen were Messrs. Jay, Lee Cooper and Harry Rew. The meeting was adjourned for two weeks to allow the Auditors to inspect the accounts.

Easter Pictures Decorate The Bill Boards

Interesting Article From the Sunday School Leader Concerning a Movement That Was Inaugurated Last Christmas

On the bill board last Christmas, many people were surprised and pleased to see large pictures of the Christmass story upon the bill boards of our city. And now at Easter time, the beautiful Resurrection picture appears.

It is fitting that the public should know something of this new movement on the part of the Poster Advertising Association which calls forth the gratitude of all lovers of child life. The following from the "Sunday School Leader" explains:

In a discussion at one of the sessions of the convention of the National Poster Advertising Association, held last July at Atlantic City, one of the delegates told of the effect a certain picture had upon his life which he saw in his boyhood days. He never forgot that picture. He recommended that pictures that were suggestive of evil should be eliminated from the billboards and that some pictures be shown that would inspire the people of the country to better living. His recommendation was incorporated in a resolution providing for an educational committee with power and money to carry out the suggestion for uplift pictures.

The committee decided that the first poster should be one bearing a Christmas message. Designs from artists were called for. Edward Volkert, of Cincinnati, submitted the design most suitable, and was commissioned to execute it, which he did. Six hundred dollars was paid him for his work. The posters were printed in twelve colours and distributed to the members of the Poster Advertising Association and by them posted on billboards in 3,700 towns and cities in the United States and Canada. Two hundred to three hundred were posted in each of the larger cities. The expense for posting them was borne by the local members in each town.

"Such a campaign of poster advertising would cost any private advertiser approximately $60,000," said Herbert T. Duce, of the Poster Advertising Association. "It was done by the association as a result of the recommendation of certain of the members who are religiously inclined and who believed that persons could be reached with a religious message on the billboards who were not being reached by the churches."

It was indeed a religious message. The picture shows the Christ child in the arms of Mary. Joseph is at her side. On the left are grouped the shepherds bringing lambs as gifts, and on the right are shown the three wise men bearing their gifts. Outside through the darkness shines the star of Bethlehem. In the lower right-hand corner is the inscription, "Ask your Sunday-school teacher to tell you the story." Below it all is a facsimile of a brass plate with the explanatory Bible verse: "And when they were come into the house they saw the young child with Mary, his mother, and fell down and worshipped Him."—Matt. 2:11.

The firm in Toronto which is a member of the Poster Advertising Association is the E. L. Ruddy Co., with branches in many of the principal cities of Canada. The Leader office was advised, doubtless in common with many other organizations by the E. L. Ruddy Company of the coming of the Christmas picture. At the first opportunity, after the appearance of the picture, our Central Executive were very enthusiastic, and unanimously expressed its appreciation on behalf of the Sunday school force of Ontario by this move, and indicated the fact that the E. L. Ruddy Company, to which communication there came a prompt, courteous and warm reply. We are glad to give these facts to the public. Not all corporations are soulless. It would be well if the Poster Advertising Association, in addition to contemplating further use of this same kind of the available billboards, would also be careful, as they are in some cases, that nothing of an injurious character be allowed to appear.

Queen's Alumnae Annual Meeting

Local Young Lady Elected a Councillor of the Association in Connection With Kingston College

The Alumnae Association of Queen's University, Kingston, met in the English class-room in the Arts building on Friday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. John Macgillivary, of Kingston, in the chair. The secretary reported that the association had 160 paid members and that efforts were being made to publish a proper directory. The reports of the treasurer, Miss M. Redden, and the convener of the residence committee, Miss C. F. Macl[illegible] Dow, that the total subscription to the residence fund had now reached $20,000, and of this $16,000 had already been paid. In the last year three large subscriptions had been received, $2,000 from Lord Strathcona, $1,400 from Mrs. R. W. Leonard, of St. Catharines, and $1,000 from Dr. Milton Hersey, of Montreal.

In the absence of Mrs. R. J. Hutcheon, convenor of the committee on household science, the report was read by Miss Della Stuart, of Ottawa. It showed that the majority of progressive universities had a faculty of household science, and closed with the recommendation that such a faculty be organized at Queen's and that the association keep the matter before it until it could be made a practical issue.

A solo was then given by Mrs. H. T. J. Coleman, after which an address on the "Value and Importance of Residential Life to University Students," was given by Mrs. M. E. F. Addison, B.A., dean of Annesley Hall, Victoria College, Toronto. She dealt with the subject from a practical standpoint, drawing upon her years of experience and her many opportunities for observation both in Britain and the United States.

The meeting then adjourned to the "Red Room," where high tea was served, after which the election of the following officers for the ensuing year was announced: President, Mrs. John Macgillivray; vice-presidents, Mrs. J. C. Cooper, Toronto; Mrs. H. A. Lavell, Kingston; Miss M. Gordon, Kingston; secretary, Miss J. Muir, Ottawa; treasurer, Miss M. Redden, Kingston; councillors, Miss M. Robertson, Peterborough; Miss Etta Henderson, Kingston; Miss M. Shortt, Ottawa; Miss D. M. Stuart, Ottawa; Miss E. L. Mowat, Kingston; Miss H. McIntosh, Morrisburg; Mrs. S. Burns, Brockville.

Youths Operated In Gravenhurst And Omemee

OMEMEE, April 10.—The two youths, Smith and Wilson, who burglarized some of Lindsay's stores last week, spent Wednesday night in Sturgeon Street Station of our town. They had unlocked the building and the oil house and were around when Mr. J. H. Hayes, agent, reported for duty about 7 a.m. After the agent arrived, the youths returned for a pair of mittens they had forgotten and were interrogated by the officer, who could not get any incriminating evidence from them.

GRAVENHURST, April 10.—Chief Sloan has been in communication with Chief Chilton of Lindsay regarding the burglars who visited here on Saturday evening, March 28th.

Chief Sloan sent in the number of Miss Fielding's watch, and has received word that the watch is among others which were recovered with the capture of the gang at Peterborough, after going through five Lindsay stores.

It is also understood that some of the goods taken from Yeats Bros.' store have also been recovered, although it is not definitely known how

IT NEVER RAINS BUT IT POURS

Father Loses Sight of Eye and Soon After Son Suffers Similar Accident

As John McManus was driving through the woods the other day a small branch of a tree was caught in some portion of the harness without his noticing it, and upon its liberation sprung back and struck him in the face across both eyes with such force as to completely destroy the sight in one eye and to severely injure the other.

Upon consulting a physician he was recommended to go at once to Toronto Hospital for treatment.

To add to this great misfortune, the next day after Mr. McManus went to the hospital, his son William had one of his eyes nearly destroyed by the bursting of a gun when he was shooting a crow.—Newcastle Independent.

Augusta Honours Major Butt

Special to The Examiner:

AUGUSTA, Co., April 14. — The tribute of his home was paid to Major Archibald W. Butt to-day. The memory of Augusta's distinguished son and hero was honoured in a way to be remembered by the thousands of citizens who gathered at 15th and Greene Streets to witness the dedication of the elaborate bridge erected there as a memorial to their noble fellow townsman who met a heroic death in the Titanic disaster two years ago to-day. The exercises were conducted under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Georgia. Former President Taft, whom Major Butt served as personal aid, delivered the address of the day. Dr. M. Ashby Jones presented the bridge to the city in the name of the Archibald Butt Memorial Association. Patriotic societies, regular troops and militia detachments from Georgia and South Carolina participated in the ceremonies. A distinguished delegation from Washington also was present.

A MATTER OF OMISSION

In The Examiner notice of the presentation of Stainer's "Crucifixion," mention was inadvertently omitted, of, among the soloists, the name of Mr. George Chandler, choirmaster of All Saints. He sang severol solos and appeard to specially good effect in "King Ever Glorious." This explanation is due to one of the best soloists in the city.

Offer Terms To The Townships

Messrs T. F. Matthews (chairman), R. Hicks and W. H. Moore were present at the meeting of the Water Commissioners yesterday afternoon.

At the meeting it was decided to have an agreement prepared to be entered into with the Henry Hope and Sons for the water supply to their factory, with a minimum rate of $60 a year.

Mr. Fawcett reported that water was running into the cellar of Mr. John Hutchinson's residence at 478 Mark Street. He was instructed to have the water taken from the cellar and the defect remedied. He also reported that, according to the regular tariff, Mr. G. W. Hatton should pay a rate of $31.80 per annum. It was decided to instruct the collector to charge Mr Hatton that amount without discount, as his residence is not in the City.

A letter was read from Mr. E. H. D. Hall regarding the claim of the Township of Smith for stone removed from the River Road. The secretary was instructed to write the Township Council that the Commissioners will retain ten cords of the stone and give up any claim to the balance provided the Township pays the cost of the removal of the stone and of the drawing of the earth which was used to fill the holes caused by the removal of the stone.

A letter from the Hamilton Realty Co. was read from Mr. E. H. D. Hall regarding the petition for the extension of water mains. The superintendent was instructed to make an estimate of the cost of the work and the frontage rate on the property to pay the cost.

The Peterborough Cricket Club wrote asking for water for Nicholls Oval. As this was a matter for the Nicholls Park Trustees no action was taken, but the secretary was instructed to reply to the club to that effect.

Special Services Are Concluded

Last night was the closing service in connection with the Salvation Army Anniversary, which has been conducted with such great success during the past five days. It took the form of a young people's service. As has been usual, since the services were commenced, the Temple was crowded to the doors. The special feature was the floral cross. The decorations, singing, and other manifestations of a duteous service, created strong impressions on the minds of those present.

Each girl present last night was decorated with flowers, and in procession they walked to the cross, and deposited a wreath of flowers on the wooden structure. Appropriate hymns were sung while these ceremonies were being conducted. When the cross was completed the hymn "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," was rendered, while two little girls were strewing flowers around the cross. This was a very fitting close to the anniversary. In the opinion of several citizens the services that have been conducted during the past week have been the most successful that have ever been held in connection with the army in Peterborough.

The attentions of Army workers are now being turned toward the self-denial week, for the Canadian territory, which commence on Sunday next.

MEDICAL SOCIETY HELD DINNER

Last night the Peterborough Medical Society held a dinner in Coleman's Palm Parlours. Dr. Hammond presided, and affairs of interest to the local physicians were discussed.

DEBATE WILL LAST TEN DAYS

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 14.—The Budget debate is likely to continue for ten days, and Borden will probably be back in time for the division on the amendment as to C.N.R. aid proposals. This important legislation, as well as the dissolution in the House of the Redistribution Bill, will go over until May. Government members are hopeful that by working under high pressure the House may rise by May 24, but the Opposition members say it is impossible to reach prorogation before June, and perhaps not until the middle of July.

CANAL DEPUTATION

Special Wire to The Examiner:

HOUSE OF COMMONS, OTTAWA, April 14.— Owing to the size of the Georgian Bay canal delegation which is to wait upon the government tomorrow, it is likely that it will be received in the Railway Committee room In the absence of Premier Borden, a reply will be made by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Acting Premier, while Hon. Robt. Rogers, as Minister of Public Works, is likely to say something. The deputation will undoubtedly be told that no definite announcement as to the canal is to be expected until the commission recently appointed, has made a report to parliament.

FISHER WILL NOT BE A CANDIDATE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 14.—Hon. Sydney Fisher this morning characterized as "absolute nonsense," the report that he is to be the Liberal candidate in Jacquer Cartier county to fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Hon. F. D. Monk from public life. Mr. Fisher added that he had never been approached in regard to this matter.

609 Flour Mills

The Northwestern Miller, having completed its annual census of the milling capacity of Canada, supplies the very latest figures showing number and capacityt of flour and oatmeal mills, in all provinces of the Dominion. The figures given below show the state of the milling industry on January 1, 1914. Assembled in tabular form, the results of this census by provinces follows:

Flour Mills.

	1914. Number mills.	Barrels daily.
Nova Scotia	31	800
New Brunswick	47	1,600
Prince Edward Is.	20	600
Quebec	26	14,500
Ontario	347	62,500
Manitoba	52	16,500
Saskatchewan	39	7,500
Alberta	31	7,000
British Columbia	6	1,000
Totals	609	112,000
1912	634	111,200

Oatmeal Mills.

	Number mills.	Barrels daily.
1914	15	6,075
1913	14	6,715

Of the flour milling capacity shown, 62,000 barrels per day lies east of the great lakes, and 50,000 barrels west of that natural division.

Commercial Mills.

In arriving at these figures, a number of small mills that usually appear in the directories as flour mills, have been left out of the calculations and a few western mills that have been shut down so long as to be practically useless have also been eliminated. In some cases mills that are not running have been counted, as they are capable of making flour on short notice should occasion arise. It will be seen that Canada is undergoing much the same experience as the United States with respect to its flour milling industry. The number of mills is being rapidly reduced, while the grinding capacity is increasing. This simply means that the large commercial mills are driving the small and old-fashioned ones out of business. This process is economically sound and must continue.

30 per Cent Exported.

Of the total capacity shown, fifteen companies own 64,000 barrels and several of these are almost too small to be classed as of major importance. The remainder are all single plant concerns of less than 500 barrels daily capacity. Many have less than 100 barrels daily and operate only a part of each year. The total output of flour per annum from Canadian mills is about 75,000,000 barrels, of which 30 per cent. is exported, besides a considerable quantity of the by-products.

Auto for Chief.

The Fort William Council have decided to provide the fire chief of that city with a motor car, the price not to exceed $700.

MINISTER OF LABOUR ILL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 14.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, is still confined to his room with erysipilas. At one time his condition was quite serious. On account of the prolonged illness of the Minister a number of amendments which he proposed to make to the Lemieux Act in the interests of labour will be deferred until next session.

MINOR LEAGUES GET UNDER WAY THIS AFTERNOON

Examiner Special:

Southern League.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 14. — The Southern League started on its fourteenth season today, with Memphis playing in Chattanooga, Mobile at Birmingham, New Orleans at Montgomery and Nashville meeting the Atlanta champions in this city. The league circuit is the same as last season. Five of the eight teams have new managers and in addition there are many new players on the rolls.

Texas-Oklahoma League Starts.

SHERMAN, Texas, April 14.—Today marked the opening of the championship season in the Texas-Oklahoma baseball league. In the initial games Texarkana appeared in Bonham, Ardomer at Hugo, Denison at Paris and Duarte at Sherman. The schedule calls for a season of 126 games, with August 16 as the closing date.

American Association Opening.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 14. — While major league cohorts are absorbed in the initial play in their respective circuits, the fans of the American Association to-day have their long-anticipated opportunity. It is the thirteenth season for the association and all indications point to a spirited pennant race. The circuit remains the same as last season with the exception that the Toledo club has been transferred to Cleveland. Several changes have made among the team managers and many new faces are to be seen among the players. William Armour, former Detroit manager, has succeeded Charlie Carr as manager of the Kansas City club. Jack Hendricks has taken Mike Kelley's place as pilot of the Indianapolis aggregation. The Cleveland team has been placed in charge of Jim Sheckard, formerly of the Cubs. In today's opening games Columbus plays at Louisville, Minneapolis at Kansas City, St. Paul at Milwaukee and Cleveland in this city. The season's schedule calls for 168 games, closing September 27.

Lacrosse Booming At Havelock

Examiner Special:

HAVELOCK, April 13.—The citizens of town were very pleased to learn of the election of Percy Lancaster, of town, to the Council of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association at the annual convention of that body in Toronto on Good Friday. Mr. Lancaster, who is editor of the Havelock Standard, was active in amateur lacrosse some years ago, and was a member of the old Havelock aggregation in its palmy days. He has been a keen backer of the recent movement to bring the game back into greater popularity throughout Ontario, and is well deserving of a position on the council of the association, and with his knowledge of lacrosse should prove a valuable member to that body. The Toronto daily papers commented favourably on his name previous to the elections, the Toronto Daily News of the 9th inst. carrying a fine cut of him, and recommending him for a position on the council. His election will cause more enthusiasm to be taken in the game by supporters in Havelock.

Havelock Organizes for Lacrosse.

As a result of the meeting held here to organize a local lacrosse team, which was graced by the presence of Frank Doyle, the secretary of the O.A.L.A., Havelock is becoming quite enthusiastic over the prospects for the game in Havlock during the coming season. IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

CANADIAN LEAGUE MAY HAVE CLASS "B" RATING YET

President James Fitzgerald of the Canadian League is still hopeful of securing a Class B rating for his circuit. Word was received from the President that the National Commission was still awaiting the population statements from Secretary Farrell, of the National Association of Minor Leagues, and that he had received a letter from the commission to that effect.

President Garry Hermann of the National Commission has sent word to Canadian League managers that a special meeting will be held some time this week and that an effort will be made to settle the rating of the Canadian League.

President Fitzgerald said the letter he received from the commission, while it did not say definitely that the Canadian League would receive the higher rating, was most encouraging, and stated that the commission would investigate the matter thoroughly. An answer is expected this week end.

Andy Kyle, who was supposed to be a London star in 1911 and who went from the Canadian League to Columbus in the American Association, and who was playing last year with New Orleans in the Southern League, is a free agent. Kyle's average of .194 at bat is doubtless responsible for the comeback to the Canadian League, and it is doubtful if he would hit any more than .194 in this league. Brantford has a chance to get him and it is up to Rube Deneau, but owing to Rube's aversion to anything which goes up and then drifts back, it is scarcely likely that he will take Kyle on the Red Sox pay-roll. The chances are that Kyle will find a berth on the Toronto team and play with his home town. Kyle is a left fielder.

Chattanooga have a string on short stop Brant and it is unlikely that Fort Wayne would be able to turn him over to the Senators, even if the Champs. were after him. — Ottawa Journal.

Ball Team Gathering At Youngstown To-day--First Practice To-morrow

There is nothing new at baseball headquarters this morning and the fans will have to wait until the first despatches from the front filter in. If Manager Blunt's instructions are carried out, the Petes will be coming from all directions to-day, headed for Youngstown. The honour of coming from the farthest north goes to Pitcher Stan Cresswell, Catcher Chapdelaine from New Bedford, comes the furthest from the east, Knut Belting is the western representative, and Chas. King is the southern delegate. Cresswell left on the 8.25 G.T.R. train this morning, and should reach Youngstown at 8 o'clock to-night.

Manager Blount expects the majority of his squad in to-night and he will have them at work to-morrow morning.

Federal League Draws 27,000 People At Its Opening Game

BALTIMORE, April 13.—Baltimore to-day celebrated its reappearance into the major leagues by a delirious baseball frenzy that has not been seen here since the old four-time champions returned in 1904 after a triumphal western tour, bringing their first pennant with them.

Oven twenty-seven thousand wild-eyed fans overcrowded the stands and filled all the available space in the field to give the Terrapins an encouraging start in the race for the Federal League championship.

The Governor of the State, the Mayor of Batimore, the Mayor of Buffalo, and President James A. Gilmore, Charles Weeghman of Chicago, R. B. and George S.Ward of Brooklyn were present.

The Terrapins responded to the grand ovation they received from the fans by winning their first game by the close score of 3 to 2, which would have been a shut-out but for an ignominous muff by Simmons in eift field that let in the only two runs to the credit of the Buffalo team. The Maryland State Legislature proclaimed a half holiday for the occasion.

Benny Meyer, the former Toronto player, who jumped to the new league, struck out in his first three appearances at the plate, but singled on his fourth. Mayor Preston tossed out the first ball put into play. When the gates were opened at 11 o'clock four hours before the game began, there were 5,000 persons waiting. Though theer were numerous errors on both sides, the game abounded in brilliant plays.

BOXING

The lid will be taken off boxing in Pittsburgh on April 24, when Gus Christie and Buck Crouse meet in that City.

Freddie Welch, the English lightweight champion, is doing some real work in training for his bout with Leach Cross.

There is little prospect of another meeting between Georges Carpentier and Joe Jeannette, as Jeannette refuses to make weight for any boxer.

Some of the London papers are panning the American and Australian boxers for introducing fake bouts in England and South Africa.

Ad Wolgast has been offered a match with Red Watson, the bout to take place in San Francisco. Watson recently held Gilbert Gallant to a 20-round draw.

BIG LEAGUE PRESIDENTS CONFIDENT

NEW YORK, April 13.—On the eve of the major league baseball season the executives and magnates of the American and National leagues predict another six months of exciting pennant races and general prosperity. Organized baseball, ignoring the invasion of its field by the newly-formed Federal group of owners and players, reiterates its faith in the loyalty of its followers and the standard of the game as played by its clubs.

Both President Ban Johnson, of the American League, and President John K. Tener, of the National League, in outlining the prospects of their respective organizations for the 1914 season, express the belief that organized baseball will receive the confidence and support accorded it by the devotees of the game in past years. In fact, optimism, harmony and enthusiasm appear to be the words of the hour of the major leagues, as represented by their presidents a few hours before the initial contests of the new baseball year.

President Johnson, as the spokesman for the American League, states:

"I think the quality of ball to be played this year will equal or exceed that of the past. The Philadelphia Athletics naturally command the greatest respect because of their pennant and the world's series victories, but several other clubs must be given serious consideration by those attempting to name the winner in advance.

"Washington and Boston are clubs of known strength. Chicago appears to have found new men of exceptional value. Cleveland has not been seriously crippled by the Federal League invasion but the accidents to Chapman and Leebold will interfere materially with its success in the early part of the season. Detroit has developed two or three players of splendid promise, and both Jennings and Navin are highly elated over the prospects of the team. Chance is very hopeful of making a splendid showing in the race this year, and I am very much encouraged over the prospects of the New York club. St. Louis has one of the best pitching staffs in the league and a little hitting strength behind this pitching will make the Browns dangerous against any club."

President Tener, as representative of the National League, expressed similar sentiments as follows:

"At the very best, baseball predictions are no more than precarious judgments. So many unforseen and uncertain elements enter into a baseball championship that it is not only futile, but foolish, to estimate the relative playing strength of eight clubs and attempt to forecast their position at the end of the season.

"Generally speaking, I am well pleased over the outlook in the National League and for organized baseball everywhere for the season of 1914. I have not been in receipt of a report from a single club owner that has contained a pessimistic tone. Optimism is the prevailing spirit in the National League, and I may say the same for organized ball in general as I interpret the feeling from the voluminous correspondence carried on by the National commission with the many minor league organizations and clubs.

"Basing a judgment upon the paper personnel of the different National League clubs, it seems to me that several have been strengthened by the addition of new players and by trades and I think that the competition will be keen in our organizations this season. With the probable exception of one club, I believe every team in the National League is stronger this year than in 1913, and, if I am not mistaken in my judgment on this point, this condition will naturally produce a good, even, stirring fight for the pennant."

Y.M.C.A. Basketball Team Were Beaten At Belleville

The Y.M.C.A. Basketball team were beaten in Belleville on Saturday night by 41 points to 25, the Belleville aggregation thus winning both games of the inter-city series. The Peterborough Y started out at a whirl-wind clip, having the score 14 to 0 before Belleville scored. At this stage Long wrenched his knee and was lame for the rest of the game. The Belleville team finished strong. By half time they were a basket ahead leading at half time by 17 to 15, and in the second half they increased their lead. The Peterborough team were:

Backs—Cunningham, Darling.
Centre—Flowers.
Forwards—Knapman, Long.

DUBBY SHEA FOR WOODSTOCK

WOODSTOCK, April 12.—Jimmie Bradley, who is to manage the Woodstock baseball team this year, was in the city on Saturday, and said that he had secured Dubby Shea, a catcher and infielder. He played with Peterborough in the Canadian League last year.

Bradley also stated that he was in communication with two pitchers and an infielder, whom he expected to secure for Woodstock. He also said that he had a working agreement with Rube Deneau, manager of the Brantford Red Sox, whereby he would have first call on all of the Brantford cast-offs.

COCKNEYS LOSE TO IRONTON

IRONTON, O., April 13. — The local Ohio State League Baseball team out-lucked the London Tecumsehs here yesterday and won by 5 to 4 in an 11-inning battle, in which no less than 27 men participated.

"Doc" Reisling's youngsters led throughout the game, but were found with the score tie at the end of the eighth, and on a single by a "rookie" pitcher in the final inning won the tustle. Although London secured one more hit than the locals, they did not bang the ball as opportunely as the Ironton men.

The game was graced by the presence of Charlie Hickman and Bill Doyle, two American League scouts, who are conducting a baseball school at Portsmouth, Ohio. Hickman umpired the game satisfactorily. His presence here with Manager Reisling signifies a great deal, as these two former big leaguers are old cronies, and a probable interchange of players during the coming season will lend the London club an advantage.

Random Ravings

The Peterborough Baseball Club will now proceed to put Youngstown (Ohio) on the map.

When you see a heading nowadays "Victory for the Feds" you don't know whether it refers to war or baseball. There is a certain amount of the Mexican stuff about it, anyway.

The Peterborough Ball Club left the South this morning. The Club consisted of Pitcher Cresswell and fifteen uniforms.

The preacher who argued on Sunday that there is no hell never saw a home batter hit into a double play in the ninth innings with three on the bases and three runs needed to win.

"When the roll is called at Erie, who'll be there?"

At Youngstown.

Before the haughty manager
The trembling rookies stand.
A few may there secure a berth,
But the rest'll all be canned.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

ST. THOMAS, April 13.—At last, after many weeks of searching, the St. Thomas Baseball Club have secured a classy first baseman. A deal was put through to-day whereby Mills, the man Manager Craven has been dickering for with Ducky Holems, Saginaw, became the property of the St. Thomas Club. Mills' home is in Lacrosse, Wis., and is 22 years of age. He is a player of great promise. Last season he was with the Madison Club of the Wisconsin-Illinois League, and in 124 games he batted for an average of .264, including 15 home runs and 24 doubles. He stood third in fielding first sackers, with an average of .982, having only fourteen errors. At the close of last season the Saginaw Club purchased him from Madison, believing "Tate," their regular first base guardian, was going to quit the game. However, as the latter decided to join the club again this season, Manager Holmes sold Mills to Craven. It is expected he will join the club at Charlette in a few days. The other four men that had been signed up for a trial at the initial sack will not be asked to report. These include Brundage, of Chatham; Lamb of Toledo, and Coburn of Boston. It has also been decided to release Catcher Barton. "Midge" is hot on the trail of another third baseman. If he succeeds in landing this fellow, Trailkill and Hess, with the new man, will fight it out for Eddie Wright's shoes.

Ottawa Free Press—Manager Frank Shaughnessy left last night for a trip through the Middle States in search of a shortstop and pitcher. He goes first to Detroit, where he will confer with President Frank Navin, of the American League club of that city, then proceed to Fort Wayne. He meets Pitcher Hall in Fort Wayne tomorrow and will put him to work with the Central League club of that place. While at Fort Wayne Shag hopes to get a good shortstop. He has two men in view there, one being Frankie Nespo, who side-stepped the Senators last year and had a brilliant season with Fort Wayne. A third short-stopper in view is with the Indianapolis club of the American Association. The Ottawa manager is certain he will land the right man for the job. It may be two infielders will be picked up on the Central or A A circuits and brought back to Chatham next Monday. Frank Smejkal's weak hitting makes him an uncertainty at second and he may have to battle for the position with an experienced keystone sacker.

While Shag has a better pitching staff right now than he had during the whole of last year, he still seeks another man of Rogers' and Hall's stamp. In fact the Senators will have five regular hurlers on their staff this season. Training camp opens next Monday morning and in addition to the men already under contract, several recruits and the men Shaughnessy will bring along will make a total of two dozen or more who will register at Hotel Sanita.

The Calf.

He was one of those fresh young men, given to the use of table slang. At the breakfast table, desiring the milk, he exclaimed:

"Chase the cow down this way, please."

"Here, Jane," said the boarding house mistress, "take the cow down to where the calf is bawling."

BASEBALL

Since he joined the Cubs Bill Sweeney, the former Boston Brave, has hit well over the .300 mark in the practice games.

The New York Giants will meet Jack Dunn's Orioles in Baltimore on April 13th, the day the Federals will start their season in that City.

Johhn Eevers, who takes Bill Sweeney's place at second base, will also assume Bill's former duties as Captain of the Boston Braves.

Manager Callahan was somewhat disgruntled over the condition of Outfielder Ping Bodie who reported to the White Sox some 15 or 20 pounds overweight.

Washington scribes have already figured out how the Senatorial infield, composed of Candil, Morgan, McBride and Foster will rival the 'peerless four' of the Athletics this season.

Rumour has it that the Western League is figuring on putting a team in Kansas City, the team to play on the American Association grounds while the A. A. team is on the road.

Manager Jennings announces that Ty Cobb will be No. 3, instead of No. 4 in the Detroit batting order this season. Ty did his best work as No. 3 man, several years ago.

Zulu Zilz, not a Sandwich Islander but a German, is trying out for the outfield with the Kalamazoo South Michigan League team. Zulu Zilz andKalamazoo: There's some poetry in that combination.

It is said that the Philadelphia Nationals recently turned down an offer of $6,000 cash for Outfielder Josh Devore. Josh must be improving, as the Phillies secured him last year from Cincinnati at the waiver prices.

Ralph Capron, former University of Minnesota star, and later a Pittsburgh Pirate, has reported to Jack Dunn's Baltimore Internationals.

Pitcher Ruth, the youngster who has been beating big league teams so handily for Jack Dunn's Baltimore Orioles, is just out of college.

The New York Yankees pulled considerable first division stuff in the practice games and it is now up to the Chance clan to continue the good work.

Miner Brown, the boss of the St. Louis Federals, steps up to the plate and says as how he has the best team in St. Louis. If the Browns and Cardinals are as bad as that there is no hope for St. Loo.

RECORD MARCH FOR DE LAVAL SEPARATORS

Largest Sales of Cream Separators for Any March in the History of the Co.

It is learned on good authority that last months record of sales of De Laval cream separators was the largest of any March sales in the history of the company. When the enormous sales of this separator in the past is taken into account, this splendid result must be exceedingly gratifying to the company, as it also should be to Peterborough citizens, who will feel naturally interested in anything that pertains to the growth and prosperity of the local branch of the De Laval factories and offices established here.

It has generally been thought that the farmer had been feeling the pinch of hard times all winter, but the above would indicate that hard times or no hard times, they can't do without the De Laval cream separator. In this connection, it may be mentioned that although the products of the De Laval Dairy Supply Company are sold almost exclusively to farmers, through county dealers, to might be htought that any kind of printed matter was good enough for the farmer as long as it had "big black type and lots of red ink." But for years this company has proceeded upon the theory that the farmer really appreciates attractive booklets, and catalogues, and that the De Laval's high grade printed matter, in a subtle sort of way, helps to convey the idea of the De Laval superiority.

Too many advertising men, when buying printed matter, think only of the fact that they are buying so many thousand circulars or folders, and are inclined to lose sight of the fact that what they are really trying to buy is a favourable impression of the article which they have to sell. The high quality of printing which the De Laval Company furnish must prove a very great help in securing sales.

HON. ADAM BECK HAS REFUSED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 14.—It is asserted that Hon. Adam Beck, who has the refusal of the High Commissionership at London, has definitely informed the government that he has no desire for it. The persistency with which the name of Sir Richard is mentioned by the press of his own province, makes it practically certain that the B. O. premier is anxious to go to London, and that pressure is being brought upon the government to appoint him. It is stated that Premier Borden, who went to Virginia the day before the House rose for the Easter recess, will not be back in Ottawa until the end of the month.

An Idle Wish.

I wish I were a millionaire,
Engaged in coupon chipping;
I wish my prospects all were fair—
Ah, wouldn't that be ripping!
I wish I might be wealthy and
Could hold some high position;
But somewhere in this favoured land
A boy, with worms all safely canned,
Is blithely "goin' fishin'."

I wish I might be rich and great,
Without a care to fret me;
I'd like to guide the ship of state,
If other men would let me.
But at my desk I toil away,
Urged by a hard condition;
And somewhere in this land to-day
A boy, with worms lured from the clay,
Is blithely "gain' fishin'."

How futile are the wishes which
Within my mind are lurking!
I am not great, I am not rich,
I have to keep on working.
I long for wealth and fame; but, oh!
I cannot keep from wishin'
I were the boy who gets the hoe
And digs the worms he needs to go
"Down to the crick a-fishin'."
—S. E. Kiser in Judge.

It will be found a simple matter to mend a hole in a small boy's trousers pocket if a darning egg is slipped into the pocket and the darning done over it.

STUDENT STRIKE FAILS.

Insurrection of Ottawa University Men Suddenly Collapses.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Three hundred students of Ottawa University, back from the Easter vacation, paraded the streets of the city yesterday morning and refused to enter their class rooms as a protest against the banishment of Father James Fallon, prefect of studies, by the Oblate Order. None of the English-speaking students, of whom there are over four hundred, resumed their studies, and everything was at a standstill when the strike came to a sudden end, and instead of sending a committee of protest they sent a committee of apology. A probe is in prospect.

It had been announced that Father Fallon was to be succeeded by a French priest, Father Lajeunesse, that the English-speaking students demand a successor of their own nationality, Irish, and one of the cries of the students as they marched through the streets yesterday morning was "We Want Father Murphy." Father Stephen Murphy is a teacher of the college, and one of the objects of the strike was to have him promoted to succeed Father Fallon, who, of course, it is realized, will not be brought back.

Monaghan Council Passes Resolution to That Effect—Orders Sheriff to Take Them Away—Week's Show for Ball Club

M. H. O. GETS INCREASE

The North Monaghan Council held an all-day session at the Court House on April 13th, when all the members were present, Reeve Howden presiding.

Mr. Geo. Gillespie, on behalf of the Peterborough Industrial Association, asked for a license to hold a small show on the Fair grounds for one week, beginning July 6, the show to be Leon Washburn's Summer Carnival, and the proceeds to be used in the interests of the exhibition. Mr. Gillespie asked for a low license fee and said they might have a second show.

Moved by Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Doubin, that Mr. Gillespie's request on behalf of the Exhibition for a license be granted and that the sum fixed for the license fee be $10 for one week per show.—Carried.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, on behalf of the Peterborough Baseball Club, asked for a license for a show coming this summer and intending to show at the Carpet Co. grounds. The show will be there for one week and the proceeds will be used for the Peterborough Baseball Club.

Mr. Bradburn asked for a moderate license fee, and the following license fee was fixed by resolution: Moved by Mr. Robson, seconded by Mr. Young, that the Club be granted a license for a small show for one week, the license fee to be $10.

Must Remove Chattels.

The Reeve reported that certain chattels formerly owned by Thos. Harrison had been placed on the public highway and the same should be removed. Moved by Mr. Robson and seconded by Mr. Dobbin that Mr. Peck, Township Solicitor, give the sheriff notice in writing to remove the Harrison chattels off the public highways on two days' notice.

Moved by Messrs. Robson and Dobbin, that the Sanitary Inspector be paid his salary of $50, under By-law 672.

A communication was received from Wm. Sutherland, Orpington Road, complaining that certain parties had been driving along the grass at the roadside spoiling the footpath. No action taken.

The matter of the salary of the M. H.O. was then dealt with. Moved by Messrs. Dobbin and Robson that the salary of the M.H.O. be $50 instead of $100 as paid last year.

The assessor and the tax collector were both present and the question of Mr. Brooks' taxes on property on Western Avenue, was fully discussed and dealt with. Mr. Brooks was not present and had not appealed to the Court of Revision. There was no apparent error in the assessment or in the taxes so the Council considered that they had no power now to make any change.

Mr. Geo. W. Bennett's Address.

Mr. Geo. W. Bennett, Superintendent of Colonization Roads, and past clerk of the township, was present. Mr. Bennett in his interview with the Council expressed the policy and ideas that the government had gathered from all over the world in road construction and which it wishes to impress on municipalities desiring to participate in the grants from the government under by-law or otherwise. Mr. Bennett being quite familiar with local conditions, dealt mostly with the question as it affected this township and gave a lot of valuable pointers to the Council as to the best methods of how to proceed. The Reeve in reply thanked Mr Bennett for his instructive talk on road building."

Mr. Howden also thanked Mr. Peck and Mr. Bennett for the very liberal way they used North Monaghan by way of securing a grant for $600 to be used in the purchase of a rock crusher for the township.

Earnest Consideration.

Mr. E. McGregor asked for assistance to the extent of about one half the total cost in putting in a one-foot cement tile in the drain and filling in the same in front of Mr. McGregor's property, where the drain has washed out so deep as to be dangerous to the travelling public.

Mr. McGregor estimated that the length of the drain was about 100 yards. The Council considered this matter and assured Mr. McGregor that they would give this matter earnest consideration.

Build Boat House.

Mr. Arthur Reid asked for permission to build a boat house, partly on the street. Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson that Mr. Reid be given permission to put his boat house on the north-east corner of Lansdowne Street, fifteen feet on the road allowance. Also that he pay a yearly rental of 25 cents for same.

They Sure Will Be.

The assessor brought up the matter of a number of residents applying to him for dog tags. He said that the complaint was that their dogs running into the City without tags were liable to be shot.— No action taken.

A Few Errors.

The collector of taxes reported as follows:

R. P. Scrace, error in assessment, $2.08.

Chamberlain Estate, error in collector's roll, $49.60.

F. Shearer, error in assessment, $3.36.

Henry Calcutt, error in assessment, $3.36.

C. J. Waldron, error in assessment, $3.36.

Geo. H. McClelland, error in assessment, $25.45.

Total, $87.66.

The above amounts, which Mr. McIntosh collected, were added to the total of the collector's roll, together with $24.18 collected through the five per cent. being added after December 20.

Refunded Monies.

Andrew Kent, error in assessment, $2.52.

Carrie Burrett, error in collector's roll, 25 cents.

Senator Cox, error in collector's roll, $1.

Ben. Cunningham, error in collector's roll, 20 cents.

Total $3.92.

The above errors were refunded to parties as per above stated and deducted from the collector's roll. Moved by Messrs. Young and Dobbin, that the collector's report be accepted and that the facts as presented in Mr. McIntosh's final report to the Council be also accepted as per the above statement.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson, that the treasurer be authorized to add 50 cents on to al pay sheet in which there was an error in adding up the total. Also that the 50 cents be charged to Road Division No. 2. The treasurer reported that the overdraft at the Bank of Ottawa is $2,266.58.

A communication was received from City Clerk Armstrong re the boundary account. The following resolution of the City Council was forwarded to the North Monaghan Council: That the City Council be sent in monthly statements of all boundary work performed by this township so as to enable them to have their engineer certify to such accounts.

Grade Western Avenue.

A communication was received from Mr. T. Hurley, asking that Western Avenue be graded from Chamberlain Street north. After discussing the question of opening up new streets, the following resolution was passed unanimously: Moved by Messrs. Young and Dobbin, that all parties interested in applying to the Council for to have new streets opened or streets to be graded or streets requiring filling, must apply to the Council who will pass upon and determine the cost of the work to be performed, and the said parties must deposit with the township treasurer one half the total cost of said work before the same will be proceeded with.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Young and Robson, that the following accounts be passed and paid:

Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., coal and wood re charity	$21.50
Geo. McGregor, one load of stone, Success culvert	2.50
The Municipal World, Pound Act	.25

How the Panama Canal is to be Operated under Control Boards — "The controlling boards are approximately operating miniatures of the locks themselves. They have indicating devices which always show the exact position of valves, lock gates, chains, and water levels in the various lock-chambers, and so far as was necessary are synchronous with the movement of the lock machinery. The side and centre walls of the locks are represented on the board by cast-iron plates, and the water in the locks by blue Vermont marble slabs. The chain-tender index consists of a small aluminum chain representing the larger chain of the lock itself. Just as the large chain is lowered into a slot in the top of the board, so the small chain is lowered into a slot in the top of the board."—Scientific American.

TO CARE FOR TEACHERS.

Superannuation Is On Program For Provincial Legislation.

TORONTO, April 15. — Deputy Minister of Education, Dr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, made an announcement last night at Convocation Hall to the members of the Ontario Educational Association to the effect that a measure dealing with the superannuation of teachers would be introduced at the next session of the Legislature.

The Deputy Minister, in welcoming the association, said that the Minister had been detained in the Legislature, but he had been asked to convey a message to them. It said:

"I have consulted my colleagues, and we have definitely decided to offer a measure dealing with superannuation of teachers at the next session of the Legislature. This measure will necessarily be affected by three considerations at least.

"(1) A certain amount of public indifference on the subject.

"(2) Hostility on the part of a portion of the teaching profession itself.

"(3) The existence upon the statute books of the old fund. Subject to the limitations imposed by these conditions, we shall try to frame a measure just to the teachers and acceptable to the public. Any legislation of this kind must necessarily receive the endorsation of the great body of the parties affected."

"I have nothing further to add," concluded Dr. Colquhoun, "but I regard that as a binding promise, which must be fulfilled."

TO DEMAND SALUTE

U. S. Atlantic Fleet is Ordered into Mexican Waters

COMPLICATIONS MAY ENSUE

WASHINGTON, April 15.— President Wilson yesterday ordered practically the entire Atlantic fleet to Mexican waters to force a public salute to the American flag from the Huerta Government as an apology for the arrest of American marines at Tampico last Thursday.

No ultimatum has been issued, that is, no specified time has been set within which the Huerta Government must comply, but the naval demonstration has been ordered as a concrete evidence of the fixed determination of the United States to back up Rear-Admiral Mayo's demand for a salute. Up to last night Gen. Huerta had not made satisfactory response to that demand.

"Future developments depend upon Huerta himself," was the way a high administration official close to the President summarized the situation.

Forty-six warships and 21,000 men will comprise the force off Tampico.

Everywhere, at the White House, the State Department and the Navy Department, the hope was expressed that the despatch of the fleet would not lead to serious consequences, and there was a confident prediction among Administration officials that Gen. Huerta would see the wisdom of satisfying the American demand and close the incident.

U. S. Soldiers Eager for Action.

FORT BLISS, Texas, April 15.—Coming at the end of three years of watchful waiting on the sand dunes and cactus clumps of the Mexican border, the Tampico incident renewed hope among the units of the United States army here on the border, and nothing was being discussed at the officers' and men's messes last night but the possibilities of a Mexican invasion at last.

One hour is the estimated time it would require to throw the entire Federal force into Juarez, the first point of contact for the army of invasion.

On Verge of Intervention.

LONDON, April 15. — The Daily Mail in an editorial yesterday morning considers that the United States "is on the verge of armed intervention in Mexico, with all its incalculable consequences."

The Post, asking whether President Wilson has lost faith in his policy of watchful waiting, thinks it more than likely that the naval demonstration is intended as a warning to the constitutionalists as well as to Huerta, but that even if Huerta yields and the constitutionalists desist from the destruction of foreign property, the general problem will be no nearer solution. "It is difficult to see," The Post adds, "how intervention can be avoided."

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

"She wronged you—she acknowledges that—but it was the wrong of an unthinking child—not of a realising woman. Would you, a realising man, tear her now from home, from her child, from her place in the community and my heart—make her despicable, as well as unhappy, just to feed your revenge?"

"Yes, I would do that."

"Jeopardise interests you have so often professed in my hearing to be far above personal consideration—the success of your party, the triumph of your political principles?"

"My political principles!" Oh, the irony of his voice, the triumph in his laugh! "And what do you know of them? What have I said, Mayor Packard, your education as a politician has yet to be completed before you will be fit for the governorship of a state. I am an adept at the glorification of the party, of the man that it suits my present exigencies to promote, but it is a faculty which should have made you pause before you trusted me with the furtherance and final success of a campaign which may outlast those exigencies. I have not always been of your party; I am not so now at heart."

The mayor, outraged in every sentiment of honour as well as in the most cherished feelings of his heart, lowered upon his unmoved secretary with a wrath which would have borne down any other man before it.

"Do you mean to say, you, that your work is a traitor's work? That the glorification you speak of is false? That you may talk in my favour, but that when you come to the issue, you will vote according to your heart,—that is, for Stanton?"

"I have succeeded in making myself intelligible."

The mayor flushed; indignation gave him vehemence.

"Then," he cried, "I take back the word by word by which I qualified you a moment ago. You are not a villain, you are a dastard."

Mr. Steele bowed in a way which turned the opprobrium into a seeming compliment.

"I have suffered so many wrongs at your hands that I can not wonder at suffering this one more." Then slowly and with a short look at her: "The woman who has queened it so long in C—— society can not wish to undergo the charge of bigamy?"

"You will bring such a charge?"

"Certainly, if she does not voluntarily quit her false position, and, accepting the protection of the man whose name is really hers, go from this house at once."

At this alternative, uttered with icy deliberation, Mrs. Packard recoiled with a sharp cry; but the mayor thrust a sudden sarcastic query at his opponent:

"Which name? Steele or Brainard? You acknowledged both."

"My real name is Brainard; therefore, it is also hers. But I shall be content if she will take my present one of Steele. More than that, I shall be content if she will honestly accept from my hands a place of refuge where I swear she shall remain unmolested by me till this matter can be legally settled. I do not wish to make myself hateful to her, for I anticipate the day when she will be my wife in heart as she is now in law."

"Never!"

The word rang out in true womanly revolt. "I will die before that day ever comes to separate me from the man I love and the child who calls me mother. You may force me from this house, you may plunge me into poverty, into contumely, but you shall never make me look upon myself as other than the wife of this good man, whom I have wronged but will never disgrace."

"Madam," declared the inflexible secretary with a derisive appreciation which bowed her once proud head upon her shamed breast, "you are all I thought you when I took you from Crabbe's back pantry in Boone to make you the honour and glory of a life which I knew then, as well as I do now, would not long run in obscure channels."

It was a sarcasm calculated to madden the proud man who, only a few minutes before, had designated the object of it by the sacred name of wife. But beyond a hasty glance at the woman it had bowed almost to the object of it by the sacred name dence of feeling either its force or assumption. Other thoughts were in his mind than those roused by jealous anger.

"How old were you then?" he demanded with alarming incongruity.

The secretary started. He answered, however, calmly enough:

"I? Seven years ago I was twenty-five I am thirty-two now."

"So I have heard you say. A man of twenty-five is old enough to have made a record, Mr. Steele—" The mayor's tone hardened, so did his manner; and I saw why he had been such a power in the courts before he took up politics and an office. "Mr. Steele, I do not mean you to disturb my house or to rob me of my wife. What was your life before you met Olympia Brewster?"

A pause, the slightest in the world,—but the keen eye of the astute lawyer noted it, and his tone grew in severity and assurance.

"You have known for two years that this woman whom you called yours was within your reach, if not under your very eye, and you forbore to claim her. Has this delay had anything to do with the record of those years to which I have just alluded?"

Had the random shot told? The secretary's eye did not falter, nor his figure lose an inch of its height, yet the impression made by his look and attitude were not the same; the fire had gone out of them; a blight had struck his soul—the flush of his triumph was gone.

Mayor Packard was merciless.

"Only two considerations could hold back a man like you from urging a claim he regarded as a sacred right; the fact of a former marriage or the remembrance of a forfeited citizenship—pardon me, we can not mince matters in a strait like this—which would delegalise whatever contract you may have entered in to."

Still the secretary's eye did not swerve, though he involuntarily stretched forth his hand toward the table as if afraid of betraying a tremor in his rigidly drawn up figure.

"Was there the impediment of a former marriage?"

No answer from the steraly set lips.

"Or was it that you once served a term—a very short term, cut short by a successful attempt at escape—in a Minnesota prison?"

"Insults!" broke from those lips and nothing more.

"Mr. Steele, I practised law in that state for a period of three years. All the records of the office and of the prison register are open to me. Over which of them should I waste my time?"

Then the tiger broke loose in the man who from the aggressor had become the attacked, and he cried:

"I shall never answer; the devil has whispered his own suggestions in your ear; the devil and nothing else."

But the mayor, satisfied that he had made his point, smiled calmly, saying:

"No, not the devil, but yourself. You, even the you of seven years back, would not have lived in any country town if necessity, or let us say, safety, had not demanded it. You, with your looks and your ambitions,—to marry at twenty-five a girl from the kitchen! any girl, even if she had the making of an Olympia Packard, if you did not know that it was in your power to shake her off when you got ready to assert yourself, or better prospects offered? The cipher and the desirability you expressed of a means of communication unreadable save by you two,—all this was enough to start the suspicion; your own manner has done the rest. Mr. Steele, you are both a villian and a dastard, and have no right in law to this woman. Contradict me if you dare."

"I dare, but will not," was the violent reply. "I shall not give you even that satisfaction. This woman who has gone through the ceremony of marriage with both of us shall never know to which of us she is the legal wife. Perhaps it is as good a revenge as the other. It certainly will interfere as much with her peace."

"Oh, oh, not that! I can not bear that!" leaped in anguish from her lips. "I am a pure woman—let no such torture be inflicted upon me. Speak! tell the truth as you are the son of a woman you would have us believe honest."

A smile then, cold but alive with gloating triumph, altered the line of his lips for an instant as he advanced toward the door. "A woman over the possession of whom it is an honour to quarrel?" were his words as he passed the mayor with a bow.

I looked to see the mayor spring and grasp him by the throat, but that was left for another hand. As the secretary bent to touch the door it suddenly flew violently open and Nixon, quivering in every limb and with his face afire, sprang in and seized upon the other with a violence of passion which would have been deadly had there been any strength behind it.

It was but child's play for so strong a man as Mr. Steele to shake off so futile a grasp, and he did so with a rasping laugh. But the next moment he was tottering, blanched and helpless, and wildly struggling to right himself and escape, yielded more and more to a sudden weakness sapping his life-vigor, till he fell prone and apparently lifeless on the lounge toward which, with a final effort, he had thrown himself.

"Good God!" rang thrilling through the room, as the old man reeled back from the wall against which he had been cast. "God has finished what these old arms had only strength enough to begin. He is dead this time, and it's a mercy! Thank God, Miss Olympia! thank God as I do now on my knees!" But here catching the mayor's eye, he faltered to his feet again, saying humbly as he crept away:

"I couldn't help it, your Honour. I shouldn't have been listening at the door; but I have loved Miss Olympia, as we used to call her, more than anything in the world ever since she came to make my old master's house a place of sunshine, and all I'm sorry for is that God had to do the finishing which twenty years ago I could have done my self."

CHAPTER XXV.

"BITTER AS THE GRAVE."

But Nixon was wrong. Mr. Steele did not die—not this time. Cared for by the physician who had been hastily summoned, he slowly but surely revived and by midnight was able to leave the house. As he passed the mayor on his way out, I heard Mr. Packard say:

"I shall leave the house myself in a few minutes. I do not mean that your disaffection shall ruin my campaign any more than I mean to leave a stone unturned to substantiate my accusation that you had no right to marry and possess legal claims over the woman whose happiness you have endeavoured to wreck. If you are wise you will put no further hindrance in my way."

I heard no answer, for at that instant a figure appeared in the open door which distracted all our attention. Miss Thankful, never an early sleeper and much given, as we know, to looking out of her window, had evidently caught the note of disaster from the coming and going of the doctor. She had run in from next door and now stood panting in the open doorway face to face with Mr. Steele, with her two hands held out, in one of which, remarkable as it seems to relate, I saw the package of bonds which I had been fortunate enough to find for her.

The meeting seemed to paralyse both; her face which had been full of tremulous feeling blanched and hardened, while he, stopped in some speech or final effort he was about to make, yielded to the natural brutality which underlay his polished exterior, and, in an access of rage which almost laid him prostrate again, lifted his arm and struck her out of his path. As she reeled to one side the bonds flew from her hand and lay at his feet; but he saw nothing; he was already halfway down the walk and in another moment the bang of his carriage door announced his departure.

TUMOR IN THE STOMACH

Completely Removed When She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

NEWBURY, ONT., April 4th, 1913.

"Some years ago, I was sick in bed, and thought I was going to die. I had a growth in my stomach, which the doctors said was a Tumor and they said that the only thing to do was to go to the hospital and have the tumor cut out. I dreaded an operation although both doctors said it was the only cure. I said I would die before being operated on.

At this time, my mother in Alvinston sent me some "Fruit-a-tives" and induced me to try them as she had heard of another woman who had been cured of a similar growth in the stomach by taking "Fruit-a-tives".

To please my mother, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" with the happy result that they cured me. I have not been to see a doctor since and my health is first class.

I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" every time I get a chance and I will be glad to have you publish this letter as some other woman may now be a sufferer from the same trouble and "Fruit-a-tives" will cure her" MRS. A. McDONALD.

WENT TO OTHER FAITHS

SEVERAL PEERS HAVE TURNED TO EASTERN RELIGIONS.

British Law No Longer Visits Punishment Upon a Man Who Leaves Christianity to Assume Another Creed—Lord Headley Has Become a Moslem While Lord Mexborough Is a Devout Buddhist.

Since the death of the late Lord Stanley of Alderley, just ten years ago, the British House of Lords—supreme tribunal of the Empire—while boasting of the Buddhist Earl, in the person of Lord Mexborough, has had no Moslem peer to represent in its councils a religion professed by nearly 100,000,000 lieges of the British crown. This role will henceforth be filled by Lord Headley, who last week made a public profession of the fact that he had embraced the tenets of Islam, and had seceded from Christianity.

Whereas in olden times, says a recent writer, an apostasy of this kind would have been punished as an atrocious crime, it is nowadays regarded in the light of the harmless eccentricity, denoting some abnormality of a possibly brilliant mind. True, among the English officials of the civil service of India, it is visit with dismissal, and would doubtless cost any officer of the army, navy or the diplomatic corps his commission. But this is merely a matter of discipline.

There are no longer any legal penalties. It does not even entail the loss of the patronage of livings of the Established Church of England; and whereas, by laws dating from the time of the Reformation, conversion to Roman Catholicism involves the suspension of all inherited or purchased advowsons, a peer may become a Mohammedan, or Buddhist, or may publicly proclaim himself an Atheist, like the late Marquis of Queensberry, without forfeiting his right to select and appoint the rectors and vicars of often large and populous parishes—permitted therefore by the state to retain his responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the parishioners.

While Great Britain and all other Western powers—save Russia—tolerate conversions such as that of Lord Headley, they sternly refuse to allow the legal status of the person concerned to become in any way modified by the change of faith. Whereas polygamy is permitted by the European Governments to Orientals born and reared as Moslems, Lord Headley would be promptly arrested by the police and tried, like the Earl of Russell, by the House of Lords for bigamy, if he attempted to avail himself of the privilege accorded by Mohammed to true believers, to indulge in a plurality of wives.

Lord Headley's conversion to Islam marks the culmination of a career of much adventure and of interest, and he has enjoyed the well-nigh unique advantage of reading his obituaries at no less than three different periods of his life. Indeed, he has been so often reported as dead that when he is ultimately gathered to his fathers it will require something more than mere newspaper announcements to carry conviction of his demise.

He has spent much time prospecting in the Northwest of Canada; served through the Franco-German war on the staff of his friend the Prussian General von Goeben, fought beside the late Lord Ashburnham for the late Don Carlos in the several Carlist insurrections in Spain some forty years ago, and also figured on the Turkish side in the Turko-Russian war, which was brought to a close by the treaty of San Stefano and the Congress of Berlin.

The late Lord Stanley of Alderley, who was buried in England in unconsecrated ground ten years ago, with full Moslem rites, the only instance on record of the funeral of a peer of the realm under such circumstances, was also a very interesting man, though in his later years he developed an irascibility which did not precisely suggest the fatalist calm for which the followers of the Prophet are so distinguished. He commenced his career in diplomacy, but after about ten years abandoned it, in order to escape its trammels, and contracted a romantic marriage in 1861 in Switzerland with Dona Fabia Fernanlez y Funes of Madrid, who was stated to be the widow of a Spanish nobleman, Don Ramon Perez y Abril.

Lord Stanley of Alderley's conversion of Islam was brought about in the early eighties by his intimacy with Sultan Abdul Hamid, whose principal champion he became in the House of Lords and in the columns of The London Times, to which he contributed many interesting "letters to the editor."

Lord Mexborough's conversion to Buddhism is not so much a matter of eccentricity as of study and of travel. For the earl, if a crank in some respects, is a man of wide learning and culture, and has wandered all over the world, especially in the Orient, like his father.

Nor among the Buddhists who find a place in the pages of Burke's "Peerage," must one omit the name of the Marquis of Queensberry's sister, Lady Edith Douglas, married to a son of the late Gen. Fox-Pitt Rivers of Rushmore, Wiltshire, a professed Buddhist, like herself.

Lady Hester Stanhope, neice of Pitt, and a famous traveler, also became a Moslem.

After the death of her uncle, Prime Minister Pitt, for whom she kept house, and moreover broken-hearted by the death of her fiance, Gen. Sir John Moore and of her favorite half-brother, Charles Stanhope at the battle of Corunna, she left England, and spent the remaining thirty years of her life in Palestine. There, after becoming a convert to Islam, she acquired an extraordinary influence over the natives.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF AN ABSCESS BY
Burdock Blood Bitters.

Mr. A. W. Dryden, Amherst, N.S., writes:—"I am going to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for us. My son "Vance," when only nine months old, got an abscess on his cheek bone. I took him to a doctor in St. John, N.B., and he lanced it, and told me it would get well in a few days, and wanted me to keep it squeezed out. It did not seem to get any better, so my wife took him back. The Doctor told her to take him home and it would soon get better. It would gather and break, and it went on that way until he was over four years old.

"He lost four pieces of bone out of where it was lanced, and two pieces came from his mouth; he has lost all of his cheek bone, and his eye was drawn down. I took him to doctors in St. John, Moncton, and Amherst, and all wanted me to let him go under an operation. He was so small I told them that if he was going to die he might as well die as he was as to go there and be all cut to pieces, so I declined to have the operation done. I told them I was going to try Burdock Blood Bitters, as I had heard my mother talk so much about it. I got a bottle, and when it was about half gone noticed it was doing good, and before many days the sore stopped running, and healed up, and the abscess has never broken out again. This happened nearly six years ago, so you can see I have great faith in Burdock Blood Bitters, and I can say with all my heart that it is the best blood medicine in the world."

As you know, "catching a cold" simply means allowing the germs of a cold to catch you.

Usually these germs, which abound wherever people congregate, gain their first foothold in the mucous membrane lining the nasal passages. Here they multiply if unchecked, and quickly set up an inflammation. Then follows that smarting, burning, stuffed up, "headachy" feeling—that cold in the head that is so depressing and so likely to develop into something more serious.

Fossal Balm goes right to the spot, kills the germs and checks the cold. Fossal Balm is an antiseptic, healing ointment, put up in a collapsible tube with a long, nozzle-shaped opening. This little nozzle, inserted in the nostril, carries the Fossal Balm well up into the passage, where it quickly spreads over the inflamed membrane, destroys the germs that are causing the trouble, soothes the irritation, clears the passages, and gives grateful and lasting relief.

GIVE MONEY TO MONISTS SAID HAECKEL ON BIRTHDAY.

Celebrated Scientist and Expositor of the Evolutionary Theory, Who Attained the Age of Eighty Years a Few Weeks Ago, Has Passed Through Many Trials and Persecutions in Pursuit of Science.

Prof. Ernst Haeckel, the celebrated German philosopher and naturalist, was eighty years old on Feb. 16. His friends and disciples in all parts of the world had planned to present him with some fitting proof of their regard, but Herr Haeckel sent out an appeal to his friends requesting them to refrain from sending him any personal donations. He further asked them to devote any money intended as a gift to him to a special fund which he plans to place at the disposal of the German Monists' union, in order to make it international in scope.

Prof. Haeckel is the chief representative of radical naturalistic evolution in Germany and is a bold theorist. His best known works are "Natural History of Creation," "The Origin of the Human Race" and "The Riddle of the Universe."

Prof. Haeckel made his debut as a writer on scientific subjects in 1865, when he published his monographs on the "Radiolaria." This work, strongly influenced by Darwin's theory of evolution, created considerable interest in the scientific world and attracted the attention of scientists all over the world to the modest "Privatdocent," at Jena.

The novelty and boldness of the theories advanced in that work surprised even the advanced thinkers in Germany and aroused a storm of indignation among the traditionalists.

PROF. ERNST HAECKEL.

Prof. Haeckel was bitterly attacked and denounced as an enmey of mankind who had degraded his species, and determined efforts were made to have him dismissed from his professorship at the Jena University. But the late Grand Duke Karl Alexander of Saxe-Weimar, the protector of the young scientist, declined to interfere. When a prominent man begged the duke to prohibit the lectures of Haeckel, the duke asked his visitor whether he believed that the professor was really convinced of the truth of his statements.

"Certainly, I do," was the reply, "and what he says is all the worse for that very reason."

"But then," retorted the grand duke, "in that case he is doing nothing more than what you are doing yourself."

But Prof. Haeckel did not take all this quietly. He was a born fighter and never hesitated for a moment to enter into a polemic with his opponents. Undaunted by the storm of vituperation which his first important work had aroused, Haeckel, between 1866 and 1875, went on an extended tour of scientific exploration and investigation through Europe, Asia Minor, Syria and Egypt, from which he returned with a great mass of valuable material, which he used with telling effect in a series of epoch-making works.

Prof. Haeckel has always thoroughly enjoyed life, and his untamable, fighting spirit is still with him in his active old age. He has never quailed before opposition or hard names, but has remained a lusty, healthy, impetuous, intrepid youth, even when his hair had worn to snowy white. It is related that not many years ago, the Grand Duke of Weimar playfully rallied him, in the midst of a brilliant company, on his belief in evolution. To the amazement and horror of the guests, he slapped the grand duke on the back and replied: "Well, my good man, when you have time, just come over to Jena, and see some proofs of it!" In his seventy-fifth year he severely censured Kaiser William, in a public lecture at Berlin, for laying down the law on a subject of which His Imperial knew little or nothing.

When Prof. Haeckel retired from his chair at Jena, he did so with the avowed intention of devoting the rest of his life to the compilation of a large work on the "History of Biology" and the development and extension of the "Phyletic Museum" which he equipped and presented to the University of Jena in 1908.

In Memory of Edward VII.

The plan of adding a stone gatehouse and colonnades to Holyrood House as a memorial to King Edward has now been abandoned, and it has been arranged, with the cordial approval of the King and Queen, to place two ornamental gates at the north and south ends of the forecourt of the palace, along with a statue or medallion of King Edward. There has been a remarkable delay in setting to work on the memorial, but it is hoped that a serious commencement will now soon be made.

Mrs. H. Laich, Cannington Manor, Sask., writes—"You will remember me writing you last spring. Well, I gave up my doctor and began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment cured me rapidly and I was soon myself again. I was pale, thin and weak, suffered from stomach troubles and liver complaint and frequently had sick, nervous headaches.

I was surprised to find that in a few weeks time I had gained 30 pounds in weight. I never felt so strong and well in all my life. Headaches never bother me any more and I am grateful for the cure. If people would only give this medicine a fair trial they would certainly be cured."

You can feel yourself gaining in strength and vitality while using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. You sleep better, eat your meals with more relish, and digest them without discomfort. But it is also interesting to note your increase in weight for this is proof positive that your system is obtaining additional nourishment from this food cure and that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body. Knocking on the Door.

To me all knocking at a closed door is fraught with the tragic, an imperative summons to open to the unknown, to suspend for the time the present action or conversation to make way for that which may not be denied. I have observed, with myself particularly, when in a room alone that a sudden knocking at the door, coming without previous warning as to who might wish admittance, suspends as if in midair the thought or act upon which I am engaged. A feeling of vague apprehension possesses me, a momentary wonderment at the sudden and unexpected interruption of thought. And I have observed, too, when in a room with others, that at a knocking at the door all will turn toward it, suspending action, leaving the speech uncompleted, with a strained expression in their eyes, as if fearing something disastrous, while the shadow of silence will fall upon us until the door is opened and the cause of the unknown summons discovered. Though the shadow of silence in such an instance is of such short duration and may fall so lightly upon some that it may be unperceived, to me it is none the less real.—Atlantic.

The Trick of Ski Jumping.

The art of ski jumping is not so easy as it looks before trying, nor so hard to learn as it might appear after the first attempt. At the start, or takeoff, come down as though you were coasting on the ski, then at the moment of the takeoff bend the body well forward from the hips and throw as much of the weight as possible into the knees. As you leave the edge of the jump straighten quickly at the hips and secure as much as possible the effect of jumping straight out into the air. While in the air hold the arms as still as possible in the position that best preserves the balance, keep the ski points slightly down, as near as possible parallel with the slope of the hill. The body should be perpendicular to the slope and the skis kept well together. On landing advance one ski as far as possible without upsetting, bending the knee of the leg that is advanced. Keep the skis together and parallel. The rest is practice and more practice. —Outing.

Tolstoy's Handwriting.

In the Revue de Paris Count Ellie Tolstoy describes his mother's experiences as his father's amanuensis:

"Being very shortsighted, my mother had to bring her eyes close to the paper to decipher my father's frightful scrawl. The work often took her the whole evening and kept her busy until long after the rest of the household had gone to bed. When she found a passage which was quite illegible she used to go to papa and ask him to explain it. But that seldom happened, for she was very reluctant to disturb him. When she did so he took the manuscript from her and asked, with evident irritation: 'Well, what is it you can't understand?' Then he began to read it himself, but when he arrived at the puzzling passage he was invariably pulled up and had the greatest difficulty in even guessing what he had written."

Count Ellie Tolstoy adds that while the spelling was often very bad, the countess never failed to put it right.

Elephant Skin.

Elephant skin is very beautiful. Moreover it is durable. But it is hard to get.

The price of a live elephant is not small, and, besides that, elephants do not grow within a stone's throw of our front doors. So the leather manufacturer that contracted to furnish many elephant skin bags at a given time would probably find himself under a big burden. He must wait until some tame, pet elephant, so to speak, dies.

Elephants are unusual enough, so that many of them, after they die, are stuffed and put in museums. Hence a named elephant, one that has been popular during life, will seldom fall into the hands of leather dealers. It is for the poor and wandering denizens of the circus and traveling animal shows to end up on the counters of the fashionable leather goods shops.—Washington Star.

THE SCALES OF JUSTICE.

How They Were Tipped In Favor of a Masculine Martyr.

The upright judge leaned forward and bestowed a look of supreme disgust upon the prisoner, a not unhandsome looking young man.

"The charge against you is that you have punctured the fair skin of this plaintiff with a needle. What have you to say for yourself?"

The prisoner, his face proud and haughty, drew himself up.

"It is true, your honor," he replied, "but I am not responsible."

"How so?"

"The facts are these. Not being able to afford an automobile, I am obliged, like a great many other American citizens, to travel in public conveyances. For many months now I have been continuously jabbed in the face, back, shoulders and arms by innumerable hatpins worn by total strangers. After enduring this thing for a long time the thought of revenge became settled in my mind. I lost my control and one day determined to take the defensive."

Here the prisoner broke down.

"Your honor," he sobbed, "it was wrong of me, but under this fearful ordeal my reason tottered."

The judge wiped away a tear.

"It is a sad case," he muttered as he noticed there was not a dry eye in the courtroom. "Send him to a sanitarium and let us hope that we may not share his fate."—Life.

What Could the Governor Say?

A local contributor cites a fresh example of the fashion in which the youth of today tripe the unwary parent:

"Father," said the son home from college to his father, "I must have better rooms at college. Why, in the place I room now there isn't even hot water to shave with in the morning."

"Son, when I was your age I never had hot water to shave with. Did it, when the weather wasn't too blooming cold, out in the front of the woodshed and made lather out of any old soap I could find."

"But, father," expostulated the son, "didn't you say you sent me to college that I might have the advantages you didn't have?" — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Suffered Intense Agony With His Back.

Kidneys Were The Cause.

Weak back is caused by weak kidneys, and on the first approach or evidence of kidney trouble Doan's Kidney Pills should be used, and serious trouble avoided.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak aching back, and prevent any further complications arising.

Mr. John Briggs, Whitewood, Sask., writes:—"I am sending you this testimonial out of pure gratitude, as I am not a believer in patent medicines, but I got so run down, that I became quite willing to give anything a trial. I paid a visit to our local druggist, and told him I was suffering intense agony with my back. He told me I had kidney trouble, and handed me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, saying it was the best thing he could possibly give me. I tried them, and the effect was certainly marvelous. They are worth $10.00 a box of anybody's money, and I would not be without a box by me. I certainly owe my present condition to Doan's Kidney Pills."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A RESCUE

A Girl Led the Way, and a Man Followed

By P. A. MITCHEL

Have you ever been at the seashore on a clear, cold day in winter with a stiff gale blowing? There is something exhilarating in buttoning your coat up to the chin and breasting the wind. Out on the water as far as you can see the waves seem to be tumbling over one another, like wild animals playing leapfrog. Near by at regular intervals a huge billow comes rolling in curves. Its crest breaks into a white foam like the mane of a gigantic horse and seethes on the smooth beach.

It was such a day as this that I stood on a dune looking seaward. It was all ocean and beach, except for a dock built of planks and spiles, the waves rolling under the former and past the latter. Back of the dunes was a village, of which the inhabitants were fisher folk, making a precarious living out on the inconstant waters.

Nevertheless I envied them on this breezy morning, when the air was full of stimulating elements, for I was born for a sailor and, mistaking my calling, had got attached to a desk instead of a boat. And now I was taking a rest from indoor labor, spending a week end by the waters I loved so well. The cold wind struck my cheek, tingling, and made me for the moment forget the dingy place of my daily occupation.

I looked upon the ocean over a bay, a point of land extending outward on either side. There were a few ships riding at anchor, and here and there was a sail out on the farther waters. Not far from shore I noticed a fishing smack coming before the wind under a single jib. She seemed to be laboring, and the only person in her was not sitting still at the tiller, but toiling desperately. Another eye than mine was on him, for below me, hurrying along the beach toward the dock, I saw a girl, her skirts fluttering in the wind, a shawl about her shoulders, a boy's cap on her head, seemingly unconscious of the cold, intent on the man fighting the waters in the boat.

I took in the situation and, descending from my perch, made toward her at an angle, joining her before she reached the dock.

"The man out there seems to be having a hard time of it," I said to her.

She heard my words, but otherwise seemed to be unconscious of my existence, for she said:

"It's Bob. The boat is an old tub. There!" She caught her breath as the bowsprit ducked and stabbed a wave, seeming inclined to continue to point downward, while the water swept the deck. "Thank heaven!" she went on when she saw that the boat righted. "But I'm afraid the next wave will sink her."

"What are you going to do?" I asked as we hurried on, she leading, toward the dock.

"Going out for him."

"Going out for him! What in?"

The boat put its nose down into another wave, and the girl was too intent upon it to pay any attention to my question, but a few minutes later we were out on the leeward side of the dock beyond the breakers, where a rowboat was fastened, rising and falling. The girl seized the rope tied to its nose, but I took it from her and pulled on it myself. When I got the boat to the dock I sprang in as it rose on a wave, followed by the girl. Loosening the forward line, then the stern line, I picked up the oars and pulled desperately to keep from being blown upon the breakers. It was a hard pull, but I succeeded.

Meanwhile the laboring boat outside had drawn nearer and was passing on a line parallel with the shore some 500 yards from the end of the dock. Had I been compelled to pull against the wind I could not have reached her. The man in her was evidently trying to make the dock or had seen us and was doing what he could to enable us to reach him, for he went about in a half circle and stood against the wind, easing his boat as best he could whenever he saw a heavy wave coming. Our boat was broad and strong, and, although we were every moment in danger, I believed she would keep right side up.

The girl was sitting in the stern of the boat and after considerable effort had succeeded in shipping the tiller. As soon as she had done this I made better headway, not having to keep the boat on her course. My helmswoman was evidently used to boats and knew how to steer a course which, since both we and our object were at the mercy of wind and tide, was most likely to bring us together. But the strength of the wind alone was so great that it was constantly blowing us off our course.

The object boat kept sinking out of sight in the hollow between two waves and in one of these depressions seemed to have gone under.

"Can he swim?" I asked.

I received no reply to my question till the boat appeared on the crest of a wave, when the girl gasped that he could swim, but not very well.

"Can you swim?" I asked, looking about the boat for something on which to float, for I was beginning to fear we should be capsized.

"Like a duck," was the comforting reply.

"If we go over try to catch one of the oars."

Again the boat, which was now not more than 100 feet from us, went between two waves, and when seen again there was only her mast above the surface, and that was slowly settling. But Bob's head appeared, and he was swimming for his life. I had been in hopes that if his boat went down before we reached him he would find something to cling to, but evidently he had not.

"Keep her straight toward him!" I shouted to my pilot.

She did not faint, and he did not lose his head. She kept her eye fixed on him—that is, when he was riding high—and exerted all her strength on the tiller ropes, now shouting to me to "pull strong on starboard," now "strong on port," then, after losing sight of our object for quite awhile, "back water!"

She had scarcely spoken the last words when I saw the struggling man not a dozen yards astern. I obeyed the order, but gained nothing. Shipping the oars, I turned and took up a coil of rope I had noticed behind me and had kept in mind for an emergency.

Holding fast to one end, I threw the coil toward the swimmer, but did not reach him. Passing the line to the girl, I took up the oars again and backed water with all my strength. But I had lost distance, and it was some minutes before I could get near enough to warrant her making another throw.

Twice she threw the rope, and twice it fell short. On the third throw it lay within a few feet of him. By a desperate effort he grasped it, and, I backing, the girl pulling on the rope, we got Bob beside us, when, dropping the oars, I pulled him in, though I was obliged, for fear of upsetting the boat, to wait till the side he was on was tilted upward.

As soon as I got him in he lost consciousness; but, leaving him to the attention of the girl, who took off her shawl and put it over him, I beat my efforts to getting ashore. But we had drifted near the rocky coast and would have been lost had we not been seen from the shore and a boat put out for us. So intent was I on the rescue that I did not see it till I had looked about me. Our friends reached us when we had drifted to within a quarter of a mile of the rocks and I had not sufficient strength left to pull away from them against the wind. They took us in tow, and in due time we were taken on the dock.

Fortunately they had brought a stimulant, which was given to the person we had saved, and he recovered before we left the boat. When all was over the girl collapsed, but only for a few moments. Then for the first time she seemed to realize her indebtedness to me, and with a world of gratitude on her features, but not spoken in words, she put out her hand to me.

My other hand was grasped by the man we had rescued, he, too, expressing by look rather than word his gratitude. He was about the same age as the girl, though I could not tell whether he was older or younger. Both seemed to be about twenty. I proposed that we go where he could be warmed after his cold bath, and I led the way at a brisk pace up the dock and over the beach to the dunes, then back of them to the village, where, entering a house, he was put to bed with hot water bottles without and hot punch within. Before leaving I said to the girl:

"He must be very dear to you or you would not have risked your life for him."

"And yours," she replied.

"He is"—

"My brother."

And so this story by this one word is prevented from being, despite its exciting incidents, no story at all, for had I, under an impulse, risked my life to save a girl's lover I should have been deprived of experiencing that tenderness toward her which might otherwise be expected under the circumstances. Indeed, I said to myself, "Any girl who will do all that for her brother surely would stand by a lover." And then and there I became ambitious to be her lover.

The time came when I was rewarded for the service I had rendered in the way I desired. By saving a man I got a wife.

Paper Fishes In Japan.

Outside the houses of any town in Japan you will see one or more paper fishes dangling and blowing in the wind. On making inquiry you are informed that the paper fishes represent the boys of the household. Every new boy means another fish. These imitations of the koi are decorated with colored silk and are thought a great deal of. The fish which the Japanese call koi is noted for its courage and tenacity and is therefore regarded as a fitting representation of the coming man.

A Cement River.

Extraordinary qualities are possessed by the River Tinto in Spain. It hardens and petrifies the sand of its bed, and if a tone falls in the stream and alights upon another, in a few months the two join and become one stone. Fish cannot live in its waters.

A Sure Way.

Neighbor—Sure, if you don't mind sticking one of your legs through the fence and letting him grab hold of it.

"Every bit as much," he said, congratulating himself that the dear girl didn't ask him if he would still want to marry her.

WM. WHYTE PASSES

Railroad Knight Was Seventy-One Years of Age.

BUILDER OF THE WEST

MONTREAL, April 15. — Word reached C. P. R. headquarters yesterday afternoon of the death of Sir William Whyte at Coronado Beach, California. Sir William was for years vice-president and a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The death of one of the pioneers of the C. P. R., and one of the best known men in Canada, came as a shock to his friends, as messages received up to a few hours previously were to the effect that Sir William's health was improving and that he would return to his home in Winnipeg quite restored in health. A special car has been sent to California to bring the body back. Lady Whyte will accompany it.

A message from San Diego says death was due to pyaemia and a complication of diseases.

Sir William Whyte had a quite remarkable railway career, which was characterized by gradual but steady evolution rather than by meteoric rapidity. He was born in 1843 at Charleston, in Fifeshire, Scotland. He was educated in the schools of his native place, and his first business appointment was that of clerk for two years in the factor's office of Lord Elgin's estate in Scotland. After spending a year in the service of the West of Fife Railway, he came to Canada in 1863, and was from that date till 1883 continuously in the service of the Grand Trunk Railway. During those twenty years he worked as brakeman, freight clerk, and afterwards freight foreman at Toronto, as yardmaster and station agent at Toronto, as station agent at Stratford and London, and as assistant superintendent of the central division.

Leaving the service of the Grand Trunk in 1883, he was appointed general superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway, to which were afterwards added the Ontario & Quebec and the Toronto, Grey & Bruce. As the Canadian Pacific Railway system in Ontario became consolidated his office became more and more important and responsible until it included the general superintendence of all the company's sections in Ontario and the provinces farther to the east. His great opportunity came when he took over the western division and became general superintendent and afterwards manager of all the lines west of Lake Superior. From 1886 till his retirement in 1911 he spent in the west twenty-five years, rising to the post of vice-president.

In 1871, he married Jane, daughter of Adam Scott, in Toronto, and he leaves four daughters and one son; Margaret, Christina Mathes, Edith Jane, Gladys Helen, and William Whyte.

A Severe Sentence.

LINDSAY, April 15. — "Lee" McGilvray, found guilty of dropping carbon bisulphide, a poisonous drug, in a glass of beer about to be swallowed by Jim Goetlin, his friend, was sentenced by Judge McMillan to two years. The purpose of the dose was to temporarily "knock out" Goetlin to permit of robbery.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach, but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if it's not right."

TO ASK FOR $33,000,000.

Ontario Technical Education Association Will Seek Federal Aid.

TORONTO, April 15.—The Dominion Government will be asked to give the sum of $33,000,000 for technical education in Canada. This was practically decided yesterday, when the Ontario Technical Education Association was organized in Toronto. The annual instalments of $3,300,000 will be suggested, the provincial contribution and the grants will be divided among the provinces according to population. Ontario, for instance, would receive slightly less than a million per year under the proposed plan.

For the purpose of organization the Ontario Technical Education Association met at the Royal Canadian Institute, College street, Mr. R. D. Fairbairn in the chair. Delegates were present from manufacturing associations, Boards of Trade, the National Council of Women, the Trades and Labor Council, Provincial Technical Schools and other organizations. It was decided by the gathering to form a provincial association for the Promotion of Technical Education, with the ultimate object of having a Dominion association as the other provinces organize. A committee, representing each organization, was appointed to draft a constitution which will be submitted to the various organizations for their official endorsement.

KEPHALDOL

CURES PAIN, BUT DOES NOT AFFECT THE HEART.

First of all it may be well to mention that "Kephaldol" is the prescription of one of the world's greatest nerve specialists — the famous Herr Doctor Stohr of Vienna, Austria.

He has used "Kephaldol" in his private practice and hospital clinics, in thousands of cases of Headaches, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuritis, La Grippe and other forms of Nerve Exhaustion.

The mere fact that Dr. Stohr originated "Kephaldol" is the only recommendation needed by most physicians and surgeons to commend the formula to their attention.

"Kephaldol" is the only pain-relieving remedy used by Dr. Stohr, because it is the only one that does not affect the heart or other organs and may be taken with perfect safety until a complete cure results.

"Kephaldol" Tablets may be obtained at most drug stores in 50c tubes, or they will be sent on receipt of price by Kephaldol Limited, 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

Laborites in Britain Refuse to Form Alliance With Socialists.

BRADFORD, Eng., April 15. — A resolution instructing labor members of Parliament to act independently of the Socialist party was adopted by 199 votes to 79 at the closing session here yesterday of the annual conference of the Independent Labor party. The resolution also declared the Cabinet rule which involves the suppression of the rights of private members "absolutely to voice the policy of the party, thereby making impossible the free consideration of proposals which have not received the Cabinet hall mark."

This rule was declared "inimical to good government."

In connection the resolution invites members of the Labor party to vote on all bills in accordance with the principles for which the party stands.

NO RELEASE YET.

Harry K. Thaw's Case Must Go to the Supreme Court First.

CONCORD, N.H., April 15.—Harry Kendall Thaw's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was granted by Judge Aldrich of the U. S. District Court yesterday, but no order will be issued for the prisoner's discharge from custody until arrangements are completed to take the case to the U. S. Supreme Court on appeal.

Thaw's petition for admission to bail, the court left undetermined, taking the ground that it would be more appropriate for this to be passed upon by the Supreme Court.

The result is that Thaw's guardianship and condition will be unchanged for the present, but that his petition for a writ of habeas corpus will go to the highest court in the land with a decision of the lower court in his favor.

Corn finished the same as last night to ⅝c and ¾-8c higher; oats unchanged to ⅛c off, and provisions down a shade to 10c.

LONDON, April 15.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Irish despatches received yesterday tell of a number of outrages that have been committed upon members of the Protestant Church. Agnew was thrown into a ditch, and two men held McCartney while two others beat him unconscious.

EVANS ON WAY BACK.

Union Life Promoter To Stand Trial Says E. A. DuVernet.

TORONTO, April 15. — According to the statement made by Crown Prosecutor E. A. Du Vernet, K.C., at the opening of the spring assizes at the City Hall yesterday afternoon, Pellman Evans has sailed from France in order to stand his trial on a charge of conspiracy to defraud in connection with the affairs of the defunct Union Life Insurance Co.

This information came as the result of Eric Armour's request that the charges against his clients, Harry Symons, K.C., and Geo. Millichamp should be proceeded with at once. To this Mr. Du Vernet objected, and when pressed by Mr. Justice Middleton for his reason, he declared that Evans would be in Toronto probably by next week.

Grandma Never Let Her Hair Get Grey

Kept Her Locks Dark, Thick, Glossy, With Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all grey hair disapears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Grey, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

NEW REVOLT BEGINS.

White Wolf's Forces Said To Be Strengthened by Mutiny In Army.

LONDON, April 15.—Another revolt is threatened in China, according to an Exchange Telegraph Co.'s despatch from Shanghai yesterday. It adds that feverish excitement exists in official quarters at Nanking, where there is a reign of terror among the populace.

The regular troops at Sianfu, capital of the Province of Shen-Si, are said to have mutinied, and are believed to be in league with the brigand White Wolf, who with his followers has captured and looted many towns in the vicinity, killing hundreds.

Indications of grave unrest are reported from Wu Chang and Canton, says the despatch, and six provinces are said to be affected.

This Skin Peeler All The Rage in Society

There is a growing tendency among women of culture and fashion to pay more attention to hygienic means of preserving their charms. The advent of mercolized wax doubtless has been largely responsible for this. This remarkable substance produces complexions so natural in appearance, so magnetically beautiful, artificial complexions are no longer desired. Instead of "doctoring" an offensive skin, the skin is peeled off. The wax peels the skin so gradually, in such fine particles, no discomfort is experienced. The fresher, younger skin beneath, wholly in evidence within a week or two, is lily white, satiny soft and smooth. It's not a patched-over complexion, but a brand new one. That's why mercolized wax has become such a rage among society folk. The wax is put on nights like cold cream and washed off mornings. All druggists have it; one ounce will do.

Another hygienic treatment now growing in favour is one to remove wrinkles, made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. Used as a wash lotion it "acts like magic."

DEBATE GOES ON TO-DAY.

Parliamentarians Resume Work After Easter Recess.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Members of Parliament have returned from the Easter vacation for the resumption of business by the House to-day.

The balance of this week promises to be fairly quiet, with the budget debate continued.

The Senate also resumes to-day, and its special committee will tackle the Consolidated Railway Act, which will be productive of several weeks' work. The principal features are those extending the powers of the Railway Commission, and particularly vesting in that body complete control over stock issues by railway corporations. It is understood that the companies are preparing vigorous opposition.

Supplementary estimates and railway subsidies have yet to be brought down, but otherwise the Government legislation is clear, all on the table.

Asquith Gets Ovation.

LONDON, April 15.—Premier Asquith was greeted with an inspiring ovation on his return to the House of Commons yesterday. His progress from the entrance of the chamber to the chair of the Speaker was accompanied by volleys of cheers from excited Ministerial and Nationalist members. The newly-elected member for East Fife was introduced by Percy H. Illingworth and John W. Galland.

Amundsen Polar Trip Off.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, April 15. —Official announcement is made of the postponement for a year of Capt. Roald Amundsen's expedition to the North Polar regions. The Fram has been recalled to Christiania, and explorers are inclined to believe the expedition will never be carried out, as considerable difficulty is experienced in raising the extra $200,000 necessitated by the delay.

Survey Parties In Northwest.

OTTAWA, April 15.—Upwards of eighty surveying parties have been sent out this season by the Department of the Interior for the purpose of laying out new townships in the northern portion of the prairie provinces. They will go as far north as Fort McMurray.

An Altered Line.

Sir Walter Scott was sitting in his library one day when a tall Highlander, who had been erecting an inn nearby, entered and said:

"May it please you, Sir Walter, I am going to call my place 'The Flodden Inn,' and as ye've written a poem on Flodden field it's ruck me and the gude wife that you might gie us a line for a motto."

"Have you read the poem?" Sir Walter asked.

"No, sir; I'm nae a reader."

"Well, I should advise you to read the poem and take a line from it."

"And what'll it be?"

Sir Walter, without a smile, replied, "Drink, weary traveler; drink and pray."

"But," cried the Highlander, aghast, "my inn's no a kirk, and the more prayin' there is the less drinkin' will be, and I dinna want that."

"Oh," laughed the poet, "I think I can alter the line. 'Drink, weary traveler, drink and pay'."

"The verra thing!" shouted the other in delight.

Money In His Voice.

One of London's smart young men, besides being of the spendthrift order, is an excellent mimic and can imitate his father's gruff voice to a nicety. Not long ago he wanted without delay an amount of money, and he knew that the father would treat a request for it with cold contempt. Waiting till he was sure that his father would be away, he went to a telephone call room and rang up his parent's office, calling for the cashier. The cashier was forthcoming.

"I say, Blank," said the young man, "if that scapegrace of a son of mine comes round while I am out and asks for £30, don't give it to him. Only give him £10 and tell him to make that do."

The cashier promised that he would fulfill his commands. Not long after the son called at the office and demanded £30. He was refused by the conscientious cashier, and, apparently in anger, the young man contented himself with the ten. When the parent reached the office there was trouble.

Spilling Salt.

The superstitious belief that it is unlucky to spill salt may have originated from Leonardo da Vinci's picture of the Last Supper, in which Judas is represented as spilling salt. It is just possible that the superstition was even then current among the people that Da Vinci merely embodied the superstition in his picture. A gift of bread and salt was a sign of friendship. Salt was thought to typify peace and amity, so spilling salt may have betokened enmity.

"So," said Rob, "your engagement to Maud is broken off, is it? Why, I thought she just doted on you!"

"So she did," answered Tom, "but her father proved to be an antidote."

BOWMANVILLE MAN KILLED BY TRAIN ON THE C. P. R. BRIDGE LAST EVENING

Harry Lennox Meets Death in Horrible Form—Was Almost Cut in Two by Car Wheels.

AN INQUEST OPENED

A shocking fatal accident occurred last night, between 8 and 9 oclock, when Harry Lennox of Bowmanville was killed by an eastbound freight train on the C. P. R. span bridge, east of the local depot.

The accident would probably not have been discovered until this morning had not Mr. Pat Gorham of Mark Street, who was passing, discovered the ghastly sight. He at once lodged his information with the C. P. R. authorities who, in turn, telephoned to the police. P. C. Reid and P. C. Paterson were immediately sent to the scene of the accident. They found the body carried some thirty yards on to the bridge. Indications point to the fact that he was about to board the freight, just west of the bridge, and was swung under.

Several cuts on the head would add tendency to the belief that the man was knocked unconscious, probably by being dashed against one of the trestles of the bridge.

Body Badly Mangled.

The body was horribly mangled, and was completely severed at the hips, and presented an awful spectacle. Death was doubtless instantaneous. A tarapaulin sheet was secured from the depot and the body borne to the station, where the remains were deposited in an ambulance and taken to Bellegrhem's undertaking parlours. In his clothing, which was almost completely torn from him, was found a five dollar bill, a pawn ticket, bearing the name of Lennox, and issued from a store in Toronto, and a railway ticket to Bowmanville.

Man Arrested.

When the two constables arrived, they noticed a man run away, and his actions caused P. C. Reid to follow him, and take him into custody, on suspicion. When questioned regarding the matter, he would not answer and appeared to know nothing of the affair. His explanations were satisfactory and the Constable allowed him to go.

As is usual in such cases, an idle, curious crowd gathered in front of Bellegham's, hoping, no doubt, to be allowed the privilege of viewing the remains. Few, however, were allowed to see the awful sight. This morning streams of people who thought they might be able to identify him, from meagre descriptions that were given out, called at the undertaking establishment but few knew him.

After the accident last night the information was offered that he was a resident of Tweed. A resident of that Town, who is familiar with the population in general, however, said he was not from the country town.

Deceased has a wife and one child in Bowmanville.

Inquest Opened.

An inquest was opened at Bellegham's, this morning, Coroner Dr. Greer presiding. The following Jury were empanelled and sworn in: J. M. Brooks, foreman; Thos. Boyle, John White, Wm. Grey, J. Dorrie, D. Flynn; Wm. A. Millas, A. Johnstone, H. Gainey, J. Metheral, J. B. Larocque and J. E. McGill.

Evidence of identification was given by Mr. S. A. McColl, a foreman in Ackermin's factory. After viewing the remains he stated that he knew the deceased to be Harry Lennox. He met him at noon yesterday and stayed talking with him in the shop until four o'clock in the afternoon. Deceased had worked with witness some ten years ago at Ackermati's, and witness had not seen him since that time, until yesterday.

Witness Almost Fainted.

At this juncture of the proceedings Mr. McColl became very affected and had it not been for some one nearby, catching him, would have fallen to the floor.

Deceased told Mr. McColl that he was going to either Montreal or Ottawa.

Money Not Plentiful.

He had no companions with him, but he said that money was none to plentiful. He was sober at that time and had no liquor on his person as far as witness knew. The names of two men were here given, from which it is expected that evidence as to the man's condition, last evening, will be given.

The late Mr. Lennox originally came from Lloydtown, near Toronto. For some little time past he has been living in Toronto, but lately his wife removed to Bowmanville, to live with her mother. Deceased's father is dead, but it is believed that his mother is living.

Wife Informed.

The late Mr. Lennox was about 30 or 35 years of age, of fine build and physique. The news of his death has been sent to his wife at Bowmanville and it is expected that she will arrive here some time to-day.

PROSPECTS OF ACTION PLEASE U. S. TROOPS

Excitement Across the Border Over Possible Intervention of United States into Mexican Affairs

A REFUGEE'S OPINION

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 15. — Despatches from New York and Washington to-day are full of fight and rumours of fight. The prospects for armed intervention by the United States in Mexico trouble are beging eagerly discussed on all sides. The warships in Hampton Roads and other docks are weighing anchors and hurrying south. There is great excitement around the bulletin boards of the United States' newspapers. Troops who have patiently waited on the Mexican border for three years or more, are taking heart again and expect ord[illegible]ithin a few hours to cross the [illegible]ande. It is believed that Gen[illegible] Huerta will continue to ignore the Tampico incident just to see how far Uncle Sam will go.

Mr. H. Wilson, an Australian, who reached Hamilton, Ont., yesterday with his wife and family, in a terrible condition, is a refugee from the Tampico district. He says if the United States attempts to clean up Mexico it will have ten years of guerilla warfare on its hands. The Mexicans, he says, are blood thirsty and courageous. They will fight every inch of United States' aggression. Wilson lost ninety thousand dollars in Tampico and had to fly to Canada.

LOCAL EXPRESS COMPANIES NOT GREATLY AFFECTED

By Parcels Post System—Advantages of Express System Counterbalance difference in Charges

DECREASE IN REVENUE

The introduction and operation of the Parcel Post system in this City has not proved as great a fatcor in disturbing the business of the local express companies as was thought at first. Of course, as only parcels up to eleven pounds can be sent through the parcel post it is only in the handling of packages of that weight that the business of the express companies is interfered with at all.

Last month the business of the local branches of the express companies (Canadian and Dominion) fell away very slightly from the amount of the month of March last year, and the difference is so small that the revenues of the company have not fallen off to any appreciable extent. At the same time instead of an increase in revenue from the handling of parcels under 11 pounds, as is usually found by comparisons with the same month of the previous year, there is a decrease this year for the revenue from such parcels during March. This shows that the parcel post is being used to a considerable extent, but that at the same time a very large percentage of the parcels from 11 pounds and lighter are still being sent by express.

The reasons for this are that, in the first place, the charge for the parcels post carriage is larger than the express charge in some cases. In such instances the senders do not hesitate for a minute, but after counting the cost, send the parcels by express. Then in the cases where the parcel post charge is smaller than the express fee it is taken into consideration that the mail system has only deliveries in 50 towns and cities, whereas the express companies deliver to nearly all cities, towns and villages; the express companies guarantee delivery whereas the registration of the parcel is necessary to ensure its delivery by parcel post; parcels that show signs of coming unwrapped are rewrapped by the express companies, but would not be in parcel post carriage; the express companies provide C.O.D. service, but the postage must be prepaid when the parcel is mailed or it will find its way to the dead letter office.

It might be noted here that employees of the express companies are cautioned not to disparage the parcel post system, but the fact that the people are used to sending parcels by express is responsible for the continuance, in some degree at least, of the sending of the small parcels in that manner.

THE BOARD OF TRADE CONSIDERS A NUMBER OF IMPORTANT MATTERS

Stony Lake Cottagers Ask For Support in Securing Better Service at Lakefield---Fair Directors Announce Their Intentions in Regard to Exhibition Grounds Purchase

A largely attended meeting of the Board of Trade was held in the Council chamber last night and several matters were discussed. Among those present at the meeting were Mr. Basil Hall, President, and Messrs. R. Denne, J. J. Turner, Jr., S. R. Armstrong, J. W. Worth, J. H. Garbutt, Alex. Gibson, F. Brownscombe, John Nugent, Thos. Barrie, J. Johns, R. Neill, Geo. Cochrane, W. H. Munro, Jas. Hamilton, J. Drummond, F. H. Dawson, C. H. Ackerman, A. F. Tomlins, G. O. Cameron, Fred Roy, J. D. Craig, H. W. Dyke, John Bell, Henderson and Smith.

Better Service.

A strong deputation of Stony Lake cottagers waited upon the Board to urge its co-operation and support in several matters which were of vital interest not only to the summer residents at Stony Lake, but to the district as well. Mr. R. Neill acted as spokesman for the Cottagers' Association in one matter and explained that they were trying to get better accommodation for the local people and others who passed through Lakefield on their way to the Lakes in the summer. Their proposal was to have the Grand Trunk Railway go right down to the pier at Lakefield with passengers and freight. It would be a great improvement in the accommodation of all going to the Lakes and as far as he knew would only be opposed to the carters at Lakefield, who did a thriving business in the summer transporting freight from the train to the boat and from the steamer to the station. It was estimated that 40,000 people passed hrough the Young's Point locks last season, so that it was plain that the change would result in additional convenience to a very large number. At present the transfer of baggage for the short distance at Lakefield meant confusion, delay, inconvenience and extra charge, and the remedy seemed to be a comparatively simple matter. The Cottagers' Association looked for the support of the Board of Trade in the matter.

Mr. Hamilton—Is it true that you approached the railway and they refused your request?

Mr. Neill—I think Mr. Dumble communicated with the Railway Commission, but I don't know just what their attitude was.

Mr. Dumble here explained that he applied to the Railway Commission two weeks ago and the Grand Trunk has asked two weeks to register their objections. The two weeks was not yet up so he had not heard what the commissioners intended to do in the matter. If the arrangement was kept up two or three months during the summer it would be sufficient. The baggage could be sorted on the way to Lakefield and that intended for the village could be put off at the station when the train arrived. Then the train could pass on to the wharf. He did not anticipate any trouble but there might be a delay in getting the matter settled.

Resolution Passed.

The following resolution was carried on the motion of Messrs. Cameron and Armstrong:

"That this Board of Trade co-operate with the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association in its efforts to have the Grand Trunk train go down to the wharf at Lakefield during the summer months as this would be of great convenience to a very large number of people of Peterborough and elsewhere who go to Stoney Lake in the summer, and also to shippers by freight and express; and that the President and Vice-President be authorized to act with the Association in this matter."

Mr. Dumble spoke at some length of the value of a hatchery somewhere in the Kawartha Lakes. He said that bass were prolific producers, but that their lives in Stony Lake were short (and consequently their size small) because of the many fishermen. He said that the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association were making an effort to have a hatchery established and have the opening of the fishing season commence on the 1st of July instead of the 16th of June. This was because the waters of Stony Lake were deep and consequently took a longer time to respond to the warming influence of the summer weather than other lakes. The fish were, as a result, still in spawn at the 16th of June each year, and that for every fish that was caught before the first of July, 1,000 were destroyed because the fish were captured in spawn. It was for the preservation of the fish that they asked to have the date changed.

Mr. Nugent told of a visitor to the Lakes who caught 50 fish in a day, and the same day his wife caught 60. The following day he met the latter in the forenoon and she had hooked 20 bass and 6 lunge. This sort of thing was a direct violation of the law and should be attended to.

On the motion of Messrs. Worth and Turner a motion supporting the Association in these matters was passed.

Take Down the Poles.

Mr. Turner here suggested that the Board pass a resolution urging the Council to take down the poles on George and Charlotte Streets before the paving was laid. He thought that it would be a mistake to lay the pavement before the poles were removed as afterwards it would be a difficult matter to remove the poles. He did not speak in a spirit of criticism, but just in the hope of aiding to make the streets of the City as beautiful as possible.

Mr. Armstrong said that the Council had been trying to arrange that very thing for months. Arrangements had been made for the removal of the C.P.R. poles on George Street from Charlotte Street to the station, and the Bell Telephone Co. did not object to removing their poles on that part of George Street. But the application to have the poles of the latter removed included the part of Charlotte Street to be paved, and it was here that the company were having difficulty to provide for distributing their wires. If any suggestion could be made by the Board as to how the removal of the poles could be effected the City Council, he thought, would be very pleased to receive it. But to pass a resolution such as had been suggested (which would only add to the pressure of the matter on the Council) he thought would be utterly useless as they were already doing all they could in the matter.

Mr. Turner said that a resolution was not necessary, but the Council would understand that they would receive the full support of the Board of Trade in any expense they (the Council) incurred in the matter of arranging to have the poles removed.

Purchasing of Fair Grounds.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt represented the Directors of the Industrial Exhibition. He announced that the matter the Directors wished to bring to the attention of the Board was the purchasing of the Fair grounds. The Fair Directors were going to ask the Council to endorse their bonds for the purchase of the Exhibition grounds. Already the Directors had been offered $20,000 for their option on the grounds and they were sure that by selling the east ten acres of them they could pay for the other twenty. The Board put itself on record to support the Directors in their request to the Council.

A communication was received from the Single Tax League asking the Board to sign a petition for the Government to take over the C.N.R. railway.

Mr. Ackerman expressed the opinion that Canada was already over-railwayed and thought the suggestion was an absurd one. On the motion of Messrs. Ackerman and Munro, no action was taken.

A communication was received from the Detroit Chamber of Commerce asking that the Board favour the reducing of the amount of license that an autoist from the States has to pay to run his car in Ontario. The project outlined suggested that the fee be lowered to the residents of those States who extended a similar courtesy to Ontario residents motoring in the United States. The Detroit Chamber of Commerce has been instrumental in having the license to Ontario joy riders kept down to three dollars in the State of Michigan. Ontario charged Michigan motor enthusiasts $10. The matter was referred to the Executive Council.

QUEEN ZEPHRA WAS SPARKLING SUCCESS

Brilliant Extravaganza Successfully Produced by Big Company of Local Amateurs at the Grand Last Night.

A TREAT FOR EYE AND EAR

A logical plot with enough dramatic climaxes to be interesting, a melange of tuneful music, pretty dances and drills, and a series of beautiful stage pictures all combined to make the extravaganza Queen Zephra at the Grand Opera House last night one of the most delightful events of its kind ever seen here. The production was under the direction of Mr. H. J. Booth, who staged a similar performance here a number of years ago, and was under the auspices of the Conservatory of Music orchestra. A cast of 175 young people took part and the striking success of the entertainment is a tribute alike to the efficiency of the training methods of Mr. Booth, and to the genius of the members of the cast. To produce such an ambitious offering in the short space of three weeks is indeed a triumph and Mr. Booth and his company are both to be congratulated. Queen Zephra will be repeated to-night, Thursday night, and on Friday afternoon, and should draw capacity houses throughout. Last night's audience was delighted with the performance and indicated their pleasure by almost constant applause.

The title role of the operetta was charmingly played by Miss Lillian Rush, whose bearing was truly regal and who gave her lines with an appreciation of their import. Mrs. Perrin was a delightful Neyera, alike from a histrionic and a vocal standpoint. Her song numbers "Tell Me, Cupid," and "Dreaming You Love Me Yet," were most artistically sung. Miss A. L. Beatty was effectively cast as Flora, and her dramatic story of Decius' misdeeds was cleverly handled. Miss Katie Leary's elocutionary ability was well illustrated by her portrayal of the part of the Fairy God-mother. Eddie Hanrahan played the part of King Decius with an evident appreciation of its possibilities while his splendid voice was most advantageously displayed in the solo "I am King," which was enthusiastically received. W. Collins was a manly Prince, and a gallant lover while he sang the serenade "Miladi" in the second act in splendid fashion. Alex. Primeau gave a clever impersonation of the part of Sir Alexis, and Vernon Morphet was a capital Sir Solon, captain of the guard. Little Helen Fisk as Cupid, made a charming picture when she appeared in the spot light. The other parts were in capable hands.

The scene in the Grotto of Golden Ferns into which was woven a series of clever dances, marches and song numbers was one of the most effective of the programme, and one that most clearly showed Mr. Booth's ability as an instructor. Dance after dance was performed in splendid style. Flower and garland dances, the dance petite by the Fire Flies, the dance Venetienne by the Castanets, the dance of the nymphs by the Graces, the dance exquisite, and the dance comique by the news boys, all took the house by storm. Mrs. Lytle contributed a solo dance in this part of the programme that was very cleverly executed with rare daintiness and grace. After a grand ensemble of dances, there followed a pot pourri of song numbers by the peasants and yeomen. "I Love You," "Phoebe," "Brush By," "Far, Far Over the Sea" and "Baby," being effectively sung. The duet "Louisiana Lou," by Mrs. McElderry and Mr. Booth, was an effective climax to this most pleasing number.

In the third act the drill of the Red Hussars, a series of pretty march movements by sixteen young ladies was executed with a precision and snap that won hearty applause, while the "Miss Commodore" number, with the solo splendidly taken by Miss Ruby Quartermaine was another winner. The shower of serpentine confetti which followed this number was a fitting and spectacular finale to the act.

Act IV was a grand transformation scene in which the majority of the cast were seen in a series of beautiful tableaux in five scenes, the effect being wholly pleasing.

Miss Aillen Sullivan presided at the piano while the Grand Opera House orchestra supplied the music for the operetta. Last night's audience had another treat in the presence of the Conservatory Orchstra, which under the direction of Mr. Gliddon, played most delightfully between the acts.

Following was the cast and synopsis:

INSPECTOR SPENCE COMPLETES TWO YEARS' SERVICE

Was Appointed Head of the City's Sanitary Work Two Year's Ago To-day and Has Done Much Toward Improving Local Conditions

SOME ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Sanitary Inspector Spence concludes to-day two years service as a City official. When he entered upon his work its details were somewhat obscure, except that he was to have charge of the work previously performed by the Police Department, to assist Dr. McPherson and to see that the Health Act was enforced.

Since that time his duties have broadened considerably, and during the two years Mr. Spence has been engaged in assisting in the preparation of new legislation, all of which has been directed toward making Peterborough a cleaner and better place for its people.

The Milk Question.

The Sanitary Inspector's visits to the premises of milk dealers have resulted in the obtaining of the cooperation of many of the milkmen in the furtherance of sanitary methods. A few weeks ago Mr. Spence stated that he was greatly pleased with the cleanliness of the barns and stables of some of the dealers. These men had done practically everything possible to protect the purity of the milk they delivered.

Other work undertaken and accomplished is fresh in the memories of the citizens. Some of the changes authorized by the Board of Health and the Medical Health Officer which have been carried out by Inspector Spence are found in the following list:

Collection of garbage.
Erection of Incinerator.
Compulsory sewer connections.
Market regulations.
Bakeshop regulations.
Licensing of eating houses.
Licensing of scavengers.
Covering of manure heaps.
Inspection of milk supply.
Exposure of food stuffs by-law resurrected and rejuvenated.

NEW BUILDING SITES IN THE WEST WARD

A new sphere of building activity will be thrown open in a short time. The Examiner learns on good authority that the Cox property at the head of Hunter Street, is to be divided into building lots and placed on the market in a short time. It is likely that application will be made to have Hunter Street extended through the property.

NO DECORATIONS ARE ALLOWED

Flags, Streamers or Pennants Must Not Fly From Automobiles

The Motor Vehicles Act has been further amended by the Ontario Legislature by the insertion of the following clause:

"No motor vehicle while travelling upon a highway shall have attached to it and exposed to view any flag, streamer or similar decoration made of bunting, paper or similar material."

The above clause puts a ban on pennants and other similar decorations that are so often seen flying from the sides of automobiles.

DANGER OF DELAY.

Nothing but commendation is due the combined effort of the Board of Trade and the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association to have Grand Trunk trains serve the wharf at Lakefield, instead of ending their northward journey at the station. The one thing wrong about the action proposed is that it is perhaps too late to have any effect the coming season. Great bodies move slowly and it will take some time to get the matter put before the Railway Commission, so that it can be seized of the situation and take the action in the public interests, which it is the Commission's duty to take. It's a poor farmer that puts off preparation for seeding till the time for seeding is at hand. And public bodies that have to do with slow moving, if in the end, sure moving bodies, should begin in time. If the Cottagers' Association had begun action in earnest to secure the cooperation of the Railway Commission, at the end of last summer's season, they would have had greater chance of getting the advantages they seek for the present season.

NOT "IN POLITICS."

The Monetary Times, in discussing the fight between the Toronto and the Provincial Hydro Commissions, says "the Monetary Times has never entered the sphere of politics." Yet on nearly the same page, in referring to a tabulatoin giving Canada among the nations a favourable rating in the matter of "official corruption," the Times states that the table must have been compiled "before the news came to hand of the Transcontinental report." This is to imply that the report showed "official corruption." The Times knows, and everybody who reads the report knows, that even the partisan commission did not report one iota of "official or other corruption" in connection with the construction of the Transcontinental. Only partisanship of the rankest kind broadcasted the charge, that was not contained in the report itself that great corruption had been committed in connection with the building of the railway. The Monetary Times may not as it thinks, have entered "the sphere of politics," but it endorses a partisan insinuation, that conveys a vast untruth.

CHURCH PROGRESS.

The reports of Anglican church vestry meetings throughout the country indicate a general condition of material prosperity — finances, etc., in good condition. Such reports all coming at Easter, in the case of the Anglican church,are supplemented in character by the reports of other church bodies held at other times of the year. All these agree in the matter of showing material prosperity. It would be a nice matter to decide, if spiritual and moral results could be tabulated, like a financial statement, whether the material prosperity of all the churches is in any considerable sense an adequate expression of the results achieved or experienced in the real domain of the church's work. Have spiritual progress and moral uplift been accompaniments of— echoes of the grosser note—of church progress? If this is so we may rejoice in the advance the church is making, the strengthening grip it is taking upon the people. And it is probable that this is, to some degree, at least, the case. The singerity of religious and other interest, is, as a rule, attested by the willing ness to go down into the pocket. As a rule people will not part with money unless with the assurance of getting value, or from a sense of duty. If the popular sense of duty leads to liberal support of church enterprises it is the charitable view to take that there is a good deal of heart interest in the work of the churches; that the influence of its teaching has entered into the spirit and life of the worshippers at its shrines or, to be on safe ground of statement, the occupants of the pews.

SPRING LONGINGS.

We all welcome the spring, especially spring after a long, tedious winter like last winter, which has stood on the order of its going in a most exasperating way. With every spring comes a physical condition, or a combination of physical and mental condition, which has popularly been named "spring fever"—a sense of lassitude and condition of physical inertia due to sudden warmth, with winter clothing still in evidence. There is another still more serious accompaniment of spring— spring longing, really spring homesickness. Many of us, if not most, have been separated from the environments of our younger days, and when spring opens a new life in nature, the mind goes back to the scenes of early days—the rampant brooks, in spring flood; the greening hillsides; the bursting buds; the bustling birds busy with mating and nesting, and all the activities of nature that spring time brings into more lively play and more appealing evidence. We become homesick for the home of youth and happy, care-free days. All this comes to all native Canadians, blessed with the painful but precious gift of a little imagination. But it comes with intenser force to the natives of other lands, who have adopted this land as their home. The Irishman, to whom the very soil of his native land is dear, thinks in the spring time of the dear old Green Isle taking on new greenness and new beauty under the warm touch of spring. The Scotchmen, never feels the land o' cakes so dear as when the wakening spring in Canada stirs thoughts of spring among the lochs and hills of his native land. The Englishman, whether city or country born, feels a new affection for the beauty, brightness and charm of Home, when the blood of spring stirs its soil and wakes riotous growth of plant and flower in lane and hedgerow. In another place in this issue is reprinted a charming little poem, "The Immigrant," written by a member of the press gallery, Ottawa. It is a touching picture of the vision that comes to the expatriated Londoner —a vision of the delirium of spring fever, spring longing. It is a picture of Home and its spring-time charm, suggested by our tardy spring, that will tear-dim many a Cockney eye in Peterborough. How dear is the home of our youth, how sweet its memories, when it is a home of beauty and its memories, memories of delights in the season of spring as it comes in the elect lands of England, Ireland and Scotland! Their sons in Canada gethere worldy gain and wider opportunities; but nothing can blur the vision of the beauty and charm of their native land when spring comes—

"When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver white
And cuckoo birds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight."

ZAM-BUK SAVED HIS FINGER

When Blood Poisoning Followed a Cut.

Mr. Albert Brennan, butcher of 141 Lindsay Avenue, Toronto, has good cause to be thankful for Zam-Buk! While at work, he cut the middle finger of the left hand. Some disease germs—of which the air is full—entered the wound, and next day the finger was swollen and painful. He bathed it in hot water and applied some ordinary ointment, but the pain got worse and the swelling continued. Not only so, but the area of the inflammation extended, until from finger to elbow was inflammed and sore, and he knew that blood-poisoning had set in. He had to give up his ordinary work, and suffered acute pain.

Finally he decided to enter St. Michael's Hospital, but just before doing so, a friend advised him to try Zam-Buk. Mr. Brennan acted on this advice, and soon proved Zam-Buk's great value. He says: "It cured the pain almost as soon as applied, and within a day of first commencing the Zam-Buk treatment, I was back at work! Of course, I dont mean that in that time the wound was healed, but the pain had gone and the danger from blood-poisoning was averted. After that, healing was only a matter of a short time. I have no hesitation in saying that Zam-Buk saved my finger, and I am very glad to let you state these simple facts publicly."

Zam-Buk is equally effective for piles, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, ringworm, children's rashes, scalp sores, chapped hands, frost bite, and cold sores. Every household should keep a supply handy, and no mother should be without it in the house. Sold by all druggists and stores, 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse substitutes.

ADAM, THE TRUST-MAKER

Ontario has the greatest trust-maker in Canada. Sir Max Aitken, W. Grant Morden and all the other high financiers take off their hats to Adam Beck. He has made the Ontario Hydro-Electric the greatest trust in that province. It crushes out opposition with ruthless precision. Now he proposes a Hydro-Electric Railway trust, with electric railways all over Ontario, financed with bonuses from the Ontario and Dominion Governments. Aided by Controller Tommy Church, of Toronto, and Mr. J. W. Lyon, he has been bombarding both Governments—not asking, but demanding, support.

Those who know the Honourable Adam Beck claim that this is but the beginning. The latest rumour says that he has found W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., too slow for him, and there is a proposition afoot to make him the sole dictator, or to give him two men who will be more subservient. He will then proceed with his new plans. One of them is thought to be a merger of all the newspapers of Ontario, and the passing of a law that every newspaper which does not support Adam, the trust-maker, shall not be allowed to exist. The Honourable Adam will then be greater than Sir Hugh Graham or Lord Northcliffe, and be on a par with Kaiser William and Czar Nicholas.

Once he has full control of the newspapers, he will refuse to let any merchant or manufacturer advertise in them who won't use Hydro power and ship freight over the Hydro Electrics. This will insure the success of both these undertakings. He will then have the Canadian Manufacturers' Association eating out of his hand.

Later he may raise a million dollars on the credit of the Province of Ontario and take over all the banks. This will enable him to refuse loans to anyone who doesn't use Hydro power, travel only over Hydro railways and advertise only in Hydro newspapers. Then Adam, the trust-maker, will be supreme. He will have outdistanced Alexander, Charlemagne and Napoleon, and will go down in history as the greatest conqueror the world has ever produced.— Canadian Courier.

WAYS AND WORKS OF ONTARIO'S DARK-LANTERN BRIGADE

The electors of Ontario would do well to consider the methods of the dark-lantern brigade, of which Mr. Howard Ferguson is the controlling spirit. For many years the Public Accounts committee has been the means for the elucidating of information regarding the spending of the money of the public. Doubtful expenditures have been freely inquired into, and the relations between members of the Government and contractors or officials fully disclosed.

An amazing change has occurred during the past years under the chairmanship of Mr. Howard Ferguson. He evidently conceives it to be his duty to prevent witnesses from disclosing anything that may prove injurious to the Government. His method of conducting the examination into the Hanna incident last session was little short of scandalous. He acted not as a presiding judge, but as chief counsel for the Provincial Secretary. It was because of his interposition that Mr. Taylor was permitted to leave the witness stand without telling whether he had given $500 to Mr. Hanna for political purposes of his own volition or at the demand of the Provincial Secretary. The circumstances attending the gift were undeniably important, as disclosure would have enabled the public to judge more certainly as to Mr. Hanna's culpability. Mr. Ferguson stood squarely in the way to save the Provincial Secretary.

That his services were regarded as invaluable to the Government was indicated recently when he forfeited his seat in the Legislature and laid himself open to an action for the recovery of a huge money penalty for voting in the House while in the employ of the Dominion Government. With indecent haste an Act of indemnity was put through in a single protracted session under which he was restored to his place as a member of the Legislature. In an interview published in his own personal organ shortly afterward Mr. Ferguson said the reason for this action was that he was Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, which met next day, and the Government wanted him there as Chairman.

Once more, in the Snider affair, he is justifying the confidence placed in him by this Government with things to conceal. Inspector Snider has been charged with going up and down Huron, Peel and Welland while drawing a salary as an officer of the License Department, and professing to speak the mind of the Government in opposing the adoption of the Scott Act. If he had had no instructions to do so—if he deceived the Conservative electors to whom he spoke by falsely representing the position of the Government—he would undoubtedly have been dismissed. No one supposes that what he did was done "off his own bat." The general belief is that he was the mouthpiece of Mr. Hanna, who, while openly professing to have the temperance cause at heart, was thus secretly doing his best to defeat the Scott Act.

When Inspector Snider was before the Public Accounts Committee and a few questions and answers would have disclosed the truth, Mr. Ferguson promptly ruled that the committee was dealing with the accounts of 1913, and that the events in question had occurred in 1914. He was technically right there, but he was entirely wrong in refusing to admit a motion to ask the House to permit the committee to go into the Snider incident, even if that involved taking up 1914 accounts. Mr. Ferguson may be able to prevent the putting of questions to Mr. Snider, and the House may sustain him in ruling that the accounts of 1914 must not be probed for a year, but the electors know what his action means. They cannot fail to understand that there is something discreditable concealed behind all these points of order and that Mr. Ferguson is doing his best to conceal it. As the chief of Ontario's dark-lantern brigade he is a distinguished success. But what do temperance Conservatives think of him?

TWENTY YEARS AGO on the First of March next, a well-known resident of this city took out at age 20 a 20 pay 20 year endowment policy for $1000, No. 46960, in the Sun Life of Canada.

The yearly premium he paid on the participating plan for 10 years only was.....$49.80

The yearly premium he would have to pay on the non-participating plan for the ten years is.....$62.25

Extra paid for profits for ten years.....$ 87.85

He received in cash at the end of 20 years, $1,279.35, that is, the $70.50 extra that he paid for profits yielded him $279.35, almost 400 per cent.

Or, he could draw out $736.45 in cash, which is $43.45 more than all he paid in, and receive a fully paid-up participating policy for life.

You can never obtain such results as these on the non-participating plan unless you die and die early, so that the price will not become too high.

BIG AGRICULTURAL LAND OPENING

TWELVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY TRACTS of five and ten acres each to be granted to prospective settlers in throwing open Twenty Thousand Acres of Rich, Southern Georgia Land, which is admirably adapted to the growing of celery, sweet and Irish potatoes, cantaloupes, water melons, corn, oats, cotton, hay—in fact, all staple crops grown in this fertile section, as well as a large variety of semi-tropical fruits, and the famous immensely profitable paper-shell pecans.

Providing you are eligible under the classifications prescribed by us, you are now offered an excellent opportunity to break away from the drudgery and toil of a small wage, or working for the benefit of landlords, and go back to a land of plenty, to which, if granted, you will hold a warranty deed and abstract.

The best security on earth is the earth itself, and in it is the basis of all wealth. Owners of productive lands are benefiting by the increasing high cost of living, while others are suffering from it.

An Opportunity to Secure Rich Productive Land Without Capital

You will not be required to leave your present surroundings now. All we ask of those to whom we grant tracts is that they plant, or arrange to have planted, a crop of one of the above-mentioned products within three years, after which we will have it operated (harvested and replanted) for grantees, in consideration of 25 per cent of the net profits derived from the sale of the crops, thereby allowing such time as they determine just what the yield of their acres amounts to. Consider what this may mean as a source of income, when statistics show that the yield of one acre of celery amounted to $1,240.45, and that one acre of well-cared-for paper shell pecans, in full bearing, should net its owner as high as $500.00 per year. We are of the opinion that after it is proven by actual results obtained in operating the land that they will need no further urging, and waste no time in locating in this land of plenty. We also require grantees to occupy the land within ten years, or sell it to some one who will occupy it; otherwise it reverts back to the grantor.

The land included in this opening is located directly on and adjoining the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, about twenty-five miles west of Brunswick, a thriving city of fifteen thousand, having direct steamship service to New York and Boston, and excellent railroad transportation facilities to all points. The average temperature for the months of the year, from April to October, is 77 degrees; the climate is most healthful, delightful, and invigorating, and there is an ample rainfall of 51 inches per year.

OUR AIM IS FOR MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL RESULTS

As we are extremely desirous of having settlers locate on this property, and assist in its development, and thereby greatly increase the value of surrounding and intervening property, which we will hold, and to increase the traffic along the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, and thus facilitate the service, we feel warranted in granting these tracts to those who register with us. We also have in mind business and residence plots which we will offer for sale after the opening, but which will not be included in it. We have "money-making afterward" considerations in this liberal-minded opening, similar to those of the Northern Pacific and other railroads when they granted their lands.

If my application for registration is accepted, please send me, without obligation, further and complete information and particulars, including maps of the land, showing its exact location on the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad, its transportation facilities, agricultural, fruit and nut-growing possibilities, etc.

Very truly yours,

.....

MISFIT IMMIGRATION SWELLS ORPHANAGE AND HOSPITAL EXPENDITURE

Dr. Bruce Smith Points Out Folly of Indiscriminate Immigration—Figures Tell Their Own Story—$3,155,340 For Hospitals.

REPORT FOR YEAR 1913

The year just passed was an important one in the hospital life of the Province of Ontario. During the twlve months ended September 30, 1913, there was expended on hospitals in Ontario $3,155,340.

There are 89 public hospitals, 57 private hospitals, 37 refuges, 8 sanatoria for consumptives, 33 orphanages, 3 homes for incurables, 3 convalescent homes and 31 county houses of refuge in the province, all of which have been inspected by Dr. Bruce Smith, under the direction of Hon. W. J. Hanna, who to-day submitted an interesting report to the Legislature.

Healing the Sick.

The number of patients treated last year in the hospitals was 68,738, of whom 3,608 were patients at the beginning of the year, and 60,920 admitted during the twelve months. There were 4,210 births in the hospitals. These figures do not include outdoor patients.

The number of deaths in hospitals and charities during the year was 4,058, or 5.09 to the number under treatment. The total days' stay in hospitals was 1,406,677.

The provincial grants to hospitals was $232,276, and subscriptions and donations, $231,515. The amount received from all sources was $2,026,035, exclusive of the $1,183,762 on capital account.

Effect of Immigration.

Dr. Bruce Smith directs attention to the ever-increasing number of undesirables and unsuitable immigrants who become public charges soon after landing, and thus there is just cause for complaint from those whose generosity keeps the charitable institutions going.

Disgraceful System.

"Any system," he says, "that permits steamships or any other agency to induce immigration, without proper discrimination, cannot be defended. During the past year it has cost the hospitals and the public charities of Ontario many thousands of dollars to provide for people who should never have been allowed to embark for this country. The fault lies in the system that allows these poor people to have their little means taken from them on the other side of the Atlantic and told they will be well looked after in Canada."

Children in Orphanages.

This phase of the question is reflected again in the report dealing with the 33 orphanages, which contain a total of 5,361 for the year, or an increase of 263. These are children for the most part of undesirable immigrants. The total cost of these orphanages during the year was $317,605, containing a Government grant of $18,706. The recommendation is made that children placed in these orphanages should be placed out in foster homes after a stated period.

Comparative Cost.

A comparative table of cost for hospitals is given in the report. In 1893 in 34 hospitals there were 14,363 patients with maintenance cost at $321,457. In 1903, 61 hospitals contained 39,223 patients with a maintenance cost of $852,240. In 1913 the 89 hospitals cared for 68,738 with a maintenance cost of $1,971,577.

TREES IN JACKSON PARK SUBJECTED TO VANDAL'S WORK

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir—I have noticed from time to time the interest taken by you in calling attention to the necessity of preserving our city trees. Therefore kindly let me relate what I consider a vandal act of the worst kind. In Jackson Park a balsam tree has been sawn down, the top sawed off, evidently for a Christmas tree, and the remainder left to lie where it fell. On the picnic part of the grounds a small tree, about the size used for a Christmas tree, has been haggled off. The perpetrator of this deed evidently lost interest in the undertaking or had been interrupted, as the tree was left lying on the ground. There are no notices in Jackson Park to warn people against such vandal conduct.

Many of the beautiful trees in Jackson Park have already been killed by burning brush, etc., in the attempt to clear up the Park.

I hope, Mr. Editor, this information may be of some interest to you.

OLD FAMILY BIBLE WITH A HISTORY

Mr. W. C. Mikel, K.C., Belleville, possesses an old family Bible with an interesting history. The following description of it and its "career," so to speak, appeared in the magazine section of Saturday's Globe:

W. C. Mikel, K.C., of Belleville, former President of the Ontario Bar Association, owns what is probably the oldest Bible in Ontario. It was published in A.D. 1700. That is a long time ago, and the world has seen many changes down through those two hundred and fourteen years. At the time it came into existence, there was no United States of America, and George Washington had not been born, nor had the great Napoleon appeared on the scene.

The Bible has been in the Mikel family since 1754, one hundred and sixty years ago, and six generations of the one family have thumbed and gazed upon the old book. It is five inches thick from cover to cover, fourteen inches long and nine inches wide. The binding consists of wood covered with leather. It contains one hundred and twenty-three illustrations about six inches square, with a large portrait engraved the full size of the book on the second page. Judging from the expense attached to publishing at the time this volume was published, it must have cost a considerable sum, but its value is now, no doubt, many times its original cost.

A few years after the close of the war of American independence, young Godlive Mikel, who had fought on the side of the British, decided to come to Canada, and his mother gave him the Bible. It was somewhat big and clumsy to carry around, but he and his family have stuck to it pretty well through all the vicissitudes from early pioneer life down to the present time.

It is something to trace descecnt back to a man who started life with a big Bible and a name like Godlive, and it says something for the parents who gave him that start.

Note.—It is understood that Mr. Mikel would be pleased to hear from persons possessing old Bibles, with a description of them.

Libraries For Counties Were Recommended

At the Annual Meeting of the Ontario Library Association

The suggestion was made at the Ontario Library Association Convention that county libraries should be opened for the use of farmers and suburban residents.

Speaking generally about the work of the association, Dr. E. A. Hardy, secretary of the association, said that there were about 75 municipalities in Ontario that did not have libraries. In some other places the libraries were practically dead. The inspector of libraries had tried to revive "the dead and dormant" libraries, but most of them were in poor soil."

In referring to the report of the legal committee wherein it was recommended that the association ask that the Public Libraries Act be extended so that a formation of township libraries could be made. Dr. Hardy said that he believed the association should take the desired step, but that the clause should be put in operation in the counties and not in townships. He did not think that townships were large enough to furnish resources to support a library and favoured the county as the unit. In townships there was a danger of lots of spirit in founding, but little left for maintaining.

"The adequate solution of the problem lies in the working out of a county library system. The municipality is a unit too small to furnish the resources," said Dr. Hardy. The library needed an area and the county was that area.

"ABOLISH THE BAR" IS VOTED DOWN ONCE MORE

Government Refuses the Liberal Proposal in Spite of a Frank Offer by Mr. Rowell

A SPLENDID ADDRESS

TORONTO, April 15. — For the third time in as many years the Liberal proposal to abolish the bar in Ontario was submitted to the Legislature yesterday, and was again rejected by a straight party majority. Not even the offer of the leader of the Opposition to join hands with the Government and by united effort eliminate entirely the one institution that was more responsible than any other for the recognized evils of the liquor traffic was accepted.

Mr. Rowell began by declaring that all in touch with the social problems of the province stood behind the temperance movement. It was recognized that the prohibition of importation or manufacure was not feasible, but the proposal of abolishing the bar held forth no legal difficulties.

Local option had proved "one of the most valuable instruments for fighting the liquor traffic and would always get the support of the opposition," but it was insufficient in the places where it was needed most.

"Under the local option law as it stands, I venture to say that it would be impossible to carry it in any of the larger cities of the province," he declared, stating inthe same connection that in every contest of the kind the measure had been overwhelmed.

The Opposition leader called attention to the excellent work of the Provincial Secretary on the prison farms, but urged that a better thing would be to remove the stumbling block of liquor from the feet of those who populated these institutions.

Mr. Rowell then dealt with the reason why shops are not included in his measure, and explained that his party had gone as far as the organized temperance party asked them to go. He pointed out that his measure left this part of the reform entirely to the community. Under the act it would be possible for each district to abolish the sale of liquor in shops should they think it advisable.

It had been said, and rightly, Mr. Rowell concluded, that some who had hitherto stood by them had now departed, but even so there was more to offset this loss. In all English-speaking countries the tide was running against the open bar and the organized traffic and the vote on the Scott Act in Ontario counties showed the determination of the people.

In his introductory remarks Hon. Mr. Hanna referred to the deputation of young Conservatives and the argument that the Government should accede to their request, and that in such a case the Opposition, with their leader, would walk across the floor to the Government benches. The old Liberal Government had enjoyed a request from 192,000 people in a plebiscite and yet had not hearkened. For long years they had waited and no response came, and yet in all that time not a man in the Government was condemned by the present leader of the Opposition. If to-day there was any moving along in temperance lines the Whitney Government was largely responsible.

The Minister drew a comparison between the actual legislation placed on the statute book by the respective Governments. That of the Ross Government was summed up in the regulating of druggists' licenses, the arranging of brewers' licenses and other minor affairs. They were years of silence, with no progress, and then came Sir James Whitney with a pledge to the province, a pledge which had been steadily redeemed from the first day of power. The licenses had been cut from 2,516 to 1,383 and 81 shop licenses had gone forever.

A recent meeting in a northern county, where a peculiar document, either ballot or funeral notice, had been circulated to a large extent. It bore the words, "Rowell and Reform or Whitney and Whisky."

"Some one is responsible," said the speaker, "and the idea has been carried into politics in a fashion to be regretted."

Mr. Hanna then moved an amendment to the resolution declaring that the House recognized the necessity for curbing the liquor traffic, commending the local option laws and reaffirming belief in the efficacy of abolishing the treating habit.

Albert Grigg (Algoma) moved an amendment to the amendment, complimenting the Government on their administration.

THE RED WIDOW IS COMING

"The Red Widow" which comes to the Grand Opera House Tuesday, April 21st, is one of those rare gems among musical plays that have a real plot.

The story, which is consistent, is followed closely throughout. "Cicero Hannibal Butts" is in London with his wife, who is an ardent suffragette. They are supposed to be on their way to Russia, but at the last moment Mrs. Butts receives an invitation to lead a band of suffragettes in a demonstration on the House of Parliament and to help throw a few bricks. It is at this point that "Anna Varvara," known to the Russian secret police as "The Red Widow" overhears Mrs. Butts declaration that she is going to stay behind.

The Red Widow with her good looks and wiles, subjects Butts to the dangers of being mixed up in matters that are dangerous for Russia; she persuades him to allow her to cross the frontier as Mrs. Butts. He, willing to help a lady in distress, agrees.

The second act, private parlour in the Hotel de l'Europe in St. Petersburg, and here Butts realizes that he has jumped into a mess of trouble with both feet for trying to help the Red Widow. In this act is sung the song-hit of the show, "I shall never look at a pretty girl again."

From now on the complications grow. Melodrama, comedy, farce, and music are merged together into a bubbling melody of amusement.

Dr. Margaret Shallenberger, who has been elected state commissioner of education in California, receives a salary of $4,000 a year.

LET THE ALBANIANS STARVE; THEY'RE ONLY MOHAMMEDANS

A Gruesome After Light of the Balkan War as Written by Herbert Corey—Albanians Were Non-Combatants, But Christian Nations Show no Interest Although the People are Starving After the Country Had Been Despoiled During the War

NEW YORK, April 15.—If only they were not Mohammedans——

William Willard Howard has returned from Albania, to tell of the great tragedy which is being enacted there. Albanians are dying of starvation at the rate of 100 a day. The total cost in lives may reach to 60,000.

"This," said Mr. Howard, "is a story of aggression by Christians against Mohammedans. If conditions were reversed—if the Mohammedan were starving and burning and dynamiting and bayoneting the Christian — there would be help in plenty."

Here is a specific statement of the results of the operations of Servian and Montenegrin troops in Albania, ten months after the year in the East had ended. Mind you, Albania took no part in that war. Albanians are Mohammedans, but they would not fight for Turkey. They are Mohammedans—therefore, fair game for the Christian nations of eastern Europe.

"Servian and Montenegrin troops," said Mr. Howard, "to my personal knowledge, for I travelled all over this territory:

"Devastated 100 villages.

"Killed 8,000 Albanians.

"Burned and dynamited 12,000 houses.

"Rendered 125,000 people homeless.

"Destroyed $10,000,000 in property."

Inasmuch as Albania had been pretty thoroughly sacked and burned during the war, the people in the rural districts are dying from starvation. They have little food, and no way of getting any, and no one seems to care.

A GAME OF POLITICS.

"I made a careful examination of the village of Stebleva," said Mr. Howard, "which may be taken as a typical example of conditions through the Servianed portion of Albania. I found in Stebleva 90 families of refugees. Of these, 53 families had corn bread enough for one day only. The remainder of the refugees had corn bread enough for perhaps a week."

"What happened?"

"God knows," said he. "They're dead, probably. I took photographs of men and women and children dying of starvation in the roads. I personally know that many of these were dead the next day."

A word about Howard himself. He was at one time on the personal staff of Joseph Pulitzer. For seven years he has been engaged in relief work. Sultan Abdul Hamid once offered $5,000 for his head. The Standard Oil Company smashed his oil refinery in Texas. He organized and carried on the Cuban industrial relief work after our war with Spain. For two and one-half years he helped Armenians into Persia, after the massacres in Eastern Turkey. He is a slender, blond bearded, blue-eyed man of perhaps 50 years.

"I travelled 400 miles through Albania to see for myself just what Servia and Montenegro were doing there," said he. "Of that distance I made 150 miles on foot. I was twice shot at by Montenegrin troops."

The reason for the aggressions of the neighbour nations is their greed for land. Albania has 350 miles of Adriatic seaboard. Servia wants a seaport on the Adriatic. Montenegro and Greece want a slice of the Albanian territory. The obvious way to obtain their ends is to keep Albania drenched in blood. By and by the powers will step in—"to restore order"—and the three will get what they want. The plan has the further advantage of being safe. Christian nations will not brother to protect the Mohammedan Albanians.

"YOUR ATTACKING CHRISTIANITY."

"Last October," said Howard, "Austria served notice upon Servia to withdraw her troops from Albania within five days. Servia promptly replied that she had done so. But her troops are still there. Greece ostensibly withdrew her troops from southern Albania. But she merely took the men out of uniform and sent them back again in the guise of bandits. Only Montenegro withdrew. The Christian tribes of northern Albania are provided with rifles and Montenegro is afraid to take the slice of land given her by the powers."

Here is the manner in which the Servian troops operate against a non-combatant nation — a nation whose Mohammedan individuals are not even allowed to have firearms, unless the flintlock muskets of about the time of Scanderberg are considered arms. Remember that the Christian Albanians are not being assailed. Only the unarmed Mohammedans are being attacked.

"Serb regiments of 1,100 men, under the command of General Carlos Popovitch, one of the Belgrade regicides, entered Albania armed with kerosene oil force pumps and dynamite bombs. They captured such Albanian men as they could. Then they tied them together by the elbows and shot them down. The women were outraged. I believe that every woman who fell into the hands of Serb troops fell a victim to them. Then they were locked up in the houses and bombs planted in the walls. Kerosene oil would be sprayed over all and a fire started. When the flames reached the dynamite the walls were scattered. Albania is filled with fire blackened heaps of stone that once were homes."

He has a photograph of one house—to reach which a river was afforded and a mountain climbed—in which 11 old women were burned to death. Servia has denied none of the charges he makes. But when he placed his facts and photographs before the Macedonian and Balkan relief committees in London he received this reply:

"We do not admit that the Christian allies could be guilty of such atrocities."

AN APPEAL TO FARMERS.

He told more — and received this crushingly convincing reply:

"When you talk as you do, you are attacking the Christian religion."

The powers do not admit the truth of his charges — although Servia has not denied them. The East is a powder magazine with the fuse alight. The powers are watching the spark. The fact that Servia is making some portion of Albania ready for occupancy by exterminating the Albanians appeals to the powers only as a part of the technique of the great game being played in the Balkans. He placed these facts before the American board of commissioners of foreign missions in Boston—knowing that Missionary Kennedy, the one missionary in Albania, had kept that organization fully informed. It happens that the board is raising funds to build a college to save Albanian souls from the Mohammedan heaven. The need of corn bread to have Albanian bodies did not appeal.

"We cannot undertake a further campaign for Albania," was the reply.

So that he has appealed to the American farmer. He has formed a committee, headed by Charles R. Crane, the Chicago manufacturer, and Norman Hapgood, the New York editor, which consists of the editors of many of the agricultural papers of the country. He is asking farmers to send him seed corn by parcel post. If 60,000 bushels leave this port by May 1, Albania may raise a corn crop this year. If 240,000 other bushels leave somewhat later, thousands of Albanian lives will be saved. And if the corn does not reach Albania——

Well—the Albanians will die. That's all. After all, they are just Mohammedans.

THE COMING-OUT RECEPTION FOR MISS NANNO HAYES

Mrs. L. M. Hayes held one of the prettiest receptions of the season at her home, Reid street, on Easter Monday, for the coming out of her daughter, Nanno. The occasion also partook of a farewell before Mrs. Hayes' departure for Guelph.

Meadames Dean and Aylmer poured tea, Mrs. Fortye and Miss Lundy the coffee, and Mrs. Young and Miss Halliday had charge of the ices.

The rooms were decorated with Easter blooms and the table was centred with a cut glass basket of pink and white tulips and carnations. The assistants were Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Mrs. Basil Hall, Mrs. Foster Ambree and Mrs. Jack Hayes, of Toronto, Misses Pauline and Margaret Hayes, sisters of the debutante, and the Misses Norma and Phyllis Hayes, of Toronto, daughters of Mrs. F. Parry Hayes, Miss Collins, Miss Nan Hall, and Miss Pierce.

In the evening a house dance was held with over seventy-five of the city's younger set present. A buffet supper was served. The music for the dances was by Mr. Woodburn. While Peterborough society is graced by its newest debutante it is understood that it will be but for a short time on account of the removal of the family to Guelph in the near future.

APOLOGIZE OR FIGHT

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15—Senator Shively and a delegation of "Clean-'em-up" congressmen had a conference this afternoon with President Wilson and Secretary Bryan at the White House. After it Shively said: "The President has assured us that this was no rosewater demonstration at Tampico. It is to be apologize or bloodshed. He also assured us that there was no other foreign power behind this Government's move.

MILITARISM CONDEMNED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., April 15.—S. W. Michener, of Lambton, introduced a resolution to the public school section of the Ontario Educational Association this morning, which when it comes up for discussion to-morrow morning is liable to cause some liveliness.

In a few words this school teacher condemned militarism and military training in schools, and concluded with the motion that public schools or institutions of peace should show the authorities their disapproval of the whole military trend of the day. The motion was received in deadly silence, though some of the ladies present showed signs of approval.

Cavalry, Artillery And Infantry

The second regular drill of the season was held by the 57th Regiment last night. The routine was much as usual. A march out was the first order, after which the companies were detailed to drill, under their various commanders.

Sergt.-Inst. Dunkerley again had charge of a large recruit class, which is making rapid progress. There remains only one thing they should do. The Thursday night classes are very interesting, and the officers urge the attendance of recruits at these classes. They are very pleased indeed with the manner in which they are taking to the work, but ask their attendance at the Thursday night classes, to make them more efficient, and also to qualify them to enter the ranks sooner.

It has been definitely arranged that the Belleville Regiment, the 15th, will visit Peterborough on May 24th, and will remain here over the week-end. No details of the programme that will be carrid out, however, are to hand.

The men of the local regiment will be given a trip such as the Belleville Regiment are making to Peterborough, although the destination is not yet known. The men can, however, be assured of a good time.

The efficiency pay, earned by the men in their shooting matches last year at camp, was paid last night.

It is probable that Major Hayes, who has been appointed Judge of Wellington County, will resign his position, as Major, and paymaster of the regiment. Another appointment will follow.

The following were the orders, issued last night.

Orders by Officer Commanding 57th Regt. Peterborough Rangers.

1. The following are taken on the strength of the regiment.

To be corporals provisionally, Pte. C. Nichols, vice Corpl. G. Paux, discharged. Pte. E. Williams to complete establishment.

H. Co.—To be sergeant provisionally, Corp. A. Harper, vice Sergt. Gilbert, discharged. To be corporal provisionally, Pte. H. Pilling, to complete establishment.

The classes of instruction in connection with the 3rd Dragoons, have ceased, and the men have gone to Toronto for two weeks, to qualify for N.C.O.'s at Stanley Barracks. It is probable, and none the less hoped, that all will succeed. The Prince of Wales Own, will again camp at Petawawa this season, and it has been arranged to take the 57th to that military camp also Col. Sam Hughes will have supreme command of the camp this year.

The Artillery will soon be displaying activity. They will probably go to camp on June 13th this year, to Petawawa. Col. Young, in command, has asked for that date. Major G. S. Cameron, the local medico, has been appointed medical officer of the 19th Brigade, C.F.A.

DEBATE IS SUSPENDED TILL THURSDAY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 15.—Owing to the non-arrival in the Capital of a number of the members the debate on the budget will not be proceeded with in the Commons until Thursday. A number of Government bills will be taken up in the meantime. The budget debate will continue all next week, and it will be well toward the end of the month before other business can be taken up by the House.

Annual Meeting Of S. S. Council Yesterday

Officers Elected and Reports Were Presented

The annual meeting of the Council of the County of Peterborough Sunday School Association was held in the Board Room of the Y. M. C. A. here yesterday. The meeting was well attended, all the organized districts of the County being represented except Dummer. Miss Bertha Laine of Toronto, representing the Provincial Association, was present to consult with and advise the Council.

A financial statement was presented by the Treasurer, Mr. A. J. Johnston, which showed that while only one district, viz., Otonabee, had measured up to the standard set in the budget of a year ago, some advance had been made on the previous year and the statement was considered on the whole, very satisfactory.

The budget for the present year was fully considered and the following was agreed upon as the standard that should be aimed at by the different districts for the support of the work of the provincial and county organizations:

Otonabee	$30.00
Smith and Lakefield	35.00
Asphodel, Norwood and Hastings	20.00
Belmont and Havelock	15.00

TIGHT SKIRTS DELAY TRAFFIC

If Style Continues Another Step Will Be Required on the Street Cars

CONDUCTORS IN NEW ROLE

"Do you see that young women trying to get on the car?" said a street railway official to an Examiner reporter yesterday afternoon, as he pointed to a George Street car which was being delayed at Hunter Street while a stylishly dressed woman made several attempts to get on the car, each attempt meeting with failure because of a tight skirt. Finally the conductor had to assist the owner of the hobble.

"Do you know what these new fangled skirts are causing the local street railway company a financial loss every day because of increased delay to traffic?" continued the street railway official. "These new skirts are responsible for an increased delay to regular car schedule. A woman with a hobble skirt takes just twice as long to get on or off a car as one who is not hampered with these new freaks of fashion, and as time is money to a street car company, I figure out that the Peterborough Street Car Company is a loser to the extent of several dollars every day because of delay o traffic, occasioned by hobble skirts. If the style continues, and the company wishes to overcome the trouble of delay, it would seem that the only solution to the problem would be to add another step to the cars, and place the first one so close to the ground that women with hobble skirts would not be endangering their lives in trying to get on cars, while at the same time, they would be able to comply more readily with the conductor's command, 'step lively, please.' Either the hobble has got to go, or we will have to add more steps, and the hobble seems to have become a permanent thing, so there you are."

"Guilty My Lord" Said a Drunk

At Police Court This Morning—Contempt of Court Man Discharged

James Barber was charged with being found drunk in a public place before his Worship Police Magistrate Dumble, this morning. He pleaded guilty and was assessed the usual fine of $2.

"George Douglas, the same charge against you,' said the Court. "Are you guilty or not guilty.'

"I guess I am guilty, my Lord," replied the prisoner, who was released on his promise to pay the fine within ten days.

Roby Irwin, who has been in jail for the past ten weeks on a charge of contempt of Court, was released to-day. Irwin, it will be remembered, refused to tell where he got his liquor, after having pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk while on the black list.

BECKER'S TRIAL ON 6TH OF MAY

Special to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., April 15.—Former Lieutenant Becker looked thin, pale and nervous to-day in court when his second trial was fixed for May 6th.

MONTREALERS WERE SHEARED

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, P.Q., April 15—Prominent Montreal folks are said to be out from $20,000 to $25,000 as a result of a short stay in this City, Easter week, of a gentleman from across the Atlantic with a distinguished name and a skillful poker hand. He was lavishly entertained at the best houses in this City and had cleanly departed when Montrealers woke up to his duplicity.

ESTIMATES HELD BACK

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 1. — The Liberal members express some dissatisfaction over the fact that the estimates of the Militia and Public Works Departments have been held back. One of them stated this morning that if the Government had an idea they could get these votes through without discussion, towards the end of the session, they were very much mistaken. "We will discuss them thoroughly," he said, "if we have to remain [illegible]."

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN THE WEST END

Building operations in the West end of Peterborough appear to be very active this Spring. On Elias Avenue it is understood that three or four more houses will be under way immediately. The last lot on Margaret Avenue, owned by Mr. R. C. Braund, is being filled in with earth taken from the Charlotte Street Rink property, and a fine house will be built thereon. It is understood that on Victoria Heights it is the intention that half a dozen houses, at least, will be put up.

BURGLARS CAPTURED

FIRE DESTROYED GRAIN ELEVATOR AT REABORO

LINDSAY, April 14.— Last night about 11 o'clock the grain elevatory at Reaboro, owned by Thos. Skuce, was discovered to be on fire. The elevator, which is a total loss, was built about ten years ago by Jos. Eyres, of Toronto. The building and contents were insured in the Perth Mutual. Besides the building and oats, the elevator machinery was also destroyed.

Mr. Skuce has quite a few friends in Peterborough, and is a brother of Mr. W. J. Skuce, Albert Street.

OIL ONCE THROWN AWAY AS USELESS

Petroleum Once Regarded as Waste Matter is in the Infancy of Industry

The fruition of the world's discovered oil fields is becoming extended more widely every year, and the increasing area over which oil is found helps to prove the theory that petroleum is [illegible] of the delayed decomposition of marine life and vegetation of the carboniferous and tertiary periods; for though there are undoubtedly limits to prolific oil bearing strata, very few countries exist in which small quantities may not occur. Even in England small amounts have been noticed in deep wells at Willesden and Newark.

When in 1849 James Young first made mineral lubricants from oil issuing from the shales of the Riddings Colliery, and afterward obtained the oil by distilling certain Scotch shales and cannels at a low temperature, the lighter portions of the distillation were looked upon as waste products, only the heavy residue being needed as a lubricant. Young, however, discovered eventually that these lighter portions were being bought up ad shipped to Germany for use in specially constructed lamps, and having obtained patterns of these lamps he had them made in Edinburgh.

Ten years after the original discovery of shale oil, Colonel Drake, in sinking a well for brine in Pennsylvania, came across oil in quantity at a depth of about 69 feet, his well (despite the early difficulties of collection and storage) yielding about 2,000 barrels in a year. This led to an enormous number of wells being sunk near Oil Creek and along the valleys of the Alleghenies, where large volumes of oil were found, although at far greater depth than in the first instance.

Until 1861 these wells continued to yield a moderate supply, the oil having to be pumped, but in that year oil was found suddenly under enormous pressure at a depth of 460 feet, and some of the wells in the neighbourhood gave a yield of 2,500 barrels a day. Then came the time of oil fever in America, and prospecting began in every direction. Such quantities of oil were discovered that despite criminal waste due to the wells being sunk without proper provision for collecting the oil, the supply rapidly outran the demand, which was then in its infancy, and the price fell to such an extent that in many cases the barrels cost more than was fetched by their contents, the latter frequently being allowed to run to waste. Indeed, it is supposed that in Pennsylvania alone 10,000,000 barrels of oil were run down the streams, owing to the impossibility of dealing with the overglutted market.

Slowly, however, the market improved, and with the growth of the European demand that came into being, attention was drawn to the wealth of oil known to exist in the Baku district, of Russia, where up to that time the oil production had been a monopoly in the hands of Meersoeff, a trader. In 1872 the Government withdrew his concession and imposed a tax on the oil product, as a result of which the whole Apsheron Peninsula was developed rapidly and rich strata were pierced.

At present the world's supply of petroleum approximates to the enormous amount of 50,000,000 tons annually, more than 350,000,000 barrels, drawn from the following countries:

	Million Tons.
United States	31.40
Russia	9.00
Mexico	3.20
Roumania	1.80
Dutch East Indies	1.35
India	1.05
Other Countries	1.10

HOW TO KEEP ACTIVE

When Old Age Overtakes Us.

Mrs. John Widmayer of Jackson, Mich., says: "Although 69 years of age, and naturally, because of my advanced age, in an enfeebled condition, I can truthfully say that Vinol has done wonders to keep me as active as I am. It is the best medicine to create strength that I ever saw. This spring I was very much run down and worn out but I took Vinol and soon felt stronger and able to work about the house. I can recommend Vinol as a very invigorating tonic."

Should the system get run down—digestive organs weak — the blood thin and sluggish—take Vinol, which is a delicious combination of the medicinal — body-building properties of cods' livers, with the useless grease eliminated and tonic iron added. We regard Vinol as one of the greatest body - builders and strength creators in the world for aged people.

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction.

FLAGGED THE TRAIN

Special Wire to The Examiner:

GODERICH, Ont., April 15.—Quick action on the part of Joseph Linch, a farmer near Cameron Castle, probably saved the passengers of the Canadian Pacific train from loss of life and serious injury. Just before the train appeared at this point, which is around a quick curve, Linch noticed that many tons of bue clay, loosened by a thaw, had slipped down on the tracks. He flagged the train just in time.

FINAL EFFORT TO SAVE LEO FRANK

Young Man Will Be Executed on Friday if Attempt of His Attorneys is Unsuccessful

PUBLIC EXCITED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15—With the date fixed for the execution of Leo M. Frank but two days off, the public interest in the case has reached fever heat. The attorneys for the convicted young man will play their final card to-morrow when they will appear before the State Supreme Court and present an extraordinary motion for a new trial. It is expected that the new evidence gathered by Wm. J. Burns, and which the famous detective claims is of so important a character that it cannot be ignored by the court, will then be disclosed for the first time.

Whatever may be the strength and character of the new evidence upon which the plea for a new trial will be based, there is a general feeling in Atlanta to-day that Frank will not be executed Friday. Furthermore, the opinion is widespread that he will never go to the gallows. The basis for this opinion is probably due almost wholly to the campaign of publicity that has been waged in behalf of the young man. In the entire history of American courts there have been few, if any, cases in which a more vigorous effort has been made to save a person convicted of murder.

Not the least interesting feature of the Frank case is the remarkable turnabout that public sentiment has undergone in regards to the case. When, on August 26th last, the Jury returned a verdict of guilty and finding Frank guilty of the murder of little Maty Phagan, the large crowd that had assembled outside the courthouse received the news with noisy demonstrations. The verdict was greeted with cheering loud and long. Mounted policement rode through the crowd in an effort to disperse it, but the demonstrations continued unabated.

So far as the general public is aware there has been no new or important development in the Frank case since the verdict of guilty was returned. The evidence upon which the young man was convicted has not been upset in any important partticular. Yet public sentiment seems to have undergone a complete change and there is little doubt that any announcement of court action favourable to the convicted man would now be greeted with as much enthusiasm as that displayed when the verdict of guilty was announced eight months ago.

It will be one year on the 27th of this month since the body of 14-year-old Mary Phagan was found in the basement of the pencil factory where she was employed. Frank was the Superintendent of the factory. Up to the time of the tragedy he had enjoyed an excellent reputation. His home, originally, was in Brooklyn, where his parents still reside. Prior to coming to Atlanta he had been employed for a time in Boston. He was a member of several leading Jewish societies and he was looked upon by his friends as a capable young man of business.

Crimes against women had been alarmingly frequent in Atlanta and vicinity for a considerable period, prior to the murder of the Phagan girl. When her body was found bearing evidence that she had been attacked public feeling reached a high pitch. The Police Department naturally came in for severe criticism and this is one of the facts upon which emphasis is laid by those who are endeavouring to free Frank. The allegation is made that the police felt bound to take some immediate action in order to avoid criticism, and that Frank was arrested in consequence. Charges have been openly made, moreover, that his conviction was brought about by framed-up testimony.

Frank's trial took place July 28th, last. The only direct testimony against him was given by James Conley, a negro employed about the pencil factory. Conley swore that he had stood guard outside the factory while Frank was alone with the Phagan girl and later helped Frank carry the body to the basement where it was found. The negro also charged Frank with degeneracy. Later in the trial the defendant made a statement denying all knowledge of the crime.

PRESS FOR BUILDING OF NEW CANAL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 15—A huge delegation, representing the Federation of the Canadian Boards of Trade and Montreal Chamber of Commerce urged upon the Government the desirability of taking immediate steps to commence the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. All the towns up and down the Ottawa Valley were represented in the deputation which was one of the largest which ever came to the Capital. Mention was made of the fact that the Government had recently been waited upon by a large delegation from Ontario, urging a deep waterway from the head of the Great Lakes to Montreal, and the Government was told that the Georgian Bay Canal was even more important from the standpoint of national protection, as it would be far from the international boundary.

The usual promise of consideration was made by Ministers.

K. O. C. ADDRESS TO JUDGE L. M. HAYES

Delightful Evening at Simcoe Street Club House--Farewell to Prominent Member

Mr. L. M. Hayes, who was recently appointed senior judge of Wellington County, was honoured by the Knights of Columbus at an informal reception held last night. About seventy-five were present, and although the gathering felt that the occasion represented a farewell to one of its most prominent members, nevertheless, a very enjoyable evening was spent.

After cards and music, Dr. McNulty, lecturer of the society, who acted as chairman, spoke briefly of the purpose of the assembly, and called upon Mr. McElderry, G.K., to read the address from the members. The sentiment of the address congratulated Judge Hayes on his appointment to the honourable and responsible position of judge, an honour which was reflected upon the City, the local bar and the society. The Knights regretted the departure of Judge Hayes and his family from Peterborough, but wished them every happiness during their future residence in Guelph. The Knights of Columbus recognised the efforts of Judge Hayes in particular while he was Grand Knight some years ago when the society was in its youth and its welfare required able attention.

Judge Hayes, in reply, stated that since his appointment he had received many congratulations, but none was dearer to him than that from the K.O.C. He felt unworthy, he stated, of many of the kind things that had been said. He felt he had been chosen for an important position, and would endeavour to occupy it to the best of his ability. In departing from Peterborough, Judge Hayes regretted the severance of many friendships.

Rev. Dean McColl joined in the congratulations to the new Judge. He said the Government had made a wise choice in selecting Mr. Hayes, who had shown himself possessed of the essential qualifications that would fit him for a position on the bench.

Other speakers were Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father McCauley, Mr Pennyfather and Mr. Harry Phelan. Rev. Father Cote delighted the gathering with his singing of "A Perfect Day." The evening concluded with "Auld Lang Syne" and "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," after which Judge Hayes made personal farewells to the members.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER, JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The argument of this article refers exclusively to the office or place of business, and not to the home.

The average worker is at work at least one-third of the time, and during ratehr more than half of his waking hours.

There is no reason why the neatness and order of the home should not prevail in the office or in the workshop, and there is nothing which makes labour easier and pleasanter than habitual order and neatness.

The over-filled or cluttered desk means just so much extra labour.

The accumulation of unfiled letters and other articles stands for additional work and is responsible for much business nervousness, fret and worry.

No one can work as well, as effectively, or as easily, in a dusty, ill-kept office as he can where there is order and cleanliness.

Probably more than three-quarters of our offices and workshops are untidy, and many of them are in a state which is positively disgraceful. Comparatively little of this untidiness or lack of order has a tangible excuse for its existence.

The orderly employe, the one who takes care of everything with which he comes in contact, is a marked man, and his efforts will be appreciated even by a disorderly employer.

Being busy or rushed is not an excuse for disorder, for disorder means more work and harder work.

Time is saved by filing letters daily, by doing the day's business as it comes. To neglect to do this means chaos and a large amount of additional work in the end.

I am not suggesting that one make a fad of order or carry system to excess, for there is such a thing as over-order, which works as disastrously a does disorder.

Order is one of the necessities, of business. It stands for personal satisfaction, for effectiveness, and for economy.

Let us suppose, for example, that you are an office boy, and that you are required to keep the office in order. If you would rise from the ranks, if you would earn promotion, look upon your work as the highest duty within the grasp of your present opportunity, and gain the reputation of being the most orderly office boy in the building or on the street. Sooner or later your endeavours will be recognized, and you will pass with leaps and bounds those of your fellow employes who are slack and indifferent to order.

While on the lower round of the ladder you have no opportunity to do great things; conditions will keep you down for a while; but, if you make the most of what you have, if you earn a reputation for doing little things well, you will find yourself marked by promotion.

Many an orderly clerk has been placed above those who are his superiors in natural ability, because the latter did not attend to their menial duties, but forgot the present in thinking about the future.

Order is one of the fundamental laws of civilization and of progress. Without it the waggon of business wobbles on its way.

THE IMMIGRANT.

I likes this bloomin' country, I likes 'er bloomin' ways.
I likes the bloomin' people too, wot means just wot they says:
But I'm tired of snow and winter, and oftentimes I pine
For the glint of April sunshine on the silver Serpentine.

The buds are fairly burstin' in the trees along the Row,
And the 'orses they are prancin' where the merry riders go,
I'd give a 'arf a sovereign if I could only stand
In the little pub wot nestles just where Fleet Street joins the Strand.

I see the gulls a wheelin' o'er the Thames down Lambeth way,
I 'ear the 'awkers cryin', "Fresh shrimps all caught to-day";
The mighty voice of London is callin' o'er the town,
'You poor benighted boarder, when are yer comin' 'ome?'

I likes this bloomin' country, I likes 'er bloomin' style,
Although I'm tired and 'omesick I works 'arf all the while.
But when the shadows lengthen, and darkness spills and falls,
I dream of April sunshine on the Cross of Old St. Paul's.

BIG LEAGUES ARE UNDER WAY
BOTH CHAMPIONS WERE BEATEN

New York, Chicago, Washington and Detroit Won in the American While the Superbas, Phillies, Cardinals and Reds Were the National Winners

SOME GREAT BATTLES

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Pirates Lost.

ST. LOUIS, April 14.—Players traded to the St. Louis team during the winter by Pittsburg played a prominent part in the defeat of the latter team here to-day, by a score of 2 to 1 in the opening game of the season. It was "Chief" Wilson's singing single in the ninth, after two men were out, that sent Art Butler across the plate with the winning run for the locals. In the first inning Jack Miller, also with Pittsburg last year, doubled, scoring Butler from second base.

Batteries—Grimer and Wing for St Louis; Adams and Gibson for Pittsburg.

Reds Wallop Cubs.

CINCINNATI, April 14.— Chicago met defeat here to-day in the opening game of the season after playing for two hours and eight minutes in a drizzling rain. The score was 10 to 1. The rain, which began shortly before the time advertised for the starting of the game, not only kept down the attendance, but caused Cheney to lose control. He allowed eight bases on balls, made four wild pitches, and hit two men, besides having four hits registered off him. Benton on the other hand, appeared to like the wet going and held the visitors to two hits.

Batteries— Benton and Clarke for Cincinnati; Cheney, Kolstner and Archer for Chicago.

Brooklyn Won.

BROOKLYN, April 14.—The National League season was opened here to-day with a hurrah, Brooklyn beating Boston 5 to 2. There was a presentation of a monster horseshoe of flowers to Manager Robinson, who pleased the big crwd of fans by showing them a team apparently far ahead of last year's in aggressiveness and all round work. Reulbach pitched brilliant ball during the seven innings he occupied the box, being taken out when the game appeared safe.

Reulbach, Pfeffer and Miller for Brooklyn; Tyler, Crutcher and Whaling for Boston.

Giants Slaughtered.

PHIALDELPHIA, April 14.— Two home runs by Captain Magee turned the scales of victory to Philadelphia over New York in the opening game of the National League season here to-day, the final score being 10 to 1. In four trips to the plate Magee secured a base on balls, two home runs and a single, his hits driving in six runs.

New York took the lead in the third inning on passes to Meyers and Burns, Marquard's sacrifice and Cravath's muff of Fletcher's fly. Magee's home run with Byren on second base in the fourth inning gave Philadelphia the lead and the home team had a walkover after that.

Batteries—Alexander and Killifer for Philadelphia; Marquard, Fromme and Meyers for New York.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Ty Cobb Starred.

DETROIT, April 14.—Bonfires were flickering through the haze in centrefield in the last half of the thirteenth inning to-day, when Ty Cobb drove a triple to the score board, which counted for two runs, and a moment later came home with the tally which enabled Detroit to take the opening game of the season from St. Louis by 3 to 2.

Neither team scored until the final inning, when good, bad and reckless baseball gave St. Louis two runs and inspired a Tiger rally which brought back memories of championship days. For twelve innings the struggle was anybody's. Each team threatened again and again to score; on more than one occasion runners were cut down at the plate. In the eleventh Cobb risked a broken leg in an attempt to decide the struggle; in the thirteenth Agnew scored the second run for St. Louis by a reckless, diving slide and was carried off the field with a spike wound in his foot.

Dubuc pitched wonderful ball for twelve innings. In the thirteenth he wrenched his weak knee while fielding a bunt and gave way to Dauss. Weilman, who was effective, but erratic, was replaced by James in the thirteenth, with Bush and Bauman on bases. Cobb tripled, Crawford singled, Veach drove a sacrifice fly to Shotten, Cobb beat the return by an eyelash, and the game was over.

Batteries—Dubuc, Dauss and Stanage for Detroit; Weilman, James and Agnew for St. Louis.

Champs Beaten.

NEW YORK, April 14. — New York's major league baseball season was opened auspiciously to-day, Frank Chance's men defeating the Athletics 8 to 2. The game was New York's all the way, Bush being driven from the mound after two stormy innings, in which he yielded five hits, four runs and four bases on balls. Boardman, a young left-hander from Brown University, who replaced Bush, also was hit hard.

The opening day crowd was one of the largest that ever has been seen at an American League game in New York. McHale held the Athletics hitless for five innings and was a puzzle throughout.

Batteries—McHale and Sweeney for New York; Bush, Boardman and Schang for Athletics.

Johnson—That's All.

BOSTON, April 14.—Walter Johnson pitched shutout ball for Washington to-day, and the Senators won the opening game of the season from Boston by 3 to 0. A big crowd enjoyed the contest, with weather conditions almost perfect. Ray Collins' pitching was effective, except in the third inning. Then Washington combined three singles, with a base on balls, and scored all three of its runs.

Boston Batsmen did not get a hit off Johnson until the sixth, when Manager Carrigan singled to centre. Both teams fielded sharply.

Mayor James M. Curley threw out the first ball to Manager Carrigan, and there was the customary flag-raising march by the players across the field.

Batteries—Johnson and Ainsworth for Washington; Collins and Carrigan for Boston.

White Six Beat Naps.

CHICAGO, April 14.—A batting rally in the seventh inning turned defeat into victory for the Chicago Americans in the opening game of the season here to-day, Cleveland losing a thrilling contest to the White Sox by 5 to 2. A two-base hit by Tom Daly, a recruit from Lowell, Mass., who was sent in to bat for Schreiber, drove Bodie across the plate with the winning run. The Sox attack in the seventh routed Mitchell, and Blanding finished the game.

Batteries—Scott and Schalk for Chicago; Mitchell, Blanding and O'Neill for Cleveland.

FEDERAL LEAGUE.

PITTSBURG, April 14.—Ideal weather, a parade and many spectators marked the opening of the Federal League season here to-day. Brooklyn defeated Pittsburg in ten innings, the game being a pitcher's battle between Seaton and Knetzer. Score by innings:

"SHORTSTOP" FISHER, who completes a very fast infield for the Toronto International League team. Fisher was shortstop with the Brooklyn National League team last year, and is one of Toronto's best men now.

NEW SHORT STOP FOR OTTAWAS

OTTAWA, April 14.—The Ottawa club completed arrangements to-day for the purchase from the Indianapolis club of Shortstop Harry Spicer, who was the fielding and batting sensation of the Illinois-Missouri League last year. He hit .392 and fielded .885, being drafted by the Indianapolis club, which sent him to Denver, their farm, two weeks ago. He is highly recommended. Shaughnessy is now in the south and if he gets another good pitcher his team will be complete.

BASEBALL

Jack Bentley, the Washington heaver, gets credit for the first no-hit no-run game of the spring season, the University of Vermont being the victim.

Walsh, Cicotte, Russell, Benz and Scott will comprise the White Sox first string pitching staff. Not a bad lot that bunch of twirlers.

Doc Johnston of the Cleveland Naps is a brother of Jimmy Johnston, the speedy outfielder of the Chicago Cubs. Both boys are graduates of the Southern league.

Another schoolboy ball player has joined the Athletics. This time Connie Mack has gone to his old home, Brookfield, Mass., and signed John Daniels, a hihg school player.

Several clubs in the American association would like to annex Scott and Regh, the former A. A. players now with the Boston Red Sox. "Not a chance," declares Manager Bill Carrigan.

Manager Stallings is particularly sweet on Wilson Collins' ball playing, and if Collins can improve in batting he doubtless will become a fixture in the Braves' outfield.

The ante-season games between National and American league teams resulted in very near an even break. Neither outfit was able to put it over on the other to any considerable extent.

Fred Clarke, the Pirates' leader, has invented an automatic arrangement by which fielders using sun glasses may drop them over thir heads from a metal cap visor by simply touching a spring.

The reinstatement of Doc Scanlan, who refused to report to the Quakers last season, will strengthen Charley Dooin's wobbly pitching corps.

LALLY CO., PREPARED TO ASSIST LOCAL LACROSSE

The lacrosse campaign in Peterborough is going forward steadily and it only remains for the concentrated efforts of those behind the movement supported by the citizens who remember the old game, to put the club on a sound basis. Most of the subscriptions received have been offered voluntarily, and the one dollar membership ticket is meeting with general approval. Within the next day or two a supply will be placed with some of the barbers and merchants in order to give all those who wish to help the good work along a chance to do their share.

The secretary received a letter from the Lally company, Cornwall, to the effect that they will do everything possible to assist the Peterborough Club in its intial efforts. Owing to the demand for sticks the company was unable to forward a supply immediately, but it is expected that by Friday or Saturday the first order will be here. In the meantime it is up to the workers to keep things moving and prepare for the first practice.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Brantford Expositor: In local years the Toronto press has looked askance on the Canadian league, even as they did on the old professional hockey league in Western Ontario, from which graduated five of the seven men who won the championship for the Quebec team in 1912-13. It is all changed now, with the entrance of Toronto into the league. The Toronto World comments that all is now hustle and bustle in the Canadian league, with the managers lining up their teams. "Just now Erie and London look to be the most dangerous, but Peterborough will make them all step some, and Rube Deneau may change things about at Bratnford," says the World. Never were truer words spoken than the latter. Things have been changed around here, for only two or three of the old Red Sox will again be seen here, so that there is bound to be a change. Local fans are positive that it will be a change for the better, but it will be but a short time now until the league opens and the won and lost column will tell which town has the best team lined up.

"A prophet has no honour in his own country." So runs the old proverb, and in the main it is true. Following out the inference, the Ottawa Journal says:

"The Brantford papers are ornamented daily with 'likenesses' of Rube Deneau's prospective squad. No matter whether Deneau produces a pennant-winner or a tail-ender, you have to hand it to the Dykestown papers as boosters. With the worst ball club in captivity last season, they ask fans to forgive and forget, and are pulling their heads off this year for a winner. It's a bet, at that, the Red Sox don't finish last again, though no one cares to predict how high up they will be."

Organized baseball shows no mercy to deserters. Last year Catcher Vonner Hopper, who backstopped for the champion Senators in 1912, did not like the idea of being sold to Hamilton by Fort Wayne, and promptly jumped the Central leaguers to the Indianapolic Federal League club. Hopper caught most of the season and then became disgusted with the way the outlaw league was run, and quit. This spring he wanted to come to Ottawa again. While Shag has no place for him here, with Lage and Powers, he was willing to buy him and trade him to Durham, N.C., for Joe McManus. He made Owner Varnell an offer and received word that Hoper was blacklisted for jumping to the Federals. This puts the Syracuse boy out of baseball for three years. After all, there is nothing like sticking to the big guys who control the game.

ST. THOMAS, April 13.—Word was received from Charlotte, Mich., to-day that Ray Clements had reported at the training camp. This leaves only one hold-out on the team, none other than "No-Hit" Baker, of "London Town." Director Killingsworth paid William a visit on Good Friday to try and induce him to come in, but the "wild hurler" could not see his way clear, or, at least, that is the way he thought about it.

Baker was tendered a contract calling for a 25 per cent. increase over his last year's stipend. Harry Howick placed his old mitt, wrapped up in a pair of pyjamas, in his grip, to-day, and took the noon train for Charlotte. Gilbert Forgue, the other player wintering here, was unable to report owing to a severe attack of quinsy, but will, it is thought, be able to join the latter part of the week. Nothing as yet has been heard of Mills, the first-sacker purchased from the Saginaw club on Saturday.

Hamilton Spectator—Although the wind was somewhat raw and cold yesterday, the ball players were able to get up a real good sweat, with the result that yesterday's workout at the cricket field was really the first that has been of any benefit. Manager Yates was again in charge, with Wein, Dolan, McLeod and Broadbent in uniform. Darlington and Baldwin, the two lads who reported yesterday morning, did not get into harness yesterday, but were hard at it to-day. This brought the squad up to seven playrs, including Manager Yates.

MARIETTA, Ohio, April 14.—London fans will see the weak spot of the past two seasons, third base, plugged up tight this season, if this young fellow Mullen keeps up the work he has shown to date. In Sunday's game at Ironton he went at his work like a whirlwind, and Manager Reisling thinks he is a real find.

All through the game he exhibited the real pepper, and, although he had but three chances, each of them was a hard one, and was handled with neatness and dispatch.

The youngster seems particularly strong on bunts. In the first inning, Doyle, th Ironton third-sacker, laid down a bunt about 15 feet down the third-base line. Like a flash, Mullen was on it, and in another flash it was thumping into Malloy's big glove on first base. The umpire declared the ball foul, but at that it showed how fast Mullen is. He also goes after foul balls fast.

His hitting will stand improvement. He failed to get a hit at either Charleston on Saturday or at Ironton on Sunday. However, he is a free hitter, and Doc Reisling is confident that he is only in a slump. Last year, with Steubenville in the Interstate League, he was regarded as a heavy hitter. Two years ago in the Central League he batted around .300.

RICHMOND, Vir. April 15.—Killilet, who came from the Hamilton club to sign with the Toronto Canadian League team, received word from Secretary Farrell of the National Association that he had been awarded to the Grand Rapids Club. Killilea claims he was a free agent when he wrote the Central League club for terms, and declares he never received an acceptance or a contract. President McCaffery is taking the case up with the authorities with the object of disputing the Grand Rapids claim. Meanwhile the player has been sent home.

Kirley has left for home. He declares he has been in the Canadian League long enough and will not report at Toronto as ordered.

President Norris of the Toronto Canadian League club, wants Catcher Trout, and he will be allowed to step over at Philadelphia to go to his home, reporting at Toronto on Monday. Schneider played a grand game at first, and is going to star in the Canadian League.

BOWMANVILLE MAN KILLED LAST NIGHT

The Coroner's investigation will be continued next Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the Council Chambers. Evidence will then be brought by the C. P. R. and other persons, and it is expected that the matter will be cleared up. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral, but they will be announced later.

The fact of the deceased's conversation with McColl that he was going to either Montreal or Ottawa and that money was none too plentiful would uphold the supposition that the deceased was trying to get to one of the above mentioned cities on a freight train.

There were no eye witnesses of the accident.

Blood Stained Rails.

The rails and ties at the west end of the bridge give ample evidence of last night's tragedy. A splotch of blood and flesh was revealed with the first light of the morning, and the morbidly curious easily followed the course of the body from the ground immediately at the west end of the bride to a point forty feet east on the track where the last evidence disappeared.

That the man was struck while on the bridge finds support in the fact that on the most westerly pier, that located on the west bank of the river, the unfortunate man's entrails, torn from his body, had dropped between the ties of the bridge on to the narrow ledge top of the pier. A few feet further east and they would have fallen into the water. From the appearance of the ties along the forty feet th body must have been horribly crushed as it was dragged along.

NEWS FROM CHEMONG

Examiner Special:

CHEMONG INDIAN VILLAGE, April 15.—One of the Indians of Chemong got in through the ice and had a hard time getting out, as the ice around him was like honey-comb. However, he escaped none the worse for his adventure.

An Enniamore man saw his two one-year old heifers in the water. They had gone to the ice to get a drink and had gone out too far, where the ice is bad. The man ran out where the calves were and fell in himself. He managed to get out, and getting a rope, pulled the calves out.

Most of the men have all gone to their hunting grounds, (not the hunting ground our old grandfathers used to tell us of at the other side of sunset), where they intend to trap this spring.

Dan., Jr., was the last on the ice on the 4th of April.

We are expecting the Dummer Orange lodge to walk on our reserve next fall. Our Chief has invited them, so if they come it will be the biggest day Chemong has ever had. There will be canoe and foot races as well.

The men and boys cut about three thousand cords of wood in Harvey township and on Fox Island this winter, so you see, you need not think we are fishing all the time.

Little cords of black silk curiously enriched with ivory buckles make odd and lovely necklaces.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 11.—Egypt is not the only land where the excavator may find interesting relics of a by-gone age. Right here in the heart of little old New York there has just been discovered the remains of a prison supposed to date back to the early Dutch period. The find was made by the workmen who are digging the new downtown subway. Midway between Dey and Cortlandt Streets, under Church Street, the diggers came across a stone wall of such solidity that the masonry was still in good repair. The wall was pierced by three small windows guarded by the type of grill work used in the seventeenth century for jails, and to pry the iron bars away required considerable force. Historians who have examined the wall are of the opinion that it once formed part of the lock-up of old New Amsterdam.

The Knickerbocker Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in Yonkers, has completed arrangements for a unique ball to be given next Tuesday night in the Ancient Manor Hall in Yonkers, where Washington stopped during the battle at White Plains in 1776. The Daughters plan to conduct the event as if it were back in Revolutionary days. The interior of the building has been restored to its original appearance. The invitations, copied after those issued to the Assembly here held in Philadelphia, have been delivered, not by mail, but by hand. No one is to be admitted to the ball except those in Colonial costumes. A special instructor has been teaching the members of the chapter the minuet and the old-time quadrille.

The Aero Club of America is going forward with its plans for an aeroplane race from New York to Bermuda early this summer. The fliers, according to the present plans, will be required to leave here in the last week of June or the first week in July, and will receive $75,000 in prize money upon their arrival in Hamilton Harbour, Bermuda. The over-sea flying course will be 700 miles, cross-board of the mechanical aeroplanes entering the proposed trans-Atlantic race would be expected to cover. The race to Bermuda is therefore regarded as the finest kind of a tryout for the transatlantic race that could be devised. All aeroplanes entering for the race will be required to carry wireless outfits, capable of carrying a distance of seventy-five miles, and to provide themselves with devices for alighting upon the water should any accident happen while en route.

A new night court with civil jurisdiction only has been authorised by the Legislature for the adjustment of wage questions affecting employer and employe in amounts not exceeding $50, and it is expected the first court will be opened in this city at an early date. It will be a "poor man's court" in a strict sense, for men and women having claims for unpaid wages or questions of dispute relating to employment or dismissal may obtain free summonses upon making an affidavit that they are not possessed of means exceeding $100. They may also plead their cases in person if unable to hire a lawyer. The court will be open from 7.30 to 11 p.m. every night except Sunday.

NEWS OF INTEREST FROM HASTINGS

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, April 14.—Another aged resident has been called away, in the person of Mrs. Wm. Warner, Sr., who passed away on Sunday morning after a lingering illness borne with great patience. Deceased had resided in Asphodel for upwards of forty years, and about five years ago moved to Hastings, where she spent her last days at the home of her son, William. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, four sons and one daughter. The sons are James and Fred of Asphodel, Russell of Percy, and William of Hastings, while Mrs. J. Cold weather is still prevalent and the curling club was enjoying themselves on the ice during the past week. This is a very extraordinary occurrence for this season of the year.

It becomes our sad duty to chronicle the demise of another resident of Hastings, Mrs. H. Lawrence (nee Chrissy Clapper), who has been called away in the prime of life, having been married to her now sorrowing husband only two or three years ago. Deceased had been ill for some time and was removed to the hospital in Peterborough for treatment, but all of no avail. Death claiming her for his own. The body was brought home and laid to rest in the T. V. Cemetery on Saturday last. Her husband and parents have the sympathy of the whole community in their sad bereavement.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

Irregularity prevailed during the late afternoon, but on the whole the markets response to the New York Bond Sale was disappointing. There was a little rise, but stocks were supplied on the advance and prices then moved off again. Traders said bond sale was not up to expectation because the 229 bids subjected were under the usual number. On the other hand the all or none bid of Kuhn Loeb & Co. at 101.45 assured the city of a good average price. There was nothing new given out from Washington in regard to the Mexican situation. Most of the floor traders preferred to await something definite.

MAY DELAY BUDGET.

British Fiscal Announcements Likely To Be a Week Later.

LONDON, April 16.—It is believed that the introduction of the budget, set for next week, will be delayed for a week for two reasons, one, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has been suffering from a severe sore throat, desires to ensure the full recovery of his voice, and the other, that Austen Chamberlain, the financial spokesman of the Opposition, will be unable to attend in the House of Commons on the day originally suggested, the 20th.

The Graphic, however, takes this possibility as the basis for the expression of the opinion that the delay is really due to a desire by the Cabinet to revise Mr. Lloyd George's plans, which are believed to involve an increase of the supertax, relief of income tax on small incomes and an import duty on autos.

Simple Home Treatment For Objectionable Hairs

(Toilet Talks)

Here is a toilet help you should remember, because it may at some time be the means of saving you from embarrassment: To quickly and painlessly remove hair or fuzz from chin, lip or cheek, apply a thick paste made by mixing together powdered delatone and water. Let this remain on the hairy surface about 2 minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and lo! the hairs have vanished. This treatment is entirely harmless, but caution should be used to see that you get delatone.

UNITED STATES DETERMINED CONGRESS BEHIND WILSON

Huerta Will Not Be Permitted to Evade the Issue Say the United States Officials.

MUST APOLOGIZE

WASHINGTON, April 16.—With a majority of the ships of the American navy under orders yesterday to proceed at once to the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico, the United States Government gave Gen. Huerta final warning that unless a salute was fired to the United States' flag within a reasonable time to atone "for repeated offences against the rights and dignity of the United States," serious complications would result.

Gen. Huerta submitted to an executive session of the Mexican Senate yesterday the demands of the American Government for a salute to the flag. No answer has been received by the Washington Government late last night of the result of the deliberations.

It was learned last night that Gen. Huerta when apprised by Charge O'Shaughnessy of the proposed demonstration of the Atlantic fleet, argued that the episode growing out of the arrest of the American bluejackets at Tampico was a fit subject for arbitration at The Hague, and that he would appoint a commission to investigate the incident. President Wilson, in an emphatic reply through Charge O'Shaughnessy, is understood to have told Gen. Huerta that the time for delay and evasion had passed, and that the American Government would temporize no longer. Administration officials hold that insults to the flag and questions of national honor are not subjects for arbitration. All information, official and otherwise, that reached Washington from Mexico City tended to show that Gen. Huerta was unconvinced that the United States was in earnest and thought the Washington Government was bluffing.

Developments of the day here showed clearly that a determined and forceful policy had been adopted by the President, which would be backed up by Congress and enforced, if necessary, by the army and navy.

While the President expressed an earnest hope for peace, he unequivocally told members of the Senate and committees on foreign affairs that the offences of the de facto Government at Mexico City to the dignity of the United States could no longer be tolerated, and that unless Huerta complied with the American demands, the seizure of the customs houses at Tampico and Vera Cruz and even the declaration of a Pacific blockade, shutting off commercial intercourse with the United States, would be fully justified by precedents in international law.

It was established that no aggressive act, such as the landing of marines or the shelling of any towns or the seizure of any ports, would be undertaken without authorization from Congress after President Wilson had personally delivered a message on the subject. The practically unanimous approval which Republicans and Democrats alike gave the administration's initial steps made it apparent, however, that should Rear-Admiral Badger find it necessary to act vigorously in an emergency Congress would back up the American navy without hesitation.

WOMAN KILLED OFF.

Maniac Who Had Killed Her Brother Caused Her Life.

HUNTINGTON, N.Y. April 16.—Miss Mary Sammis, who lives with her brother, Frank, on their Long Island farm, awoke early yesterday to find a man, with a bloody axe in his hands standing by her bed. In the dim light she recognized Frank Fowler, a young farm hand who slept in the house.

"I've just killed your brother upstairs," said Fowler, "and I'm going to kill you, too."

"I've always been kind to you, Frank," pleaded the woman, "and you have no reason for harming us."

"That's right," answered Fowler, "I guess I won't kill you, but I'll go away," and he walked out of the house, leaving the axe behind him.

Miss Sammis stumbled upstairs and found her brother's body on the bed with the head split in two. The police believe Fowler is insane. They are searching for him.

Miners Will Continue Work.

PITTSBURG, April 16.—Van Bittner, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, announced yesterday that reports from local unions indicated that a majority of the forty-five thousand miners in this district voted to continue work while the negotiations for a settlement of the wage scale are in progress.

CHARGED WITH CRUELTY.

Six Philadelphia Vivisectionists Face Trial In Criminal Court.

PHILADELPHIA, April 16. — Advocates and opponents of vivisection, many of whom are medical men and society women, crowded the criminal court here yesterday to hear the testimony in the case of six members of the faculty of the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania who are charged with cruelty to dogs after vivisection had been performed.

Those under indictment are: Drs. Joshua E. Sweet, Alfred N. Richards, Allen J. Smith, Richard Mills Pearce, Alonzo Engleburt Taylor and Dr. Ed. Reichert.

Dr. Sweet was the only one placed on trial yesterday. He pleaded not guilty. He had charge of the housing of animals.

The prosecution of the medical men was brought by the Women's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Counsel for the society said that the prosecution is not necessarily an attempt to deliver a blow at vivisection, but was brought as a means of preventing unnecessary cruelty to animals.

Conspicuous Nose Pores

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

In such cases the small muscular fibres of the nose have become weakened and do not keep the pores closed as they should be. Instead those pores collect dirt, clog up, and become enlarged.

Begin tonight to use this treatment

Wring a cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. While the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for a few minutes with a lump of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap cleanses the pores. This treatment with it strengthens the muscular fibres of the nose pores so that they can contract properly. But do not expect to change in a week a condition caused by years of neglect. Use this treatment persistently, however, and gradually reduce the enlarged pores and cause them to lightest until they are inconspicuous.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one begrudges at the price after their first cake.

Get this treatment today—now! Also use the illustration of the cake below until you get it as your reminder to get Woodbury's and try this treatment. Then use the cake soon. Take it to the Druggists today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this Facial soap.

Woodbury's Facial Soap

DEBATE IS RESUMED

Oliver Wilcox Wants a Duty to Protect Essex Corn

END OF SESSION IN SIGHT

OTTAWA, April 16. — The House of Commons resumed yesterday after its Easter vacation, and despite a slim attendance the budget debate was continued. Three speakers, two Liberal and one Conservative took part and from present indications the debate may go on for ten days more.

Mr. Carroll (Lib., S. Cape Breton) resumed the budget debate. He commended the Laurier Government for the bounties it had extended to the iron and steel industries and indicated that assistance by way of bounty was preferable to high tariff. Increased duties upon iron and steel could be of little benefit to the big industries at Sydney and Hamilton. Wire rods were placed on the dutiable list, but there was a drawback for the benefit of wire fencing, and the Government threatened to remove the duty unless wire rods were sold quite cheaply to the small manufacturers of wire nails. He also condemned the recent change in the tariff which gives a drawback of 99 per cent. upon duties paid on bituminous coal imported for coking and smelting purposes.

The people of Canada, Mr. Carroll said, were suffering from the high cost of living partly because of the fact that they paid several millions a year duty on staple food products, and he said that in one ward of Ottawa alone, no less than seven hundred people were in distress.

Mr. Wilcox (Con., N. Essex) said that the member for South Cape Breton (Mr. Carroll), wanted a high protective wall around the city of Sydney, but free trade for all the rest of Canada. That gentleman favored free flour and free agricultural implements and desired to deprive the farmer of his share of the benefit of labor.

"I am not a partisan," the North Essex member said. (Laughter). "But I must say the Liberal party has always been on the wrong side of public questions, and has developed a wonderful talent for sitting up false gods for the Canadian people to worship. They bullyrag the manufacturers from one end of the country to the other, but shake hands with them under the table."

Continuing, Mr. Wilcox declared that the west is more prosperous today than it was prior to 1911, and that he believed that its unparalleled prosperity was due to the protection policy of the present Government. It was due to that policy that the United States steel trust had been forced to establish a Canadian plant. They had purchased over 1,500 acres of land near Windsor and were spending $20,000,000 in building and equipment of a plant which would give employment to thousands of Canadians.

Mr. Wilcox, in conclusion, urged the Government to put import duty upon Indian corn. He could see no reason why the tobacco growers, the fruit growers, and all other agriculturists should benefit by the tariff while no protection at all was given to the farmer who raised corn. He said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier had justified the reciprocity pact on the ground that the farmers should get more for their products. But when the farmers refused to follow him he changed his position, and was now clamoring for free food upon the ground that farmers were getting too much.

"The characteristics of the budget speech of the Minister of Finance," said Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, "were certainly reactionary. The speech was a complete surrender to the interests and manufacturers of Canada. The country was waiting anxiously for a downward revision of the tariff, and instead the Finance Minister wards. Minus a five per cent. reduction on certain agricultural implements, a mere sop to the farmers, the Minister ignores the needs and wishes of the farming communities, discards western interests, and bars and bolts the doors upon the consumers.

In the interest of all Canada, that the cost of living might be reduced, declared Mr. Lemieux, the present taxation upon food should not merely be reduced, but entirely abolished. As it was, he argued, the Borden Government was totally ignoring the needs and wishes of the consumers.

The debate was adjourned by J. E. Armstrong (E. Lambton), and the House rose shortly before midnight.

It is evident that the present session of Parliament in drawing rapidly to a close. Yesterday Hon. Geo. E. Foster, who is acting Premier in the absence of Mr. Borden in the south, gave notice that morning sittings of the Commons will begin on Monday next. Prorogation is looked for about June 1st.

AWAITING REPORT.

Hon. Robert Rogers Replies to the Georgian Bay Canal Delegates.

OTTAWA, April 16.—Upwards of 1,000 delegates, of whom 700 were from Montreal and the immediate vicinity, yesterday afternoon waited on the Government and urged the early construction of the Georgian Bay Canal. A resolution calling for this action was presented.

Mr. Adelard Fortier, president of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce, which was primarily responsible for the organization of the delegation, said h's organization was actuated solely by an earnest desire to help an enterprise of national importance and in carrying out the project the Government would have the support of the great majority of the people of Canada.

Hon. Robert Rogers, in reply to the resolution, said he regretted the Prime Minister was unable to be present. He agreed with the mayor of Montreal that the work of linking up the western lake ports with the sea is of the deepest importance to every good Canadian citizen.

"We have had no report yet as to the commercial feasibility of the scheme, and we consider the time would be well spent to take advantage of having a commission to enquire into the feasibility of it," he said.

There Are More Deaths From PNEUMONIA Than Any Other Lung Trouble.

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than what used to be called "Inflammation of the Lungs."

Consumption may be contracted from others, but as a rule pneumonia is caused by exposure to cold and wet, and there is only one way to prevent pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold on its first appearance.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this for you if you will only take it in time.

Mrs. Wm. M. Steeves, River Glade, N.B., writes:—"Please allow me to express my gratitude for the presence of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup in the house, for I believe it saved our little boy's life. Three years this fall we were in the lumber woods, and it was very hard to get a doctor to us, and our little boy got pneumonia, and was very ill. The only relief he could get was to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and with the combined use of the Syrup, and your British Troop Oil Liniment, he soon got better, and was around in a couple of weeks. It certainly is a great remedy."

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

The old lady, muttering words I could not hear, stared mute and stricken at the bonds which the mayor had hastened to lift and place in her hands.

Pitying her and anxious to relieve him from the embarrassment of her presence when his own mind and heart were full of misery, I rushed down to her side and endeavored to lead her away. She yielded patiently enough to my efforts, but, as she turned away, she cast one look at the mayor and with the tears rolling down her long and hollow cheeks murmured in horror and amaze:

"He struck me!"

The flash in Mayor Packard's eye showed sympathy, but the demands of the moment were too great for him to give to those pathetic words the full significance which I suddenly suspected them to hold. As I led her tottering figure down the step and turned toward her door I said gently:

"Who was the man? Who was it that struck you?"

She answered quickly and with broken-hearted emphasis:

"My nephew! my sister's son, and I had come to give him all our money. We have waited three days for him to come to us. We thought we would when he knew the bonds had been found, but he never came near, never gave us a chance to enrich him; and when I heard he was ill and saw the carriage which had come to take him away, we could not stand it an other minute, and so I ran out and—and he struck me! looked in my face and struck me!"

I folded her in my arms, there and then at the foot of her own doorstep, and when I felt her heart beating on mine, I whispered:

"Bless God for it! He has a hard and cruel heart, and would make no good use of this money. Live to spend it as your brother desired, to make over the old house and reinstate the old name. He would not have wished it wasted on one who must have done you cruel wrong, since he has lived so many days beside you without showing his interest in you or even acknowledging your relationship."

"There were reasons," she protested, gently withdrawing herself, but holding me for a minute to her side. "He has had great fortune—is a man of importance now—we did not wish to interfere with his career. It was only after the money was found that we felt he should come. We should not have asked him to take back his old name, we should simply have given him what he thought best to take and been so happy and proud to see him. He is so handsome and fortunate that we should not have begrudged it, if he had taken it all. But he struck me! he struck me! He will never get a dollar now."

Relieved, for the natural good sense of the woman was reasserting itself, I gave her hands a squeeze and quickly ran back to where the mayor was holding the door for me.

"She is all right now," I remarked, as I slid by him up-stairs; and that was all I said. The rest must wait a more auspicious moment—the moment whom he really would have time to take up the gage which Mr. Steele had thrown down to him in his final words.

I was not a witness to the parting interview between Mayor Packard and his wife; I had stolen into the nursery for a look at the little one. I found her sleeping sweetly, with one chubby hand under her rounded cheek. Thus had she lain and thus had she slept during all those dreadful minutes, when her future hung trembling in the balance.

CHAPTER XXVI.

A CHILD'S PLAYTHINGS.

I was too much overwhelmed by all these events to close my eyes that night. The revelation of Mr. Steele's further duplicity, coming so immediately upon the first, roused fresh surmises and awakened thoughts which soon set my wits working in a direction as new as it was unexpected. I had believed my work over in this house, but as I recalled all the occurrences of the evening and turned the situation, as it now confronted me, over and over in my mind, I felt that it had just begun. There must be something in this latest development to help us in the struggle which lay before us. The rage which sprang up in him as he confronted his old aunt at this moment of his triumphant revenge argued a weakness in his armour which it might yet be my part to discover and reveal. I knew Mrs. Packard well enough to realize that the serenity into which she had fallen was a factitious serenity, and must remain so as long as any doubt remained of the legality of the tie uniting her to this handsome fiend. Were the means suggested by the mayor of promising enough character to accomplish the looked-for end?

I remembered the man's eyes as the mayor let fall his word of powerful threat, and doubted it. Once recovered from the indisposition which now weakened him, he would find means to thwart any attempts made by Mayor Packard to undermine the position he had taken as the legal husband of Olympia—sufficiently so, at least, to hinder happiness between the pair whose wedded life he not only envied, but was determined to break up, unless some flaw in his past could be discovered through Miss Quinlan—the aunt whose goodness he had slighted and who now seemed to be in a frame of mind to help our cause if its pitiful aspects were once presented to her. I resolved to present the case without delay. Morning came at last, and I refreshed myself as well as I could, and, after a short visit to Mrs. Packard's bedside during which my purpose grew with every moment, I gazed down on her brave but pitiful face, put on my hat and jacket and went next door.

I found the two old ladies seated in their state apartment making calculations. At sight of my face they both rose and the "O my dear" from Miss Charity and the "God bless you, child," from Miss Thankful showed that both hearts were yet warm. Gradually I introduced the topic of their nephew; gradually I approached the vital question of the disgrace.

The result upset all my glowing hopes. He had never told them just what the disgrace was. They really knew nothing about his life after his early boyhood. He had come home that one time when fortune so suddenly smiled upon them and they thought then that he would tell them something; but the disappointment which had followed effectually closed his lips, and he went away after a few days of fruitless search, not to approach them again till just before he took up the position of secretary to their grat neighbour. Then he paid them one short and peremptory visit, during which he was able to impress upon them his importance, his reasons for changing his name, which they could not remember, and the great necessity which this made for them not to come near him as their nephew. They had tried to do what he asked, but it had been hard.

"Charity," Miss Thankful proceeded to bewail with a forgetfulness of her own share in the matter, "had not been able to keep her eyes long off the house which held, as she supposed, our double treasure."

So this was all! Nothing to aid Mayor Packard.

Rising in my disappointment, I prepared to leave. I had sufficient self-control and I hope good feeling not to add to their distress at this time by any unnecessary revelations of a past they were ignorant of, or the part this unhappy nephew of theirs had played and still promised to play in the lives of their immediate neighbours.

Miss Thankful squeezed my hand and Miss Charity gave me a kiss; then as she saw her sister looking aside, whispered in my ear:

"I want to show you something, all of Johnnie's little toys and the keepsakes he sent us when he was a good boy and loved his aunts. You will not think so badly of him then."

I let Miss Charity lead me away. A drawer held all these treasures. I looked and felt to a degree the pathos of the scene; but did not give special attention to what she thrust under my eyes till she gave me a little old letter to read, soiled and torn with the handling of many years and signed John Silverthorn Brainard. Then something in me woke and I stared at this signature, growing more and more excited as I realised that this was not the first time I had seen it, that somewhere and in circumsances which brought a nameless thrill I had looked upon it before and that—it was not one remembrance but many which came to me. What the spoken name had not recalled came at the sight of this written one. Bess! there was her long and continued watch over the house once entered by her on any and every pretext, but now shunned by her with a secret terror which could not disguise her longing and its secret attraction; her certificate of marriage; the name on this certificate—the very one I was now staring at—John Silverthorn Brainard! Had I struck an invaluable clue? Had I, through the weakness and doting fondness of this poor woman, come upon the one link which would yet lead us to identify this hollow-hearted, false and most vindictive man of great affairs with the wandering and worthless husband of the nondescript Bess, whose poor hand I had touched and whose errand I had done, little realizing its purport or the influence it would have upon our lives? I dared not believe myself so fortunate; it was much too like a fairy dream for me to rely on it for a moment; yet the possibility was enough to rouse me to renewed effort. After we had returned to Miss Thankful's side, I asked her, with an apology for my inexhaustible curiosity, if she still felt afraid of the thread and needle we man across the way.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

SOW VEGETABLES AND FLOWERS EARLY

Although it may seem very early to be talking about selecting our seeds for flowers and vegetables for the coming summer, yet in reality it is high time to be making a selection and sending in your orders to the seedsmen. By placing our orders we will be able to have them filled in good time before the seedsmen become overwhelmed with orders, as is always the case at the last minute.

Those who are fortunate enough to have a nice sunny window or a greenhouse, can by sowing now have flowers and vegetables several weeks earlier than if no seeds are sown until the weather conditions will permit planting outside.

March is the month to sow onions. Select only the best varieties. A flat or shallow box should be used to plant the seed and one that is well drained. The soil should be fine and sweet, and only well-rotted manure mixed with it. By planting in this manner they can be planted outside as soon as weather conditions will permit. Lettuce, cauliflower, cabbage and parsley may be treated in the same way.

Other flowers, such as pansies, violas, carnations, salvias, petunias, and the Iceland poppy, may also be sown this month for flowering this season.

—Farm and Dairy.

It is safest to plant all kinds of nursery stock in the spring. It will soon be time to do this work. Better order it now so as to get it in good season.

A few boxes fitted up for bird nests or houses and placed in trees where cats cannot get at them often help to keep very desirable feathered neighbors in the neighborhood. Now is a good time to put these up.

The Limit.

Mary Jane's master is a slightly eccentric bachelor. He has one most irritating habit. Instead of telling her what he wants done by word of mouth he leaves on his desk or on the kitchen table or anywhere else where she is likely to see it a note curtly directing her to "Dust the dining room" or "Turn out my cupboard," and so on.

The other day he bought some notepaper, with the usual die sunk address impressed upon it, from the stationer and ordered it to be sent home.

Mary Jane took it in, and the first thing that caught her eye was a note attached to the package. She read it, open eyed.

"Well," she said, "he's asked me to do a few things in his blessed notes, but this is the limit. I won't stand it no longer."

For the note read, "Do inside this package."—London Answers.

When you've ordered Silk do you accept Sateen?

Almost a foolish question, but—not quite!

There are still some people who order Kellogg's Corn Flakes and are given a substitute "just as good"—and accept the imitation.

The difference between

Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

and the "just as good" kind is even greater than the difference between silk and sateen.

The great difference is in the flavor and the nutriment.

Be sure that you ask for and get Kellogg's. It is the original.

CHEESE

No doubt Canadian farmers are much exercised in their minds as to the future prospects for cheese, seeing that the altered U.S.A. tariff and the large increase in production from New Zealand have made a great deal of difference to the outlook. It is true that exports of Canadian cheese have been adversely affected during the last year or two owing to the increase of the home consumption and diversion of milk, and it is only to be presumed that a more satisfactory price has been forthcoming for the milk and cheese than this country has been able to pay.

There seems, however, every prospect of good prices for cheese during the coming season, because owing to shortage of stocks of Canadian in the winter months all the New Zealands have been required for consumption, and the market should be hungry for the Canadian product during the summer months. It is certain that this country can take all the cheese that Canada is likely to be able to make for many years to come, and yet take all that New Zealand can send as well, because for the last few years there has been a considerable growth in the home make in England, and yet prices have been very high.

Nervous Prostration And Heart Trouble

For Three Years Doctors Struggled With This Disease, and in Vain—Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The complete breakdown of the nervous system as in nervous prostration is usually the result of overwork, worry or "burning the candle at both ends."

There are always warnings if you will only recognize them. You find yourself easily fatigued and annoyed. Little things make you irritable. You do not enjoy your work or find yourself forgetful and lacking energy. Headaches may return about the same time each day; there may be nervous indigestion and distress caused by even the simplest food. Gloomy forebodings and hysteria are other symptoms. You may look strong and well and yet be on the verge of nervous collapse.

When threatened by nervous breakdown begin at once the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and escape such serious developments as nervous prostration, locomotor ataxia and paralysis.

Mrs. H. C. Jones, South Lake, C.B., writes:—"I suffered from nervous prostration for nearly three years. I had frequent headaches, had no appetite and was troubled with my heart. After consulting two doctors without satisfactory results, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was completely cured by the treatment. It is nearly a year since I was cured, and I want others to know of this splendid medicine. I now attend to my house work with pleasure and comfort and am glad to have the opportunity of recommending Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Got Rheumatism Through Exposure, but Weston's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

"While on a trip with a survey party in Northern Ontario two years ago, I contracted rheumatism through exposure and sleeping in damp clothes. When I returned home I was very bad, and the pain in my joints was something awful. I was advised to try Weston's Kidney Pills, and after taking four boxes my rheumatism was entirely gone. Last year I was up on the survey party again, but I was never without a box of Weston's Kidney Pills, and have never had the slightest return of it.

Winning the Suffrage in New Jersey

Written by

Mrs. E. F. Feickert

President of New Jersey Suffrage Association

With the fight for "Votes for Women" gaining fresh impetus each day just now, all eyes are fastened on New Jersey, where a desperate battle has just been waged to give her daughters the right to cast their ballots. After many bloody skirmishes the suffragists of this State have just won a signal victory in both branches of the Legislature, and this action now makes it possible for the electorate of "The Cause" to vote their sympathy for the cohorts of the State, and this will be done in the autumn of 1915, when a special election will be held.

The fight, which was carried to the floor of the Houses and Senate of New Jersey, was participated in by women whose home... are synonymous with the best interests of "The Cause." None took a more commanding part in this fight than Mrs. E. F. Feickert, of Plainfield, N. J., and she has written the appended article telling of that fight in all its various phases and stages.

Mrs. Feickert has worked tirelessly to bring the question before the people, always contending that once the voters of the State were given the opportunity to express their views on suffrage New Jersey would fall in line and be added to the rolls of those States where women have the prerogative of exercising their right of franchise. The National Woman's Suffrage Association is justly proud of the achievement of the women of New Jersey, and all efforts are to be concentrated on this fight when the campaign is opened in earnest.

Flushed with victory and already having won their fight in ten States and one Territory, they see no reason why New Jersey should not come into the fold. There have been so many political upheavals in New Jersey since Woodrow Wilson decided to leave the cloistered seclusion of his Princeton study to enter the Gubernatorial fight that nothing is now regarded as too radical to be expected in this State.

It might be interesting to note that the States already enjoying suffrage and the date of their adoption of the universal ballot system include Wyoming, 1869; Colorado, 1893; Utah and Idaho, 1896; Washington, 1910; California, 1911; Oregon, Arizona and Kansas, 1912; Illinois and Alaska, 1913.

The suffragists of New Jersey are confident that they will be listed in the 1915 column of entries, and Mrs. Feickert tells why.

(Copyright, 1914, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

WHILE the suffragists pile argument on argument and the anti-suffragists ransack records to prove that suffrage is making no gains and is a failure where it has been tried, steps are being taken to commit the entire country to universal suffrage.

The latest official action to give comfort and cheer to the suffragists is that recently taken in President Wilson's State of New Jersey in the passage of a resolution for a referendum vote on woman suffrage by the decisive vote of forty-nine to four in its favor in the Assembly and fifteen to three in the Senate. If this resolution passes the next session of the Legislature it will be voted upon at a special election to be held in 1915.

The last year's experience has imbued the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Organization with hopefulness for the future, the movement having advanced further in that time than in the entire twenty-three preceding years of its history.

Mrs. Mary K. Colvin, First Vice President, N. J. Woman Suffrage Association.

Three years ago there were only over one thousand enrolled suffragists in the four suffrage organizations. To-day the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association alone has about ten thousand members, in fifty-four branches, and five suffrage committees in towns which are not yet ready for a local organization. There are probably three times that number in the other organizations, so that there are at least fifteen thousand enrolled suffragists in the State, to say nothing of the thousands of men and women who are in favor of woman suffrage but who are not yet ready to join an organization. In three weeks last summer a dozen workers secured over five thousand signatures to a suffrage petition.

Methods of Work.

The most urgent work now before us is the districting of the counties by towns and the cities by wards, and the appointment of district leaders to take charge of the work in their territory and be responsible for results obtained there. One of the best districted cities in the State is Montclair, which has an active leader in each ward, with a band of district captains under her. This work has been accomplished under the direction of Mrs. George G. Scott, who has been president of the Montclair Equal Suffrage League for two years.

Mrs. Scott has just retired from the presidency to take up the direction of the State Suffrage Headquarters, at No. 33 Halsey street, Newark, and Mrs. Arthur Hunter has been elected president of the Montclair league. The league no longer holds central meetings, but the officers and members of the Executive Committee assist the various ward leaders at ward mass meetings, street meetings and other demonstrations. Jersey City, Bayonne, Elizabeth, Plainfield, North Plainfield, Bound Brook, Trenton, Camden, Moorestown, Riverton, Merchantville, Vineland and other places are rapidly completing their ward organization.

During the winter and early spring a grange campaign was carried on by a few special workers, who have secured hundreds of endorsements of farmers and their wives. The grange speakers, Mrs. Marion Holmes, of Franklinville, Gloucester county, and Miss Dilla Hastings, of Cape May county, were invited to speak before many of the county granges. During the hearing on suffrage before the Legislature on January 28 an anti-suffrage speaker made the statement that the New Jersey grange had as its motto a woman who was strongly opposed to suffrage. Having been informed, we were able to inform her that this woman master had been converted to a belief in suffrage by Miss Hastings and had helped to organize a suffrage league in her home town, Stone Harbor, Cape May county. Wherever possible we try to have one of these talks at a meeting subsequent to one at which an anti-suffragist has spoken. In this way we gain a great deal from the work of the anti's, and our meetings are crowded with people who come to hear what we have to say in refutation of the statements which have been made in regard to suffrage and suffragists. Often a majority of the persons enroll as suffragists at the end of the meeting.

During this summer special campaigns will be conducted at all the Jersey resorts, and meetings will be held in hotel parlors and on hotel porches, on the streets and on the boardwalks. Last summer fifty thousand pieces of literature were given away at such meetings and probably twice as many will be distributed this year. Mrs. U. L. Decker, of East Orange, who did valuable work at the seashore last summer, may be able to work again this year.

The leagues in Paterson, Passaic, Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne and other large cities are to hold street meetings in the evenings all through the summer. Where there is a foreign population literature printed in the language of the people living in the district in which a meeting is being held will be distributed. Meetings are now being held in the larger factories, speakers talking for fifteen or twenty minutes during the noon hour and distributing literature printed in English, German, Slavish or Italian, as the case may demand.

New Jersey's Part in National Work.

Since the success or failure of the cause depends upon the mass of voters which cannot be persuaded to come to regular suffrage meetings, the message is to be taken to the man in the street and factory as well as to the woman in the home and factory.

This State has been well represented in every special delegation which has waited upon the President or upon the United States Senate during the past year. Jersey women marched in the Washington parade on March 3, a number of them went to the nation's capital in August with special petitions requesting the Senate to consider and vote upon the woman suffrage amendment to the national constitution, seventy women from thirty Jersey towns and cities waited upon the President in November and asked him to recommend the appointment of a woman suffrage committee in the House of Representatives, thirty delegates from the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association attended the National Woman Suffrage Convention in Washington in December, and this State was represented on the special committee which remained to see the President, after the convention had adjourned, by Miss Frances Baker, of Wildwood, daughter of J. Thompson Baker, member of Congress.

On May 2 the New Jersey suffrage leagues will join with the other suffrage organizations all over the country in celebrating Suffrage Day, and every one of the branches will hold some sort of suffrage demonstration. Several leagues are planning to hold a number of open air meetings simultaneously, taking speakers from one meeting to the other in automobiles. It has been decided not to hold a suffrage parade in Newark this year, but to concentrate upon the outdoor demonstrations on May 2.

Six of the twelve Congressmen from this State are suffragists, and Senator Hughes, while he has not declared himself as in favor of a national suffrage amendment, has led us to believe that he intends to vote for it. His wife is vice president of the Woman Suffrage League of Paterson. Senator Martine is personally opposed to woman suffrage, but has given the assurance that he intends to maintain an absolutely neutral position. There is no truth in the rumor that the New Jersey suffragists intend to oppose the re-election of Senator Martine. His campaign for re-election will be made in 1916, and as they confidently hope to be voting before that time they will vote for or against Senator Martine on other grounds than his opposition to woman suffrage. We are too much occupied with the affairs of 1914 to give any thought to possible campaigns against candidates for any office in 1916.

Friends Among the Politicians.

Nothing bears stronger testimony to the strength of the suffrage movement in this State than the names of the men who have taken their stand on the suffrage side. In addition to the hundreds of men who belong to the Men's League for Woman Suffrage, which qualifies among its members clergymen, doctors, lawyers, teachers, bankers and men in many other lines of business, a great many of the prominent political workers of the State believe in votes for women, and they have advocated woman suffrage at more than one public meeting. Among these are former State Senator Everett Colby, Mr. George M. La Monte, Commissioner of Banking and Insurance; Mr. William L. Saunders, president of the International Harvester Company; State Senators Charles M. Egan and Charles O'Conor Hennessy, Assemblymen Clinton E. Fisk, James Hammond and George H. Dalrymple, former Senator William C. Gebhardt, former Governor A. Franklin Fort, Mr. Edmund B. Osborne, president of the Osborne Manufacturing Company; Otto'n Smith, president of the Fairmount Machinery Company; former Sheriff Frank H. Summer, of Newark; Mayor Mowing of Elizabeth, Mayor Furber of Rahway, Mayor Pish of Roselle, former Mayor May of Plainfield, Judge James Connolly, Mr. Edgar A. Knapp, of Elizabeth; Mr. George L. Record, Colonel James E. Pope, of Jersey City, Congressmen E. W. Townsend, Archibald Hart and J. Thompson Baker.

New Jersey's two leading workers in the cause of social reform are Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander and Miss Cornelia Bradford, friend of Jane Addams and founder of Whittier House, Jersey City, which is modelled on the plan of Hull House, Chicago. These women are both ardent suffrage workers.

Personality of the Suffrage Leaders.

In addition to the women who have been mentioned as the heads of special committees there are several talented and efficient workers leading the suffrage movement in New Jersey. Dear to all in the Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, now almost eighty-nine years old. Annual conventions would not go off properly if Mrs. Blackwell, with her kindly smiling face and crown of snow-white hair, did not come and pray at one of the sessions. She says jokingly, that she intends to live until she is able to cast at least one ballot, and if anything could rejuvenate the suffrage workers to an indefinite delay of votes for women the decision keeping Mrs. Blackwell with them forever would decide. The honorary presidents of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association, Mrs. Mercia Grabill Saxton, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, and Mrs. Clara S. Ladley, have all been presidents of the association in past days and are still active workers. Mrs. Ladley's personality in speaking at meetings of Germans, which she does most effectively, is a judge from the results. The other officers of the association are:—President, Mrs. E. F. Feickert; First Vice President, Mrs. Mary K. Colvin, of East Orange; Second Vice President, Miss Helen Prescott, of Riverton; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Charles P. Eaton, of Jersey City; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Charles Tiny, of East Orange; Treasurer, Mrs. Edward Olmsted, of Elizabeth; Auditor, Mrs. Arthur Hunter, of Montclair. No account of New Jersey suffrage work could be complete without mentioning the splendid work of Dr. Mary G. Dailey, president of the Paterson Woman Suffrage League; Miss Esther G. Dixon, president of the Elizabeth Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. C. L. Riley, president of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield; Mrs. George M. La Monte, president of the Long Brook Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. Thomas Tittemor, president of the Trenton Civics and Suffrage League, Mrs. Mercia Craven, Mercer county suffrage organizer; Mrs. Joseph N. Tuttle, president of the Madison Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. Durbin Van Vleck, president of the Hoboken Equal Suffrage League; Mrs. Charles L. Carrick, president of the Hart Suffrage League of Jersey City; Mrs. Ward D. Kerlin, president of the Camden Equal Suffrage League; Miss Anna Dunn, president of the Burlington County Equal Suffrage League; Miss Helen Paul, Miss Mary Lippincott and Mrs. Joel Borton, respectively presidents of the equal suffrage leagues of Moorestown, Riverton and Woodstown; Dr. Mary Hussey, Mrs. C. B. Wilson and many others.

Our Political Programme.

Before the primary elections next fall the Legislative Committee, of which Mrs. Everett Colby is chairman, will approach every candidate for the Senate and Assembly in regard to his views on the question of woman suffrage and his willingness to vote for the referendum resolution next winter, and if any of them are not willing to support such a resolution the suffragists will do all they can to prevent their election, irrespective of the political parties to which they belong. It is the policy of the suffragists of New Jersey not to ally themselves in any way with any political party, but it would be ridiculous not to oppose the election of men who say they will vote against our resolution if elected to the Legislature. During the last political campaign William A. Leonard, of Union county, announced that if elected he would do all he could to defeat the suffrage resolution. The suffrage leagues in his county made a campaign against him, and although he was elected it was by the narrowest margin of 70 votes, compared with a majority of 1,140 the year before.

BY PROSPERO.

Is the Scoring of Honors Fair?

THE time honored statute of scoring honors should, without most cogent reasons, not be set aside. Honors form an indigenous part of the game of bridge. They have established themselves in everybody's mind with the play. Why abolish them? Why even advance the question?

Why?—indeed why?

By merely brushing a question aside you do not answer it.

An investigation, at least, might be permitted! A calm, impartial consideration.

Ever since bridge has been played; something less than a score of years, count cards eloquently held their share in it. Was it a rule due to intrinsic merit, or the whim, taste, chance? Perhaps it was a sort of legacy that could not be declined.

In times gone by with long whist the scorer took account of tricks as well as of honors.

Holding of high cards in the trump suit meant the garnering of a double harvest. They fairly assured you of the odd trick, besides the need derived from luck and again cared for in the count. Such favors on one's side never failed to engage success. With luck twofold and some little skill the contrary remained not long in doubt. With eighty per cent of the former and twenty per cent of the latter, as has been estimated, it still was a fair game.

Short whist, with the count of tricks only, came into vogue. It was satisfied with a ratio of some 75 of luck to 25 of skill.

Bridge, the latest invention, the offspring from whist, returned to the old way of the honors, preparatory to the count hand, substituting auction bidding for the Fortune. No one will maintain there is any skill involved when the deal happens to shower the face cards on you; no one, unless the sleight of hand to stack cards be admitted.

If whist, short of the honor score, has decidedly been deemed an improvement, what is the reason auction may not follow in the same footsteps? Some time sooner or later, such arguments will multiply, and in time may prevail.

The confusion resulting from admitting the suit count to progress of bidding my previous articles endeavored to present. That confusion becomes akin to injustice when probing the scoring of honors and comparing effects on the course of the play. Incongruities emerge of such nature that silence grows criminal. In all fairness tricks should go to the skilful player. The measure of ability is the count below the line. Honors that mean luck exclusively are registered above the line. A club trick is valued at 6; with simple honors besides you mark 12 above. Tricks and honors on one side, your own. Sometimes, as they have a way of doing, the club bidder does not get all the club honors; sometimes simple honors lie on the other side. By skill superior to that previously shown you will capture the one club odd, for which your gain is 6 again on a play a little more difficult, against which your opponents mark for the luck of getting simple honors your trump declaration. The ratio luck in comparison to skill [illegible] out line and does seem to be misplaced [illegible] way of scoring.

Looking deeper into this matter one almost arrives at the conclusion honors should count inversely—that is, for the side not holding them. The partners by virtue of not holding the majority of the court cards are contracting a more difficult task, and for that reason should find compensation in scoring them above the line. The adage in negative no rump bids could then logically, score on the side holding them—just the reverse to the count obtaining at present.

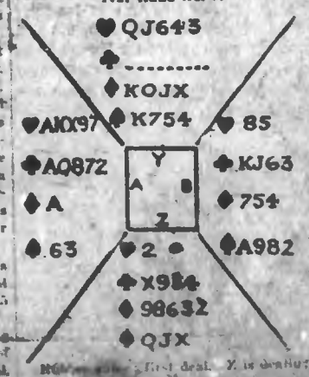
In truth, such a proposition is not simply risky; it would sound the trumpet call of revolution. It might grow to be auction's death knell—take it as a flight of fancy. A tendency to reform, to improve, may prove deserving, but to go beyond?

All I will ask you:—Do you think honors should be admitted to or precluded from, score? Is it advisable to adopt the short whist policy and abolish the honor score?

Will any of my readers second this suggestion and accept it as a reasonable development of the growing demand to more evenly adjust the ratio between chance and skill? Let this question be seriously considered—the opinions of many players would be of utmost interest.

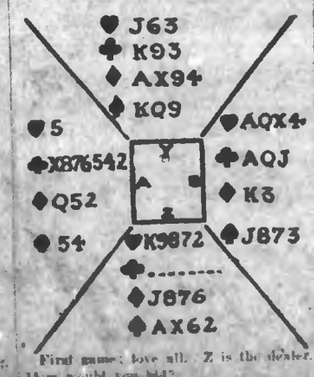
Test hands No. 5 and No. 6, omitted for want of space last Sunday, have particular reference to the inconsistency in the present way of bidding by [illegible] pound value.

Test Hand No. 5.



Ryan's play; first deal. Y is dealer. How would you bid?

Test Hand No. 6.



First game; love all. Z is the dealer. How would you bid?

HEART WAS SO BAD
Could Not Do Her Housework

Many women get run down and are unable to look after their household duties owing to the heart action becoming impaired or the nervous system unstrung. To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Thomas Melville, Belmont, Sask., writes:—"I thought it my duty to write and tell you how much your Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. My heart was so bad I could not sleep, eat nor walk about the house. I could not do my housework at all, and what my husband could not do had to go undone. I had two small children depending on me besides three men to cook for, and it worried me to not be able to do anything. My husband had taken some of your pills some years ago, and insisted on me trying them, so I started, and before I had finished them two weeks I was considerably better, and before I had taken five boxes I was doing my own work again. Any one suffering from heart or nerve trouble should just give your pills a trial. If anyone cares to write me I will gladly give them all the information I know concerning your wonderful medicine."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

LUNCHEON FOR ONE

Joy Frisbee was so miserable that she made no effort to veil her feelings as she sauntered along State Street that crisp spring morning. The previous evening, for the 19th time in their three months' engagement, she and Sam Touhy had hopelessly quarrelled. And this quarrel was fatal.

Sam had insisted that now, since women had the ballot, she should vote. She had declared that she'd do no such thing—she was far too busy embroidering lingerie for her trousseau. Then Sam had rejoined, altogether too heatedly for a lover, that for consistency sake, in view of the fact that she had read the papers and had talked for the past year before suffrage organizations, she ought to vote.

With a lover's sympathy, Sam should have realized that her head ached furiously from having delivered, that very noon, one of those selfsame talks to a group of workers in a steam laundry. However, if Sam persisted in being so utterly stupid—well, if she had told him, she would never speak to him again! Never!

Merely because she was not a vagabond, and could not vagrantly stand still, Joy meandered about noon into Sam's Grill. She glided to a small side table, in the wake of a happy looking usher. Choosing the seat that faced the wall, she dropped wearily into it.

A carmine lipped waitress, dainty and trim in prescribed white and blue came immediately to Joy.

As she was ambling through the bill of soups—how she hated soup!—she noticed from under her lowered lids that the happy-looking usher had placed on the floor, beside her table, a suitcase and travelling bag. On these some man had quickly deposited a top coat and umbrella.

Though her eyes were impassively lowered, Joy saw a man take the seat opposite her. She then half glanced up to take a bored survey of the newcomer.

"Sa-a-a-m — o-h-h-h — Sam —" fumbled Joy in a smothered voice. She half rose, grasping the edge of the table for support. Sam looked at her lovably, a coolly surprised and thoroughly curious stranger.

Joy was half piqued, half relieved and completely mortified. Her face flamed, and she sank back in her chair, steadying her lip with her teeth.

The carmine lipped waitress arranged the silver on the table in a casual fashion. As she did so she stealthily watched her patrons.

"Special chicken dinner to-day, miss," she at length suggested. Though Joy had pondered the menu long it had been to no purpose. Now she made no answer. Her callous brain had not heard, for through her throbbing lids she saw watching her with diabolic politeness.

"Chicken and asparagus." His voice sounded hungry and brisk, Joy noted with some bitterness. Evidently her edict of the previous evening had not impaired his appetite.

The carmine lipped waitress jotted down the order and again turned to Joy, who was still gazing impotently at her card.

"Oh—my mistake!" she squealed suddenly. "I see now. The order is for two. And smiling slyly she hurried away.

For one dazed second Joy contemplated dashing for the door. But she knew that her trembling limbs would never carry her that far.

Sam meanwhile had clutched a huge piece of French roll and was gripping it for dear life. His gaze was rivetted on a time card, which Joy noticed was upside down.

If she ever forgave him for this he'd know it. "But," she whispered to herself, "did he purposely follow me into the grill? Because I commanded him never again even to think of me, is he actually going off to Panama, there to get a job as a steam shovel man? He swore to."

Remembering the suitcase and bag, Joy grew very fearful. To be sure, it was a far cry from a punctilious cashier in a marble front bank to a "rough neck on the big ditch," as Sam himself would say. But Sam was very determined.

Involuntarily Joy's delicate brown hand began to glide across the white cloth toward Sam's. One word from her, she knew—but no! That waitress was bearing down upon them with cloying food! Joy realised this with fury, and to dissipate her anger she foolishly picked up a pink and gold salt, at which she stuck out her tongue. Then, conscious of what she had done, she shoved it violently from her. It fell to the floor with a crash.

Sam meanwhile clutched his French roll and studied his topsturvy folder, immovable as a Juggernaut.

As for the waitress—she approached, serenely arranged a number of dishes about Sam and left. In a haze of weak fury Joy then saw that the two orders had been served as one.

To this day Sam and Joy marvel just how Sam ever succeeded in serving. However, the next thing Joy knew she was attacking a hillock of tasteless food and plowing it down like a farm hand. It seemed a philopena who could eat the faster. But Sam won. Joy's last bit of asparagus was quivering on her fork in mid air when Sam crumpled his napkin and turned up one green check that had been placed on their table.

Then Joy leaned forward, her breath puffing hot and dry. Ah—she had seen—"Two chicken and side dish, $2."

Sam continued studying the green pasteboard with gracious self-composure.

"I beg your pardon, miss. There has been some slight mistake." Sam's eyes danced ever so slightly, but his lips were rigid. "I couldn't refuse to serve you, seeing that the honour was thrust upon me, but when it comes to the bill—"

Joy, who was now clutching both sides of her plate and vowing that she hated—hated—hated Sam, was conscious only of a senseless clatter in her throat. "Ye-s, er—yes," she finally managed to gasp. "I suspected all along—er—that—"

"I'll call the maid," said Sam, intensely unconscious of the distress of his vis-a-vis.

Call the maid! It was more than Joy could bear. Up went her elbows on the table and she cried softly, all beaten.

"Dear girl, I'm a reptile!" Sam leaned across the little table. In view of the entire grill and the watchful, carmine-lipped waitress, he drew down Joy's hands.

"But I never can forgive you for this, Sammy, never!" Joy sobbed at length and recuperatively. "You're a—a—did you chase in here after me?"

Sam smiled confessedly.

"And you won't go down to Panama to become a steam shovel man?"

"Not if you marry me immediately."

"But, but, Sammy," Joy stammered in fright, "the invitations are ordered for a big church wedding, and anyway—there—there—please, Sammy! Don't look at me like that again. I'll marry you right away."

Orchard And Garden Notes

Plan a good flower garden from which flowers may be cut this summer. Order the seed now.

Try topworking a few apple or plum trees. The work is interesting and not hard.

Flower and vegetable seed for later transplanting may be sown in hotbeds now or in flats set on the hot bed.

Melons and cucumbers may be started in hotbeds in berry boxes, or on squares of sod, by the middle of April.

Plant more berry-producing shrubs about the home for ornamental purposes. Some are useful for both food and ornamentation.

Early sweet peas may be sown in berry boxes or pots and transplanted outdoors as soon as the weather is settled and the soil workable.

If snow has drifted over currants and small shrubs, forming a crust, scatter cinders or ashes over them. These will melt the snow irregularly, and the bushes will not be smothered.

Accounts Probe Shows That They Are Used For Anything

SCHOOL GRANTS "PARED"

TORONTO, April 16.—Bond debentures by the Provincial Government were discussed by the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature yesterday. Mr. C. M. Bowman, Chief Liberal Whip, who was conducting the examination, ascertained from Mr. C. H. Sproule, Assistant Provincial Treasurer, that although loans were authorized by the Legislature for specific purposes, the Department never actually "earmarked" the money, but the proceeds from the loans were placed to the credit of the consolidated revenue fund and used for general purposes.

C. H. Sproule, assistant Provincial Treasurer, was a witness in connection with the taxation and application of loans. He said that of the $5,-000,000 authorized two years ago for Northern Ontario development, $4,-000,000 has been raised. Of this sum $1,200,000 has been expended on New Ontario. The balance, he said, has been used for any general purpose where a vote has been made by the Legislature. When the money is needed in New Ontario new debentures may be required.

J. H. Humphreys, of the Department of Education, was examined with regard to the reduction of rural public school grants. While in 1913 the Treasury had assisted the Department to the extent of $80,000 in meeting the extra grants earned by the schools, in 1915 the Department had been forced to cut down the grants to the public schools to 72 per cent. The separate schools had been paid in full.

The aim of the Department of Agriculture to place the horse-breeding of Ontario on a new standard of excellence will be furthered by Hon. James Duff's new measure, which will allow only pure bred stallions to be used after 1918. In addition clauses are added to the Stallion Enrolment Act, which will make the inspection of all animals compulsory and work towards the weeding out of inferior cross-bred animals.

To make the plan work out without undue enthusiasm the first stage will be enforced in 1916, and the lower class of grade animals will be ruled out of service. Then the total enforcement will follow.

Hon. Mr. Hearst introduced a bill to amend the Territorial Division Act and which will make clear the judicial boundaries of Manitoulin and Sudbury for judicial and other purposes. This was followed by an insurance amendment of Hon. J. J. Foy, which will ask that in future certain forms of insurance companies, especially those operating on a fraternal basis will be required to submit more tabulated returns than usual. The rates now being charged by some are understood to be much lower than those recognized by actuaries and with a view to educating the country in the ways of insurance policy the bill will not be passed this year but printed and distributed.

A special bill, brought into the Legislature yesterday by the Minister of Lands, Forests, and Mines, is designed to elucidate some of the clauses in the Election Act, relating to the exercise of manhood franchise at the polls. A change will be made to enforce the submission of all nominations in writing and signed by at least 50 nominees.

Registration booths will be kept open at noon hereafter.

Before the Legislature in committee of the whole, Hon. Mr. Lucas explained certain amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, chief among which was the inclusion in the measure of the salaries to be paid to the new board—$10,000 to the chairman, $6,000 to the vice-chairman and $5,000 to the commissioner.

That's Different.

She—I hate big check patterns for cloth dresses. He—That's the pattern of the last check I sent your dressmaker for three—thirteens.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts if Both Kidneys & Bladder bothers you

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly, backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disease.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

WHAT THIN FOLKS SHOULD DO TO GAIN WEIGHT

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness; poorly nourished and feeble stomachs often having lived subnormal dead-balance, food-fails, improper culture and health habits, are responsible. Many seem to attribute their condition to different circumstances and think nothing will make them fat. But usually that is not helpful. A recently discovered compounding tablet known here as Sargol has after years of experiment, been specially evolved for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable agency is called Sargol. Its strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this specific preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting causes of thinness and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that this greatly aided are provided. Leading druggists usually forgot and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

Chinese Plot Revealed.

LONDON, April 16.—Chinese Government officials in Shanghai yesterday arrested a number of revolutionaries who had come from Japan, according to a despatch. They were charged with spreading sedition among the Chinese soldiers.

At the same time documents were seized, alleged to be signed by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, former Provisional President. They are said to contain instructions for a widespread uprising and the massacre of official this month.

Japan Apologizes and Pays.

PEKIN, April 15. — The Japanese Government yesterday expressed its regret to the Chinese Government for the Chang-Ti incident, which occurred on September, 1915, when several Chinese soldiers were killed by Japanese troops who were occupying a section of the Mukden Railway. Japan also agreed to pay $50,000 (Mexican), in compensation to the families of the soldiers killed.

TO BUILD MEMORIALS.

Peace Monuments to Cost $1,500,000 Are Approved.

NEW YORK, April 16.—Memorials marking the centennial of peace between this country and Great Britain in 1915, at an aggregate cost of $1,000,000, were tentatively approved yesterday by a sub-committee of the American Centenary organization, meeting in this city. The organization's finance committee must yet ratify the appropriations and conditional contracts made.

Sums of from $25,000 to $75,000 each were set apart for statues of Lincoln in London; Francis Parkman the historian, in Ottawa, and Queen Victoria in Washington, D.C. Free educational trips abroad for newspaper men of all countries are to be instituted with the proceeds of one of the funds available for the committee's use, it was announced. Ignorance of foreign countries causes writing which engenders friction, while foreign travel for newspaper men would promote peace, in the opinion of the committee. To writers of poems, hymns and essays visiting peace and the Centenary celebration $16,500 in prizes will be distributed. A gift of $20,000 was voted to the city of Ghent, Belgium, where the treaty of 1815 was signed.

HE WARNS EVERYBODY.

Boston Doctor Says Panama Canal Opening Will Be Costly.

BOSTON, April 16.—Fear that the opening of the Panama Canal may be followed by a world-wide distribution of yellow fever and cholera, which will threaten very great commercial loss, was expressed yesterday by Dr. Richard P. Strong, head of the Harvard Medical School of Tropical Medicine.

Dr. Strong was formerly at the head of the Government biological laboratory in the Philippines, and later became prominent through his work in combating the pneumonic plague in Manchuria. Last year he led the Harvard Medical School expedition to Peru, where an extensive study of tropical diseases was made.

"The question to be feared from the spread of tropical diseases by traffic through the Panama Canal," he said, "are rather heavy financial losses through disturbance of trade than any great loss of life. Modern medicine has so far mastered the ways of checking infectious diseases that in many civilized countries no great mortality is to be feared from the introduction even of plague, yellow fever or even cholera. It is necessary, however, to hold up trade in order to check the disease."

TOO MUCH IDEALISM.

London Editors Sympathize With Wilson In Difficulties.

LONDON, April 16.—Most London morning papers, in their editorial comment on the Mexican situation, display sympathy with President Wilson in the difficulties which have arisen with Mexico, while at the same time contending that those difficulties were largely brought about by his idealistic policy.

The Daily Telegraph contends believes that President Wilson intended to put into effect a requisite military intervention, and says no hope of getting him said "to the anarchy which has resulted from the Wilsonian policy of moral handwashing."

The Chronicle maintains that any sovereign state might, without loss of dignity, have addressed the Tampico affront "on receipt of the apology which Huerta had already tendered, and says:

"It is therefore difficult to disconnect the President's action entirely from the actions of Mr. Lind. It is evident that Mr. Lind went home to urge stronger measures, and stronger measures have followed forthwith. They need not involve war. The Americans need only to sit tight at Tampico and Vera Cruz and collect the customs."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Welland Canal was opened for through traffic yesterday morning.

The appointment of Sir Lionel Carden, former British Minister to Mexico, as British Minister to Brazil was officially announced yesterday.

A settlement of the Yorkshire coal miners' strike was reached yesterday when a ballot of the 17,000 involved resulted in favor of the resumption of work.

Pending hearing of the charges preferred against him, Premier Flemming of New Brunswick has been granted leave of absence, and Attorney-General Grant will be acting Premier.

The body of the young man who was killed on the C. P. R. bridge on Tuesday night was identified yesterday at Harry Lemaire. He was a harness maker and had been working in Toronto.

Must Give Evidence.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Unless there is an overnight change in the attitude of witnesses in the New Haven Railroad investigation, who refused to tell the Interstate Commerce Commission about the operation of the Billard Company, to which millions of dollars' worth of New Haven securities are alleged to have illegally diverted, proceedings under the criminal statutes will be instituted here to-day by the Government to compel them to testify. This was announced last night by Joseph W. Folk, chief counsel of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Proposals to Tag Miners.

TOPEKA, Kas., April 16.—As a means of enabling them to do their part in enforcing the city ordinance against selling tobacco to miners Topeka tobacco merchants and pool hall owners have suggested the plan of requiring every boy under 18 years to wear a tag with his age printed on it.

Plants Grow on Telegraph Wires.

In Porto Rico, where the air is moist and balmy, air plants find lodgment in odd places, some of which attract as much attention from the casual visitor as when they grow on the telephone and telegraph wires. The insulation rots in places, and the plants take root, grow and thrive. In Ponce especially considerable trouble is caused, and new wires are put up in place of old ones, as they are hard to keep clean. Air plants are referred to as "current bushes" or "electric light plants," but are really a variety of Epiphytes, a class of plant life to which the orchids belong.—Popular Mechanics.

All The Tired Nervous Women

Can Find a Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Madame Perreault Tells How She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Found Health and Contentment.

Verner, Ont., April 15.—(Special.) "I am very content. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me well." Those are the words of Madame Eugene Perreault, a highly respected lady of this place, and mother of a large family. For twenty years she was a sufferer. But, let her tell her own story.

"I was always tired and nervous," she states. "I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. My limbs were heavy, and I had a dragging sensation across my loins. My skin itched and burned at night. I had a bitter taste in my mouth, especially in the morning. In twenty years I hardly knew what it was to have a well moment. Then I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me."

Madame Perreault's symptoms were those of kidney disease. They are the symtoms of nine out of ten of the nervous, run-down pain-racked women of Canada. Madame Perreault found a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. They simply cured her kidneys.

Good to choice feeders are in demand at $7.25 to $7.50; medium stockers at $6.75 to $7.10; stockers at $5 to $6.50.

Milkers and Springers.

Good to choice milkers were in demand at $60 to $90 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves being larger there was an easier feeling on the market. Choice veal calves sold up to $10, but there are few of this class coming forward. Common to good sold at $8 to $9, the bulk of sales being made around the latter figure.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were large, with prices very firm. Sheep, ewes, sold at $6.50 to $7; rams at $5 to $6; yearling lambs at $7.75 to $8.50; spring lambs at $9 to $10 each.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9.40; $9.75 f.o.b. cars; and $9.65 weighed off cars.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 15.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending April 11 were: 1,000 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 600 hogs and 1,000 calves.

The receipts of live stock for this week's supply consisted of 650 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 750 hogs and 1,500 calves.

The tone of the market for cattle was steady owing to the small supply but it was ample to fill all requirements. The demand for milch cows is quiet at this time intervening until the time of the spring fair is over with sales of choice at $70 to $80, and lower grades from $45 to $70 each.

The trade in small meats was fairly active, there being a good demand for small lots, and as supplies were not large prices ruled steady.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, April 15.—Cattle—Steady prices; unchanged.

Veals—Receipts, 50; active and steady; $5 to $10.

Hogs—Receipts, 1,400; steady; 10c lower; heavy, $8.60 to $8.70; mixed, $8.70 to $8.75; yorkers, $8.75 to $8.80; pigs, $8.75 to $8.80; roughs, $7.25 to $7.35; stags, $7 to $7.50; dairies, $8 to $8.75.

Sheep, receipts, 22,000; steady; wethers, $8.50 to $9; ewes, $7.50 to $8.40; lambs, $8.50 to $10.

A Fine Picture of Lincoln.

And now Abraham Lincoln rose from his seat, stretched his long, body inches upward as if to get them into working order, and stood the same ordinary man as a fairly average, many sell, very dark, very gaunt and very rugged, the swarthy features stamped with a sad serenity, and the instant he began to speak the ungainly mouth lost its heaviness, the half hidden eyes attained wonderful power, and the people about bewildered and breathless under the natural magic of the strangest, most original personality known to the English speaking world since Robert Burns.

There were other very tall and dark men in the heterogeneous assembly, but not one who resembled the speaker. Every movement of his long, muscular frame denoted indefinite earnestness, and a something inward forth, elemental and mystical, that told what the man had been, what he was and what he would be in the future.—From "The Valley of Shadows," by Francis Grierson.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1914

NEW CAR LINE OUT CHARLOTTE STREET AND SOUTH TO PATTERSON STREET

800 Feet South of Monaghan Road—A "Y" Will Be Built for Turning Purposes Near the End of Patterson Street—Mr. W. H. Munroe Outlines Some of the Changes Which the Peterboro' Radial Railway Company Will Make This Year.

NEW CAR PURCHASED

New line out Charlotte to Monaghan Road and south to Patterson street.

New car on the way for George Street line.

Short double tracking on George and Charlotte streets where they intersect.

Division of George Street line south to Romaine and east to Lock street.

A 35-foot turnout on Romaine street.

New "turnout" to be placed south of Smith street.

Four cars will be used on George street.

Ten-minute service on all lines.

The plans of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company for 1914 construction work includes a new car line extending west on Charlotte Street, from the corner of Park Street to the Monaghan Road, and south on the Monaghan Road to the end of Patterson Street.

Mr. Munroe stated to the Examiner this morning that a new car has been ordered and will be put into service when the proposed alterations on George Street have been completed. Built on the general lines of the present George Street cars it will also embrace some ideas suggested by Mr. Munroe to the builders. Although only thirty inches longer than the present cars its ordinary capacity will be 32 as compared with 28 of the last cars purchased. It will be seen that the two and one-half extra feet in length provide for almost double the capacity of the present cars. The Conductor will be separated from the passengers by only a railing, thus providing a saving of space in the vestibule. It will be of the P.A.Y.E. type and will make the fourth car on the George Street line.

Met the Board of Works.

Mr. Munroe met the Board of Works last night and asked that the 'turnout' on Romaine Street be increased from 300 to 350 feet.

As explained a few days ago, the George Street route will be extended from Lake to Romaine, instead of around by Lock, as at present. The new section will turn east at Romaine Street to Lock Street, connecting with the present service.

Cut Out 'Turnouts'.

The 'turnout' at the George Street wharf will be eliminated and also the Central Park 'turnout.' Mr. Munroe said he hoped to provide for the removal of the 'turnout' on Park Street, immediately north of Charlotte Street, thus improving all these sections of roadway.

A new 'turnout' will be laid south of Smith Street on the George Street line, and, of course, the short double tracking on George Street, north of Charlotte, and on Charlotte, west of George Street.

Round the Corner.

Mr. Munroe suggested to the Board the rounding of the north west corner of the little park at the intersection of Park, Downie and Charlotte Streets. Only a small portion would need to be removed in order to widen that part of the roadway for vehicular traffic. The C. G. E. cars turn south at this point and a comparatively limited space extends from the car to several posts on the corner of the miniature park.

Ald. Duncan promised that this would be taken up. It was also suggested by one of the members that an effort should be made to straighten Charlotte Street, where it passes Park Street. If ten feet off Mr. And. Brown's corner lot could be secured it would materially assist in improving the street.

Mayor Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the Romaine Street 'turnout' be extended, as required.

Drunk and Disorderly Man Was Fined $5.75

A local young man was charged in Police Court this morning with conducting himself in a drunken and disorderly manner last night. Evidence given showed that he went home badly intoxicated, and started raising a disturbance, breaking furniture, and vowing threats of vengeance upon all who would dare to stop him in his suffragistic campaign. Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $2 and $3.75 costs.

DEPUTATION OF UNEMPLOYED COMPLAINED TO MAYOR BULLER

Objected to the Engaging of Outside Labourers for the Street Paving Work—Believed That Several Hundred Italians Were to Be Brought Into Peterboro'

LOTS OF WORK ON MONDAY

A deputation of unemployed men waited upon Mayor Buller this morning and presented an objection to the importation of foreigners for the street paving work which will be commenced in a few days.

Mayor Buller immediately interviewed Mr. Davis, who is in charge of the work for Foley and Gleason, and was informed that the some thirty Italians would be employed because of their experience in street work. They went wherever the construction company had a contract and were regarded as permanent employees. No other men would be brought into the City, and Mr. Davis assured the Mayor that on Monday next when the operations are recommenced for this year, a large number of local men would be given employment. As Mayor Buller expressed it, he was informed that there would be plenty of work on Monday next.

One of the delegation stated to the Examiner that the men had learned on good authority that several hundred Italians were to be brought into the City, hence their appeal to Mayor Buller.

ZEPHRA IS REPEATED

Another Brilliant Performance at the Grand Opera House Last Evening

The big extravaganza "Zephra" was repeated at the Grand Opera House last night, and the big audience present was enthusiastic in its reception of this brilliant production. The performance was even more pleasing than on the opening night, and the programme was carried out more smoothly. The principals all did splendid work, while the choruses, drills and dances were executed in a most pleasing manner. The audience was very lavish in its applause, and the different numbers were enthusiastically received. "Zephra" will be given again to-night, and tomorrow afternoon the final performance will be put on. The 57th Regimental Band will be on hand this evening.

MANY WILD DUCKS ARE FLYING NORTH

Mayor Buller states that he never saw so many wild ducks, nor saw them flying so low as those that flew past him in the vicinity of McKenty's Bay up in the Buckhorn Lake country, where he spent Tuesday looking after his wood supply. The game birds are winging their way north and keep close to the ground. The water in the lakes is rather low, and the ice is beginning to break up. His Worship walked several miles over the ice, his only trouble being to walk a board over water that fringed the shore. Out a short distance it was solid and dry.

THE MEXICAN SITUATION IS BRIGHTER TO-DAY

Last Minute Bulletins Seem to Indicate That Huerta is Prepared to Back Down From His Position

NOTHING OFFICIAL

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 16—Last minute bulletins from the White House indicate rather more encouraging news from Mexico from a peace standpoint. A sheaf of despatches received from Charge d'Affairs Shaughnessy, at Mexico, at noon, are said to indicate that President Huerta shows signs of backing down and saluting the American flag, according to the United States demands. Nothing official has been given out, however.

A. H. Stratton received the following despatch over his wire this afternoon:

Washington, D. C. April 16—It is said that President Huerta has acceded to the demands of the U. S. and will order a salute of 21 guns to the American flag.

SCAVENGERS' BY-LAW IS NOW IN FORCE

Sanitary Inspector Spence's Latest Legislation to Safeguard the Public

The latest piece of municipal legislature, promulgated by Sanitary Inspector Spence, and known as the Scavengers By-law, is now in force. It requires these men to secure a licence at the nominal fee of $1. The refuse they collect is required to be taken to the incinerator, but heretofore these men have been using the town dumping ground in North Monaghan. Hereafter, they will not be allowed to do any work without an order from the Sanitary Inspector, and people requiring the work to be done must 'phone the Inspector before making any arrangements.

The scavengers will only be allowed to charge a uniform price. The Inspector says that old hands at the game have often charged prices that are away too high, while a new man just starting in the business does the work much more cheaply. The people have been badly imposed upon before, and the by-law was made by Mr. Spence to protect the people in this matter. His actions will doubtless be much appreciated by the citizens.

In brief, the by-law is a plan to regulate the business principle of this class of work. There are many interesting features about the by-law, all in the interest of the general public, which will be published at a later date.

HOME RULE HAS CEASED TO BE ISSUE IN BRITAIN

Examiner Special:

LONDON, April 16—Home Rule has ceased to be a crisis. The papers give hardly any hint that a controversy exists. There are no leading articles and few letters, and no speeches. It is very probable also that solicitude for the success of the King's visit to Paris, next week, has a good deal to do with it. English parties are keen enough over their own quarrels, but too proud to make an exhibition of internal discord while the King is the guest of France. Elaborate preparations are being made to focus all attention on the French visit. It is reported that Belfast merchants, who have been strong financial backers of the Carson movement, have urged him to find means of a settlement. Interior traders are already diverting their orders from Belfast.

ANTI-YANKEE RIOTS HAVE BROKEN OUT IN MEXICO

Special Wire to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 16.—The only news from Mexico City which got past Huerta's censors this morning was the statement that Charge D'Affairs O'Shaughnessy and his wife were the guests of President Huerta at a society function last night. It is expected that the dispatches may have been "cooked up" under Huerta's direction to lead the United States into imagining that the relations at Mexico were perfectly friendly. As a matter of fact, great anxiety prevails here in regard to the safety of United Statesers anywhere in Mexico. Reports say this morning that anti-Yankee riots have broke out in Vera Cruz and other places where the United States' Consulates and the flag have been grossly insulted during the last few hours. In the meantime there is nothing official here from Huerta and the United States Atlantic squadron is rushing towards Tampico with all speed.

BRANTFORD MURDER TRIAL WAS COMMENCED TO-DAY

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., April 16.—Not for years has such interest been taken in a murder trial here as in that of Thomas Riley, the railway man, which commenced at the Assizes this morning. Riley is charged with the murder of George Blackburn, bartender at the Hotel Cecil, in November last.

Riley in the dock appeared dazed by the proceedings. It took some time to secure a jury. The Crown authorities apparently desired to have all farmers. When finally selected three were nine farmers and three city men.

Crown Prosecutor Creswick in his presentment, declared that Riley committed "a cold-blooded premeditated murder."

COMMITTEE HEARS OF THE EVILS OF THE CIGARETTE

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 16.—Before Andrew Broder's committee on cigarette legislation to-day, W. L. Scott, president of the Children's Aid Society of Ontario, gave startling evidence as to the spread of cigarette smoking. He said that practically all boys between twelve and sixteen, and some girls, whom his society had to send to Industrial schools were cigarette fiends. He said the lack of parental control was responsible. Answering members of the committee witness said he knew that cigarettes smoking among society women was already popular, even mothers of families being addicted to it, the mothers of some of Canada's best families. He did not think the habit had extended very largely to "middle and lower classes" of women in Canada.

Judge Choquette, of the Montreal Juvenile Court, said ninety-five per cent. of the children he had to deal with were addicted to the cigarette, and ninety per cent. went to movies.

He favoured a Dominion law that smoking or having tobacco in their possession by the boys and girls under sixteen should be made a criminal offence, subject to drastic punishment.

HELPFUL ADDRESSES ON MATTERS OF HEALTH

Dr. Clinton, Medical Officer of Health, Lectures on Tuberculosis and Sanitary Inspector Spence on Milk Supply.

STRIKING ILLUSTRATIONS

Practical illustrations by means of moving pictures, were the feature of a highly instructive address, which was given last night in the Assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Ontario Health Department. The attendance was discouraging, very few people being present to take the opportunity of learning, from medical, and other authorities, how to combat that most serious of diseases, tuberculosis.

There were a large number of doctors present, including Dr. Clinton, District Health Officer; Dr. Kindred of Havelock, the Medical Health Officer of North Monaghan; Dr. Amys, Chairman of the local Board of Health, and Sanitary Inspector Spence.

The doctors, numbering about 12, were entertained at dinner at the Oriental Hotel before the lecture, after which function they held a meeting to consider the advisability of forming a Medical Health Association in this part of Ontario.

Prevention Rather Than Cure.

Dr. Amys, Chairman, in opening the meeting indeed, briefly explained the aims and objects of the Health Department, in instituting different areas, where the Legislature had to be conformed with.

If you have a case of scarlet fever or any other contagious disease in your home, and conceal it, you are doing harm to both yourself and your physician. By arresting it in an initial stage, a good work is being done.

The Health Act.

Dr. Clinton, in a short address, previous to the exhibition of the "movies," outlined, briefly, the various stages of the Health Act.

The first Health Act came into force in 1870. Some time afterwards there were numerous amendments, until there were so many that they did not know where they were. In 1912 the Act was revised and, strange to say, when it was brought before Parliament, it had the unanimous support of both parties. The duties of the officers who were placed in charge of as many districts, were to enforce the Act as much as they could. The sole object of the Act is to work for and with the public. The District Health Officer has to be dependent, to a largeextent, upon the local Health Officer, while the District Officer, in turn, is dependent upon the Government. The best medical health officer in the country is the man who prevents disease, rather than cures it. The officer who prevents disease is accomplishing much more than any one who effects a cure.

Tuberculosis Not Hereditery.

Tuberculosis, said the Doctor, is not hereditary, and I say that without fear of contradiction. If the father, or the mother has tuberculosis it does not necessarily follow, however, that the son will have it, too; or even run the risk of consumption, so long as he observes the rules of health. A picture was then thrown on the screen, and is briefly explained in the following story:

An Illustration.

John Bond is a rich tenement owner. He visits one of his tenements one day, and the occupants, a brother and sister, and two children, implore him to better the conditions under which they are existing. He takes no head of them however. John Bond, the owner, marries, and is taking a trip in a yacht. The brother, formerly depicted in the tenement, is engaged as a cabin boy. He takes sick during the voyage, and dies, of tuberculosis. Mrs. Bond contracts the disease through nursing him. Her condition becomes such as to necessitate her removal to a sanatorium, where a cure is effected. Meanwhile Bond, seeing the folly of allowing his tenants to live in such abject misery, impoverished and dirty surroundings, learns a lesson from his wife's illness, and improves the conditions.

The five essentials for curing tuberculosis were then shown on the screen. They are: the doctor, sunlight, outdoor aid, good food and rest.

Milk.

Sanitary Inspector Spence then gave a short lecture on milk. He said in the first instance that Peterborough was to be congratulated on its milk supply, on the cleanliness thereof, and the milkman is to be congratulated for the manner in which he subscribes and caters to the betterment of the public health, by keeping his milk in a good and sanitary condition.

Better than Many Homes.

It is interesting to know, he continued, how the milk supply is guarded, by the inspection of the dairy farms from which the milk is pro-

MISSED $19 WATER DISCOUNT BY FEW HOURS DELAY

Large Householder Should Have Paid His Rates on Wednesday, and Discount He Would Have Obtained Totalled $19

OTHERS WERE DILATORY

A delay of a few hours in paying his water rates cost one citizen $19 this morning. Yesterday concluded the discount period, and in spite of the notices that had been sent out, and the newspaper advertising from fifty to a hundred accounts were paid to-day. The man who overlooked the $19 discount is a large householder. He had received his notice in regular form, and intended to take advantage of discount. He was hardly a day late in his visit to City Treasurer Adams, but good intentions could not put the calendar back twenty-four hours. Many of the others whose memory slipped a cog, or who procrastinated, were in some cases people who could scarcely afford the extravagance of passing up a discount.

A comical filmization full of crisp mirth and jollity. A vividly laughable photo play that's a scream all through.

Two reels of tangibly, touching tickles.—A delightfully piquant dramatic comedy full of snap and ginger and fairly sparkling with humour, made by one of the leading film companies of the world, and one of the best comedies ever attempted by motion picture manufacturers.

You want to get in early to-night at the popular Red Mill. Come and have a dime good time.

NEW DIRECTOR FOR LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

Mr. George A. Carson of Winnipeg, has been appointed Physical Director of the local Y. M. C. A. to succeed Mr. J. J. Thompson. Mr. Carson will arrive in Peterborough about June 1st. He comes highly recommended and is well qualified for this branch of Y.M.C. work. Mr. Carson is a graduate of the Y. M. C. A. College at Springfield, Mass., where he took a four years' course, graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Physical Exercise. For two years he was engaged by the City of Winnipeg as Playgrounds Instructor. For the past year he has been at the Central Y. M. C. A., in the Western City, under Mr. H. R. Haddock.

Mr. Carson is one of the leading young men of the Dominion, and his work here should be crowned with success.

FRATERNAL SYMPATHY.

We are pained to note that the Kingston Standard comes to us with the "smell of fire" upon its garments We condole with our contemporary upon the loss it has suffered by a fire that did damage to the amount of $20,000. The Examiner can sympathize with the Standard for it has suffered in a similar way and knows what confusion and dislocation of business a fire in a newspaper establishment can and does produce. But we are sure that the enterprise and ability that have placed the Standard among the best and brightest of minor city journals, will speedily restore it to its normal place, and, as is usual under such circumstances, to a higher place in the newspaper guild of Ontario. The proverb assures us that lightning does not strike twice in the same place, and there is hope that the same calamity will not come twice to the Standard; but that it will continue a long career of usefulness and distinction in its sphere. We regret that its editor and proprietor has had his holiday in Florida, shortened by the calamity, and feel certain that he will buckle down to the work of restoration with the ability and energy that have distinguished his past management of his journal.

ACTION CALLED FOR.

More in the way of reminder than of complaint, the attention of the City Council is called to the necessity of taking action in the matter of the application of the Canadian General Electric Company in connection with the provision of testing grounds for the electrical locomotives the Company proposes to manufacture in Peterborough on an extensive scale. It has been intimated that in order to build these locomotives here, extensive buildings, costing many thousand dollars, will have to be erected. There is no need of suggesting the desirability of so important an addition to our manufacturing industries. It is understood that it is the intention of the Company to enter into the manufacture mentioned; and it is better that the work should be done here, and the employment given in Peterborough than in Toronto. Peterborough has shown a commendable anxiety and a fair degree of enterprise, in giving encouragement to the establishment here of new industrial establishments. We should not, therefore, be remiss in looking after the provisions required for what will be equivalent to a new industry of capital importance. It is hoped the city authorities, responsible for dealing with the situation, will not imperil our certainty of securing the virtually new industry by any lack of the prompt action that seems to be demanded. We cannot afford to show indifference.

HYDRO RADIALS.

No one will minify the importance of the proposed provincial hydro-electric radial railway enterprises; nor adversely canvass the justice of the Dominion government subsidizing such enterprises. Ontario contributes the bulk of the revenue that goes into the Dominion treasury, and it is entitled to something of a "drawback" on mere bookkeeping, if not on other, grounds. But there is this feature of the situation to be regarded. It is evident that, especially in the beginning, and for many years to come, only a comparatively small section of the area of the province can be benefitted directly by the construction of the proposed radial railway system or systems. Geography, and practical considerations of power distribution forbid the idea of general application. It is the same with the much vaunted proposal to supply farmers with the benefits of hydro-electric service. There are about 200,000 farms in Ontario, and at the very best—under the most favourable conditions that exist or can be created—a very small number of the farmers of the province can come within the admitted, if limited, benefits of the application of electricity to farming operations. With both the proposed radial system, and the supply of farm electrical current, the idea of compensation is associated. If these enterprises are to be financed with public funds, belonging equally to every part of the province, there should be a fair deal. Those sections of the province without the zone of benefit from the two proposed enterprises, might and should be given an equivalent. If radial railways and farm electricity are to be provided at the public expense, those who cannot be served by them should have compensation. While a limited area and a comparatively few farmers are served, those on the outside might be given the beenfit of liberal expenditure on good roads. We have in the air, arising from the recommendation of a commission, the idea of spending the enormous sum of thirty million dollars to provide Ontario with good highways. This is not a dollar too much for so admirable and necessary a purpose. If favoured sections are to have radial railways and farm electricity at the public expense, the sections not so favoured, comprising the far larger part of the province, should as a matter of fairness and justice get the first and greater benefits from the expenditure of the millions on good roads. This would be a fair equivalent, be holding the balance evenly and creating an equitable average of benefits. If public money is to be spent in providing a small section of the province with radial railways and farm electricity, it would be unfair to also spend the public money lavishly on providing an excess of accommodation, by improving the highways—building speedways for motor cars and trunk highways. The expenditure should be devoted primarily and more largely to the improvement of the highways in those sections of the province that would otherwise be out in the cold.

IT IS A MANUFACTURERS' TARIFF

Seven changes in the tariff announced in the White budget have the effect of placing that number of raw materials used by manufacturers on the free list, or at a lower rate of duty than formerly existed.

On eleven important articles, representing the finished products of manufacturers, protection has been granted or existing protection increased.

On one line used by farmers, repairs to ditching machines, the duty has been removed. On two lines, binders and mowers, the tariff has been reduced.

The new tariff is a manufacturers' tariff.—Weekly Sun.

ONTARIO'S EXPENDITURE.

A budget for the Province of Ontario of seventeen millions, to which is to be added three or four millions of statutory expenditure seems pretty large, at all events, to those whose notions of economy were made in the debate on the Humber piggery. Where does the money go? We note $100,000 for the Universities, and $125,000 as a mere detail of the construction of the Lieutenant-Governor's castle. Were Sir James Whitney's loyalty not above question, he might be suspcted of designs to set up a kingdom or empire of his own. How old John Sandfield Macdonald groaned and trembled with far of the electorate, when he ventured to spend $25,000 on the old Government House. There are large estimates for New Ontario, which is a kingdom in extent, and of great variety. As to the clay belt there is still little reliable information. We are told that the prospects of agriculture north of the divide are not good. About Cochrane grain may not ripen, but it will be good for hay.

As the money to spend must be found, the Provincial Treasurer brings in new measures of taxation, requiring larger succession duties and larger contributions by banks, trust companies, loan companies and steam and electric railways. Though the people will pay, he strives to avoid direct taxation, but, direct taxation is now at hand. The public is indifferent. His measures are accepted without a word of objection or comment. Such is the waning influence of the farmer, whom the luxury and perhaps the mendicant socialism of the cities has overawed and abashed.—Weekly Sun.

THE RESULTS OF EDUCATING BOYS IN CITY STREETS

An investigator who reviewed the brief career of the four gunmen who were electrocuted on Monday for the murder of Rosenthal, the New York gambler, found one experience common to the four. All had been educated on the streets. From the streets they graduated to the poolrooms when they were old enough, and none of them was far advanced in his teens before he had displayed some of the evil tendencies that go with a street education. Of late years organized society has come to recognize that it owes a duty to children by providing them with healthful playgrounds, but there are playgrounds in New York City, and since the four gunmen were children a dozen years ago they had an opportunity of using these playgrounds. The mere buying of playgrounds will not keep boys off the street, any more than the opening of tea rooms will keep men out of hotels. We can see this very plainly in our own streets. They are frequented by hundreds of boys who invade them first for business purposes. They sell newspapers and shoe laces and probably have a legal right to ply these trades in the streets. They are in and out if hotel bars, mingling with men in various stages of intoxication, and it is only a short time before they have learned all that is vile and coarse in life. Probably many boys can go through this experience and be none the worse for it. If so they can go through any experience and not suffer. They will learn no more evil on the streets of New York than they may learn in the streets of Toronto, and once they acquire a taste for this life a thousand parks or playgrounds will not lure them away from it. Many of these youngsters are a chief support of widowed mothers, who might come to actual want if it were not for their earnings. To deprive them of the right of frequenting the streets at nights might be to impose a hardship in many a home. Yet by permitting them to run the streets at all hours to congregate with elder boys whose only influence upon them may be a depraving one, is to take a risk; it is to tolerate the conditions that produce "Gyp the Blood," "Leftie "Louie," "Whitey" Lewis and "Dago "Frank." It might be better to keep the boys off the streets and pay them for staying off instead of letting them run loose and wild. It would be cheaper in the long run than maintaining some of them as criminals when, in th enatural course of events, they have graduated into that class.

Fifteen Players Have Reported Rain Prevented Drill Yesterday

Poured All Day and the Bloomfmen Did Not Get a Chance to Don Their Uniforms--Cresswell, Fox and Belting of Last Year's Team Were Among the First to Report --Schettler is the Veteran of the Squad--Players Like Their Quarters and Will Be Lionized in Youngstown

Special to The Examiner:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 16.—The general down-pour of rain that caused a postponement of most of the games in the big leagues yesterday did not spare Youngstown and as a result Manager Curley Blount's band of Canadian Leaguers did not cavort over the diamond at Wright Park as expected. Instead they spent the day at the Tod House watching the rain peh down and making each other's acquaintance, while last year's members of the team had an old-time fanning bee. It rained all day and did not give the Bloomfmen a chance to get out. The outlook is for better weather to-day, and Manager Blount has ordered a drill, rain or shine.

The most pleasing thing about the first day was the manner in which the Pets responded to the call for training. Including Manager Blount fifteen players registered yesterday, and to-day it is expected that nearly all the others will be in with the exception of Pitcher Tracey and Stirling, who asked permission to be allowed to report on Saturday.

FIFTEEN IN LINE.

The squad already here is composed of the following:

Catchers—F. C. Kelly, Erie; Elmer McClure, Dekard, Pa.; M. Ryberg, Ridgeway, Pa.

Pitchers—Kaut Belting, Rockford, Ill.; Stan Cresswell, Peterborough; Leslie Schenter, Youngstown, O.; Bill Tirrell, Rochester, N.Y.

Infielders—Ed. Flanagan, Erie; Willie O'Hern, Lockport, N.Y.; Eddie Price, Youngstown, O.; Frank Schrage, Brockport, N.Y.; Frank Fox, Buffalo, N.Y.

Outfielders—Manager Curley Blount, Youngstown, O.; J. J Gaffney, Cleveland, O.; Chas. Naw, Jeanette, Pa.

SCHETTLER IS THE VETERAN.

Pitcher Schettler is the veteran of the squad. He has had a long experience in the Central League, the Ohio and Pennsylvania League, and other organizations, and is counted on to be one of the pitching stars of the Canadian League. The other new-comers are young and ambitious. They are a clean-looking athletic bunch of young fellows, and are dead anxious to make good. Quite a number of the squad have had some experience in professional company. Fox, Cresswell and Belting were, of course, with Peterborough last year. Schrage is the young infielder that Rowan gave a brief trial last year. He came to Peterborough from the ill-fated Empire League. Eddie Price, with whom Schrage will fight for the second sack position, was with Fond Lac in the Wisconsin League last season. Eddie Flanagan, one of the first base candidates, and Catcher Kelly, both wore Erie uniforms last year. The other candidates have made a name for themselves in semi-pro company. O'Hearn, the other aspirant for first base, is most highly recommended.

OTHERS EXPECTED TO-DAY.

It is expected that Catcher Billy Miller, Shortstops Miller and Buckley, and Outfielder Paul Dawes will be along some time to-day. Outfielder Swarts is looked for before the end of the week, and the pitching staff will be complete when Stirling and Tracey arrive.

An exhibition game has been arranged for Sunday with a local semi-professional team, and Manager Blount will then have his first chance of looking over his recruits in action against opposition.

PLAYERS LIKE THEIR QUARTERS.

Youngstown is a live city and the boys seem delighted with the place and with their quarters at the Tod House. The Youngstown boys, who will wear a Peterborough uniform this year have been acting as guides and information bureau for the rest. Manager Blount is a prime favourite in Youngstown, and the Peterborough squad promise to be lionized during their three weeks here.

FIRST BASEMAN FLANAGAN,
One of the New Pets Who is With the Squad at Youngstown.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

ERIE, April 15.—With Manager Heinie Smith's arrival in the City some time to-day and the influx of players scheduled to-day and to-morrow, Perry Field will be the scene of baseball activities Wednesday. Transportation has been forwarded to two players who have been ordered to report here Wednesday.

Perry Field has been a scene of busy preparations, getting the grounds in shape for the coming of the players, patching up the fence in parts where the fury wind played havoc and cleaning up the club house and shower baths. As an able assistant to Manager Smith Tom O'Connor, the best fan in Erie, has been taking an active interest supervising the work.

Twenty players, making twenty-one with Manager Smith, will be seen in action at Perry Field before the end of the week. Included in the bunch will be two old faces, Frank Gygli and Jack Dawson. Then there will be other celebrities. Dummy Taylor, former New York Giant twirler, Dan Butler, formerly a catcher in the International League; John Miller, leading slugger in the Canadian circuit last season, and Charles Ebbets, conceded to be the best shortstop in the League last year.

The entire list of players who will be seen in action at Perry Field before the close of the week is as follows:

Catchers — Frank Butler, Frank Bruckard; John Beck, Titusville.

Pitchers—Tony Dorbeck, Toledo; Walter Brandt, Dunnville, Canada, and S. Sutton, Toronto; all left handers; Carl Stowa, Bemus Point, New York; Edwin Blair, Cleveland; B. W. Nagel, Hamilton; Terry Orborn, Bluefield, W. Va.; Dummy Taylor, Olathe, Kan.

First base—Frank Gygli, Cranville, O.; Owen Harris, Baltimore.

Second base—Chandler G. H. Smith

Third base—Leo. Wiltse, Rochester; Paul Wharton, Cleveland.

Shortstop—Charles Behan, Bradford.

Outfield — Jack Dawson, Clarksburg, W. Va.; Joseph Dunn, Haribore, Mass.; John Bender, Toledo; O. Kelly, Harris, Frederick, Md.

London Advertiser—The expenses of the London team will run well into $4,000 a year more than last year, but there isn't a chance that it will not pay good returns. These boys are going to put over a twenty-round battle before the season is over. The fighting spirit is in 'em. Reisling looks like the livest wire in the league, not barring Shaughnessy, but barring some of Shaughnessy's ways. It's dangerous to make predictions, but that's how it sizes up without getting enthusiastic, either.

LONDON, Ont., April 15.—Louie Bierbauer, London's first baseman, says:

"Bill Baker, if ever given the right kind of a chance, will go to the major leagues. There has never been a catcher who had the brains that could steady him when he begins to go wild. He was never allowed to finish his games, being pulled out of the box after he had walked two men. Another thing, he isn't allowed to let loose; nearly always holding back. When he is allowed a real wind-up, take it from me," said Louie, "the ball looks just like the size of a marble. What 'Wild' Bill Baker needs is a catcher with brains to keep him steady. If the new Indian catcher for St. Thomas can do this, it will be but a short time until you find him playing in one of the big leagues.

The pitcher for the Town team was a long, slim, eel of a nigger, who surely had some speed. Along about the second inning the other team's catcher came to bat. He was a short, fat, heavy nigger, one of those square headed niggers, and his head was shiny like a billiard ball.

As he came to bat he said to the pitcher: 'Say, you long, slim coon, put that ball up here an' I'll knock it all the way to Rome.' The Rome he referred to was a town several miles away.

Well, the tall nigger who was pitching, wound up without saying a word, and the first ball he pitched hit that fat nigger batsman right on that shiny head of his. The ball shot straight up into the air; oh, I guess it must have gone eight feet high. And you could hear the crack it made all over the ball lot.

The big, fat nigger rubbed his head, picked up his little hat, set it back in its place, reached for his bat and, turning to the slim pitcher, said:

"Say, yuh nigger, yuh ahl wants to be kalful how yuh ahl t'rows dat ball; fust thing yuh ahl knows yuh'll hu't somebody.'

Hamilton Spectator: Ransone, a catcher; Barrows, an outfielder, and Dutch Eunesek, an infielder, reported to Manager Yates at the cricket field this morning. All three players came direct from the Baltimore International League team, with whom they have been for the past six weeks. They are in the best of condition, and found the climate somewhat colder than they have been getting for the past few weeks. The three players are part of the lot promised the local club by Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, who instructed the Baltimore manager to send them here.

Work on the improvements to Britannia Park were commenced this morning. The house that was built in a day is being torn down by a local contractor, who has purchased it, while a meeting of the directors of the ball club is being held this afternoon to award the contracts for the carpenter work on the new stands. Contractor Geodale commenced moving operations on the old stand this morning, and matters should be in good shape in another week or so.

Manager Yates announced at noon that the expected to land Lidgate, a catcher, from the Baltimore International League club, and that this player was expected in this week.

Rain Played Havoc With Big Leagues Yesterday—White Sox Made It Two Straight From Reds

ONE GAME IN NATIONAL

CHICAGO, April 15.— Timely hitting by Chicago, coupled with the sensational fielding of Weaver, enabled the locals to make it two straight from Cleveland to-day by 2 to 1. The game was a pitcher's battle between Cicotte and Steen.

In the eighth inning Weaver tripled and Coach Gleason stepped into the infield and held the runner on third Weaver was declared out by Umpire Sheridan. This is in accordance with the new amendment to the rules.

In the seventh inning Pitcher Steen of the Cleveland club was hit on the knuckle of his pitching hand by Cicotte and was compelled to retire. It was said after the game that it would be some time before he would be able to play again. Steen said he thought his knuckle was broken.

Batteries—Steen, Gregg and O'Neil for Cleveland; Cicotte and Shalk for Chicago.

Turned the Tables.

ST. LOUIS, April 15.—The Pittsburg Nationals, by timely hitting and through errors of the St. Louis club, turned the tables on the local team to-day and won 5 to 1. Errors and bases on balls helped the visitors, the home club making five errors behind Salle, who passed six.

Batteries — Cooper and Gibson for Pittsburg; Sallee, Hopper and Wingo for St. Louis.

Boston Won.

BOSTON, April 15.— Everyone but Griffiths was glad when this afternoon's game between the Senators and the Sox was concluded. The old fox was the only warm being on the frigid field of battle, but all his work failed to infuse hitting ability into his team, consequently Boston won by 2 to 1.

Batteries—Fosters and Thomas for Boston; Ayres, Shaw and Henry for Washington.

Ritchie And Murphy Are In Good Trim

Both Are Ready for the Lightweight Battle To-morrow Night

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 16.—Unless there is an eleventh-hour postponement, the twenty-round battle between Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie and Harlem Tommy Murphy will be pulled off here to-morrow night. For months the match between these two has been hanging fire. Several times the date for the fight has been fixed, only to be set back for some cause or another when the two fighters were almost ready to enter the ring.

Murphy is impatient for the fight to begin. Since the days of Joe Gans, the Harlem boy has been engaged in the pursuit of the lightweight title-holders. His ring record is one of the longest and most creditable of any of the present day fighters. But despite his record and his best endeavours he has never before been given an opportunity to battle for the championship. Ever since he signed up for the present match with Ritchie he has been training faithfully for the contest, and he appears to be in the best possible condition.

Reports from the Ritchie camp say the champion is also as fit as a fiddle and confident of retaining the crown. If he is successful in his bout with Murphy to-morrow night Ritchie says he will make things hum among the lightweights who think they are champions. Freddie Welsh will probably be the first fighter he will take on.

The sale of seats for the Ritchie-Murphy fight indicates that one of the largest crowds for many months will see the battle.

DOING AND OVERDOING

The distinction between doing and overdoing, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association in the course of an article on athletic sports considered in their relation to health, needs to be learned and appreciated more than any other single factor in the rational pursuit of bodily exercise for health and enjoyment rather than for personal superiority and group supremacy.

"It is strange," says the writer, "that the problems of athletics rarely receive the attention of those who are most concerned with health, the supposed purpose of bodily exercise. The management of athletics is rarely found in the hands of a physician, by whose scientific guidance the various sports would be freed from the dangers attending some of the present athletic practices. Athletics have for the most part to-day become the province of the people at large. It is the trainer rather than the physician, the hero-worshipper rather than the hygienist, who directs and inspires physical exercise which ought to be undertaken primarily in the interests of a sound body and a sound mind.

"Games have developed into contests in which victory is sought at any human price. The 'manager' is the foremost adviser, and the physician is called on as a last resource to mend the damage that may have been done in an ill-advised struggle for athletic supremacy. Until there is widespread education as to the proper purpose of bodily exercise and the dangers that beset the indiscriminate and uncontrolled pursuit of athletics by every one whom the inclination stirs, it is seemingly a hopeless task to preach the gospel of reform.

"Meanyhile the physician must develop sound judgment and sane advice. Only the beginnings have been made in this field of duty. If football and rowing and bicycling have their dangers, what are they? These questions demand answers. Among the internal organs the heart and kidneys have hitherto received most consideration in connection with the physiology of exercise. There is an idea abroad that each form of athletics has its own peculiar type of defects. Just as one hears of the 'tobacco heart,' there are the alleged 'bicycle heart,' 'football kidney,' etc. This is not true. The results of athletic exercise may vary in degree but not in kind.

"Athletic exercises may be divided into feats of strength and feats of endurance. These do not differ essentially in their own effect on the body. There are no important differences between the different types of athletic sports in respect to their physiologic effects on the body. The severe symptoms, however, make their appearance more prominently in sports like football, wrestling, bicycle contests, &c., which may call for extreme exertion. To what degree the distinctly harmful results of improper athletics may arise depends on a variety of circumstances. Age is a factor of significance.

"During the period of boyhood, when the organs have not reached their full developments, the person is unusually sensitive to muscular exercises. 'Constitution,' expressing in a somewhat vague way another factor which determines the fitness of a person for athletics. There must be adequate development, suitable nutrition, and a competent nervous system, the latter element often being undervalued. Obviously, appropriate training furnishes another safeguard against the dangers of athletic overdoing. Much of what is called 'training' in this country is, however, a combination of unscientific and sometimer irrational dietetics. Last, but not least, the degree of exertion required is a feature of determining significance when the ill effects of athletic sports are to be avoided."

Stock Markets

A. E. Ames & Co., Brokers, report the following:

To-morrow may see some rallies in the stock market on account of the developments in the investment situation which seems to be growing more rapidly. Investigation leads to the belief that the general stock market is over-sold again. The hammering at the leaders fails to bring out much stock at the lower levels. Private borrowing has been resumed after a return of some volume of stocks by professionals, and others who are understood to have sold higher up. The buying of railroad stocks is much better than appears on the surface. The absorption has been largely on a scale down. The weakness of Union Pacific, Great Northern and Reading is more artificial than seems on the surface.

The buying of copper is good. Many operators think it will be a market of specialty recovery for a time and will act accordingly.

13 industrials declined 1-2 a point.

20 active railroads declined 1-3 of a point.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

STREET WATERING AREA WILL BE EXTENDED THIS SUMMER

Representatives of the Various Wards Succeed in Securing Additions When Mayor Buller Made a Claim for the Western Section of the City—A New District Means Purchase of an Extra Sprinkler.

OIL TOO COSTLY JUST NOW

There were several items in the discussion of the Board of Works last night regarding the extension of the street watering area that may claim the interest of the average ratepayer in the outskirts of the city where the streets offer virgin soil to the watering carts.

The cost of street watering is paid from the general taxes. The man on Romaine Street West may not have the pleasure of seeing the sprinkler roll past his door, but he has the satisfaction of knowing that he is helping to pay for the watering of Homewood Avenue, or McDonnel Street, or any of the others. And that is some satisfaction for which he can thank the thoughtful legislators, whose Mecca is Queen's Park, Toronto. This has been referred to many times, but one last repetition will send the shaft home to th man who 'is trying to pay for his little home," and who is also forced to pay to keep the dust from—well, just from streets other than the one he selected for the aforementioned humble domicile.

When Ald. Johnston thinks of this law, and he thinks of it mighty often, he wants to "geyser," boil over, and talk of "sapheads," freak legislation, injustice, and all that is included under this general heading.

But there it is: instead of a law which would provide for the expense of street watering in residential districts coming from the pockets of those who are directly benefited. Even if it has the Government stamp on it, Ald. Johnston is none the less dissatisfied. There are others around the Council Board who object to this condition, but if talking counts, they are not as strong on principle as is the North Ward representative.

The Second Item.

A second item to notice is the smooth working of the ward system Last night a number of streets were proposed for the water service this year, and immediately the other wards were heard from. Each got a stretch of street or two added to the list Mr. Parsons had prepared, and if the appropriations will permit, and the tenders for the work are not too high, everyone should be satisfied.

Comparison of Two Years.

The City Engineer presented a statement showing that last year the following territory was watered:

North Division—4¼ miles.
East Division—3 miles.
South Division—5 miles.
Centre Division—3½ miles.

For this year Mr. Parsons had added a new division, principally in the western section of the city, with the following route lengths:

North Division—3¼ miles.
North-west Division—3¼ miles.
West Division—3¼ miles.
South Division—3¼ miles.
Centre Division—3½ miles.
East Division—3 miles.

A Few Extras.

Mayor Buller stated that the residents of King Street west of Park Street had asked for the water this year. He included St. Joseph Street, Boswell Avenue, Maitland Avenue, Walton Street, Pearl Avenue, Margaret Avenue, and Frederick Avenue. These streets are west of Park Street, are well built up, and possibly all the residents are humble citizens trying to pay for their little homes.

Ald. Duffus supported the Mayor in behalf of these streets.

And Some More.

Then came Ald. McIntyre with James Street from Mark Street to the railway, Mark from James to Maria and Maria from Mark to Roger.

Ald. Saunders saw which way the wind was blowing, and came through with Aylmer from Lake to Romaine, Romaine from Park to Lock and Wescott from Park to George.

Mr. Parsons: You have very sandy streets down there. The water will simply soak through and do but little good.

Ald. Saunders replied to the effect that every little bit helped, and the residents were eager to see what a watering cart looked like.

And Still Some More.

Ald. Duncan suggested Park Street from McDonnel to Smith Street. As a South Ward representative, he was far from his native heath, but as he was chairman the privilege of cleaning up in the south fell to his running mate.

In the meantime Ald. Johnston had been mentally travelling over the North Ward roads, and called for Aylmer Street from McDonnel to Smith Streets.

New Sprinkler.

Mr. Parsons reported that two of the carts are approaching their dotage, and either of them may expire at any moment. Some if their staves show signs of decay. In any case, an extra sprinkler is required to meet the new district, and on motion of Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. duffus, its purchase was left with Ald. Duncan and the Engineer.

Sunday Watering.

Ald. Duffus said he felt that the main streets should be watered on Sunday morning. Ald. Duncan voiced the same sentiment. Mayor Buller seconded the Duffus motion, and the Board carried it.

Oil Costs Money.

Mr. Parsons' report regarding the cost of oil for street purposes showed that the lowest price was seven cents a gallon, which would cost $450 per mile of street per annum. That settled Mr. Oil for 1914 at any rate.

THE STREET PAVING CONTRACT.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Forming one of the deputation to his Worship the Mayor, this morning regarding the rumour that no other than Italian labour would be employed in carrying out this contract, the Mayor kindly went to interview the foreman on behalf of the deputation and afterwards give us to understand the men he was now employing were men who he employed permanently, but on Monday next he would give every man who asked for work a start. On behalf of the deputation we are grateful to his Worship and hope every man who is out of work will present himself on Monday morning next.

Thanking you in anticipation, I remain,

Yours,
C. Perkins Lloyd.

COX PROPERTY TO BE DIVIDED INTO 46 LOTS

Board of Works Approved Plan Submitted by Mr. W. G. Morrow

Mr. G. W. Morrow, accompanied by Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, C.E., met the Board of Works last night, presenting a plan for the sub-division of the Geo. A. Cox property, which is bounded by Homewood Avenue, Walton Street, Weller Street, and Belmont Avenue, which will be cut into forty-six building lots. The plan calls for the extension of Hunter Street west through the centre of this block, but after crossing Belmont Avenue the new section of Hunter Street will have to be carried five feet to the north. In other words there will be a "jog" of five feet. The forty-six lots do not include a block of the land comprising six lots on Weller Street extending east from the Walton Street corner, which are marked sold on the plan.

The lots facing Homewood Avenue have a frontage of 49 feet and depth of 89 feet and those fronting Weller Street are 100 feet deep, with the same frontage of 49 feet.

The sub division of the property means that the imposing old homestead on this block of land will have to be torn down and removed. Mr. Morrow stated that it was the intention to proceed with this work at once, and upon the assurance being given that the necessary by-law adopting the Board's recommendation would pass the Council, said that the removal of the house would be undertaken immediately.

Mayor Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that the plan be accepted and a by-law be prepared adopting it.

John Dough On The New By-law

Says the Public Will Have to Pay For the Innovations

Peterborough, April 14, 1914.
To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I see by Tuesday night's paper where the Medical Health Officer and the Sanitary Inspector have made a lot of laws for the bakers. The one in particular that I refer to is the bread wrapping by-law. Now, of course, the bakers agree with the Board of Health that the wrapping of bread would be a most beneficial sanitary measure. The question is it fair, not only to us, but to the consumers, that such a reform should be compulsory on us. There are two sides to this question. It sounds very nice to airily say, Bakers your bread must be wrapped, but when the price has to be paid perhaps the public will be sorry the Board ever passed such a resolution. The people of Peterborough are getting their bread for the same now as they were ten years ago, and everything has gone up in the baking trade as well as every other business. Now another thing, this bread will have to be wrapped between baking time and the time it goes to the rig, which would be between twelve and six o'clock in the morning. As our law forbids the working of girls and boys during these hours, the work would have to be done by men at ten to twelve dollars a week, which no baker can pay at the present price. Take Toronto, where they turn bread out by the thousand of loaves to hundreds here, they have got twelve cents for a year, while the public of Peterborough have been enjoying it for ten. The other by-laws are all right, but the bakers keep their premises about as clean now as all the by-laws printed would make them. As about the bakers wearing smocks, why not ask them to wear overcoats? I would just like to ese the Board of Health in a shop with it about ninety-five degrees with their smocks on. A nice clean pair of overalls and a thin shirt with no sleeves is just as sanitary as all the smocks you could wear. Another thing is the bakers' waggons. The waggons in Peterborough are just as clean and sanitary as in Toronto, or Montreal, or any city in Canada. I do not think bakers have given much trouble to Mr. Spence since he come on the job. Anything he wanted done by them was always attended to at once. Now just feel around in a few places and find out how this by-law worked out, and then, if you think it's the best, make her law, and don't go after one or two fellows and leave the rest off. Make them all live up to it, but don't forget you are sure the public will have to pay for it.

Yours truly,
John Dough.

No More Tacks On City's Posts

Tacks used to impress upon the public the advent of Alice Lloyd, the Light Eternal and similar attractions, ripped holes in two Aldermanic coats, not to mention tearing a perfectly good coat worn by the Mayor. Nothing remained but to remedy the nuisance by forbidding further tacking of circus and theatrical cards. Mr. W. H. Munroe wrote the Board of Works that the Peterborough Light and Power Company poles had been stencilled forbidding the practice and the police had been notified. The company did not hold themselves responsible. Mayor Buller said he would take the matter up with the police.

Not All This Year.

It does not necessarily follow that all the above walks will be laid this year. In fact some discussion arose regarding the request for sidewalks on Homewood avenue, Gilmour street and Walkerfield avenue. These street sections are on the property known as Victoria Heights located west of the Monaghan Road.

Alderman Johnston pointed out that there were no residences there, and other parts of the city needing streets should receive first attention.

Mayor Buller and Alderman Anderson were in favour of laying the walks. They need not be built this summer, but they could be passed upon and when required they would be laid.

Alderman McIntyre — Suppose I bought a lot out there on the understanding that the sidewalk was to be put in immediately, and then found it would not be, that wouldn't be fair to me. And that is why they want the walks out there to help sell the property.

One of the members remarked that it would help sell the lots and lead to the erection of residences.

The Chairman Decided.

Alderman Duffus spoke in favour of allowing these streets to remain on the list.

Alderman Duffus moved, seconded by Mayor Buller, that walks be laid on the streets above mentioned.

Alderman Johnston moved in amendment, seconded by Alderman Saunders, that they be left out.

Alderman McIntyre supported the amendment, and Alderman Anderson voted for the motion.

The decision remained with Alderman Duncan who said: "They remain on the list."

Alderman Saunders stated the walk on George street from Lake to Perry, and stated that it was badly needed.

Engineer Parsons was instructed to look after a crossing on Water street north, in front of J. McAuliffe

Birthday Of Famous Coxey

Special Wire to The Examiner:

MASSILON, O., April 16.—"General" Jacob S. Coxey, who twenty years ago attracted the attention of the entire country by leading an "army" of unemployed on Washington, celebrated his sixtieth birthday anniversary at his home here to-day.

The "General" is busy with preparations for his second march on the national capital. He declares that the country is now in a more deplorable plight than it was in 1894, and that a demonstration of one million unemployed men in an invasion of the national capital is necessary to arouse Congress to a sense of its duty, or in other words, to enact such laws as the "General" believes will relieve the industrial depression and benefit the condition of the working classes.

Mr. Coxey hoped to get his "army" under way to-day, but the difficulty of finding [illegible] and several other obstacles necessitate a postponement [illegible] that many "recruits" are reporting daily and they he expects to start for Washington with a force of many thousands before the middle of May.

New Entrance At The Fair Grounds

It is probable that the Board of Directors of the Peterborough Fair will install new gates at the George Street entrance to the Fair grounds in the near future. The Peterborough Radial Railway Co. have promised their co-operation in the work by installing a Y at the new entrance, so that the passengers may be landed right at the gates. An improved service will also likely be a feature. A separate entrance for both vehicles and pedestrians will also be provided, with turnstiles for the foot traffic. This will greatly aid the management with their arrangement at the gates, and will also ensure a better and quicker service.

HELPFUL ADDRESSES ON HEALTH MATTERS

duced. They are, as far as construction and comfort are concerned, better than many homes in Peterborough. We inspect not only every dairy man, but every farm from which milk is sold, and inspect the conditions this way. A surprise visit is paid to the farm, whether in the early morning or in the afternoon, and we give marks, and grade the conditions which we find. The first thing we notice, is the stable, whether or not it is apparently healthy, then the cleanliness of the cow, whether or not the flanks of the animal are free from manure. We enquire as to the nature of the food, and then the construction of the building, to see if there is sufficient drainage, ventilation and sunlight, and a continuous supply of fresh air.

Utensils Inspected.

If there is a defect found, we tell the farmer, or milkman, as the case may be, that the conditions must be improved. A trip is then made to the house, where the utensils are inspected. We see the water with which these are washed, and also see that the milk house is clean and well lighted. We do not allow milkers to use wet hands for the work. Their hands must be clean and dry. We inspected every place last year from which milk was produced for sale to the public and we are doing the same again this year, and we are gratified at the results we have found so far.

Milk is Cheap Food.

You people of Peterborough, buying milk at 7 and 8 cents a quart, are getting the cheapest food commodity there is. There was a time when you did not know what you were getting, but that time is now passed. We insist that milk must contain 3 per cent. cream, and it is a very poor cow that does not give milk with such a percentage of cream. We are determined to have pure milk, which is our best food.

Dump it in Sewer.

We can stop a milkman on the street, make a test, and if we find that there is a great amount of dirt in it we have the absolute right to take it and dump it down the nearest sewer.

Public Can Help.

The public, however, can assist in the pure milk campaign. When you get your bottle of milk in the morning, take it and place the milk in another receptacle, and immediately wash the bottle out with cold water, that is all that is needed to ensure a clean bottle being returned to the milkman. Do not use them for coal oil two or three days, or use them to place a bouquet in, but observe the rules of pure milk supply. The farmers and milkmen are doing their part well.

Several more interesting pictures were then shown.

Acrobatic Fly.

The last picture was an illustration of how disease was carried by flys, and was an ingenious piece of work by the operator, Mr. Jones. A fly was glued to a piece of wood, feeting the air. Two tiny pieces of bread, rounded and connected with a light straw from a broom, representing a dumb bell, were placed in the insect's feet, and the result on the film was a series of movements and funny exercises with dumb bells and other objects, on the sheet.

The evening's entertainment was very interesting and instructive.

A lecture, to which children are especially invited, will be held this afternoon, and another, for adults, to-night. The admission is free, and allows of the opportunity to gain an extensive knowledge of the disease which is being so strongly opposed at the present time, namely, the Great White Plague.

An Authoritative Display of Millinery That Will Meet The Requirements of Good Taste

In Our SPACIOUS & WELL LIGHTED SALON WE ARE MAKING A SPECIAL DISPLAY of a charming assortment of newest designs exploiting all the later New York and Parisian ideas. Here you will find a host of delightful models, the Tiny Sailors, Cap-Like Turbans and High-backed Watteau designs, the later of course are the season's pet vogue, for they lend themselves so gracefully to the artistic posies of field flowers, quaint little nosegays and old time garlands that form the trimming.

A distinctive feature of this display is the decided stove polish finish on straw and ribbon that characterizes some of the models. This Stove Polish Ribbon is New York's Latest Fad and has every promise of being just as popular here.

A Very Charming Watteau Hat

It made of Blue Hemp, it has a narrow close fitting brim, and an elongated back brim. Wide blue velvet ribbon is strapped across the front brim to the under brim. The hat and dropped bandeau are trimmed with small blue and orange flowers.

The Poiret

This is a very Chic Parisian Creation. The shape has a crown of Liseret Braid and Brim of Lace. Black Satin Ribbon drapes the left side bandeau and is brought through the front slash of the brim across the right side and is tied with a bow with ends in the back. Posies of flowers trim either side.

Late Arrivals in Novelty Coats of Newest Style

You cannot help but admire these ultra smart coats when you see them. They depict La Mode's very newest creations in materials and styles.

Only newly arrived from New York there is something decidedly different about them that will appeal to those who have the desire for something that is really distinctive.

For instance there is one charming model the material of which is a matalasse, in a very striking shade of American Beauty, made in the cutaway style with new drop sleeves. The collar and revers are formed of silk Faille in self colour; and corded ornaments complete the trimming.

A decidedly stunnning coat is developed in silk moire, in a very rich shade of mahogany and is one of New York's latest models. Of course it has the ripple effect at the bottom which is caught in with a silk cord of self material. The sleeves are kimono style, nicely finished with dainty cluny lace. A novel touch is seen with the new yoke effect across the back. Lined throughout with a rich Dresden silk.

To be thoroughly appreciated though, these coats should be seen, and we invite you to see them with several other delectable models which we have just received from the great fashion centres.

SHERBROOKE ST. PEOPLE DON'T WANT A NEW STREET

"They can't see past their nose," said Ald Duncan last night, when Mr. Harry Baker reported that eight residents on the south side of Sherbrooke Street, just east of Monaghan road, had refused to give 33 feet off the foot of their lots for a new street. This matter has been explained several times already.

Mr. Baker proposed to cut up the big vacant field on the north side of Patterson Street, extending almost half the way to Park Street from Monaghan road to the east end of the lot where a short street would extend north from Patterson Street. He would give 33 feet off the north end of the property, and with the 33 feet off the south end of the lots which front Sherbrooke Street, the required street width would be secured. Mr. Baker would then have the houses he proposes to build facing Patterson and the new street. The Sherbrooke Street people would secure a frontage on the new street for the reason that their lots are exceptionally deep.

"I asked one man what he would take for 33 feet off the end of his lot and he told me he wanted $500 for it."

Ald. Duncan—Some one should tell Assessor Henry about that man."

Ald. Duffus suggested that the 33 feet be expropriated.

Ald. Duncan—That would give them the money for their land and they would then have the frontage. We might reserve a foot that would shut them out.

The members of the Board could not understand what these eight Sherbrooke people were thinking of. Mr. Baker said the opening of the street would add $400 to the value of the lots. All the other residents recognized the desirability of the opening but the eight.

A Ten Foot Lane.

Mr. Baker submitted an alternative plan calling for a different sub-division of the property. Three or four new streets will run north and south, and to avoid dead ends Mr. Baker was asked to provide a ten foot lane along the north side of the whole property.

The Board authorized Mr. Baker to proceed with his present plans for the stub streets, and, as an alderman stated, if the Sherbrooke people change their minds when it is too late they have no one to blame but themselves.

The proposed street to which eight of them refused to give 33 feet of the south end of their gardens would have given the new frontage, a new lot, and each owner could have built a house fronting the new street.

SEVEN YEAR'S PASTORATE

Congregation of Knox Church Meet to Celebrate Completion of Seven Years of Service of Their Pastor

Knox Church people turned out in large numbers last evening to celebrate in a quiet way the completion of seven years of service on the part of their minister, Rev. Mr. Keith. It turned out to be a much greater success than was anticipated. Sheriff Hall was present on invitation, and represented St. Paul's and Rev. Mr. Pogue. He recalled the early days of the work on Aylmer and Dalhousie Streets and its final settlement in its present sight. He also made known his fears at the time the new church was talked of, thinking then that the new project was too extensive and too rapid. He was glad now to see how mistaken he was and to note the great growth of Knox Church in which he was deeply interested. Rev. Mr. Rollins was present and expressed the warm friendly greetings of St. Andrew's. He rejoiced with Knox Church in its rapid development to its present strength and expressed the hope that the next seven years would see similar strengthening of every phase of the congregation's work.

Reference was then made to the early services of the late Mrs. Jas. A Hall, Miss C. Dickson, Mr. J. W Bennett and others who had done so much to lay the foundations of the congregation. Mr. W. W. Johnston was superintendent of the Sabbath School for nearly 20 years, before the church was organized.

Messages were also delivered by Mr J. T. Morrison, the oldest member of the session; Mr. Williamson, on behalf of the young people; Mr. Carpenter, on behalf of the new-comers; Mr. G. Kenyon, on behalf of the choir. Short addresses were also given by Mr. W. G. Bartley, Mr. H. Shurter, Mr. J. Smyth, Mr. R. G. Clifford, Mr. J. H. Taylor, Mr. A. McKenzie, and Mr. H. McCannan, who was one of the first scholars in the Sabbath School. Rev. Mr. Keith occupied the chair, and stated it was one of the most enjoyable services in which he had ever taken part in. Knox Church has certainly made rapid progress, and with the completion of a pipe organ a few weeks hence will have one of the best equipped churches in the province. The congregation has also come into a large place in the City's life, and stands for all the highest spiritual life for which a church should stand.

WILL BUILD AN APARTMENT HOUSE

Mr. C. H. Huffman Returns from Syracuse Where Merchants Held a Most Successful Display Week

Mr. Chas. H. Huffman, who with Mrs. Huffman returned recently from a visit across the border, stated to-day that a display week arranged by the merchants of Syracuse, greatly impressed him. The streets were gaily decorated, the curb poles being wound with pink and white coloured material, which lent a bright, spring appearance to the business thoroughfares. Every store put forth its best efforts to prepare handsome windows, every line of trade being represented. The whole City was interested in the doings of the merchants, a great deal of trade was centred in Syracuse and particularly did the occasion provide a great opportunity for displaying the spring lines. One of the big stores had an auditorium under its roof and on its stage, models tangoed and maxixed, etc., presenting the latest styles in evening wear. Mr. Huffman stated that Syracuse made the week a big success. Although only returned a short time, he has already begun building work on King and Aylmer Streets, and in the fall intends to erect a three or four storied apartment house.

OKE'S FRUIT STORE CHANGED HANDS

Mr. N. Douras, of the Boston Cafe Becomes the New Proprietor

The well established fruit, fish and vegetable business so long and favourably known as "Oke's" 376 George Street, has been purchased by Mr. N Douras of the Boston Cafe. The first public announcement under the new management appears in another column of to-day's Examiner.

Mr. Walter S. Oke, the former proprietor, has by his practical knowledge of the business and faithful attention to its details, built up a fruiterer's trade in Peterborough that has attracted a large clientelle of customers. He will continue to carry on the wholesale part of the business, for which he has acquired a good connection, both as an energetic importer of foreign and domestic fruits, as well as a sterling business man.

Mr. Douras is a gentleman who has both the means and the capacity to continue the business in a thoroughly up-to-date manner. He will continue to carry the same varied lines of good things to eat, and will see to it that nothing poor is allowed to come in and nothing poor is allowed to go out of his store.

Fruits, fish, game and fresh vegetables may be had at all times of the year, as they are ordered direct from their native habitation by this up-to-date store. The orange groves, onion beds and potato fields of Bermuda, the rich fruit areas of California and the depth of the blue waters of the Atlantic, as well as our own forests and fresh-water lakes, all cater to the patrons of this delicatessen.

Alertness and attention to every detail have made this store popular in every department, and patrons are always assured that what the store advertises is what buyers will receive.

Miss Smith, the efficient head book keeper, and the principal salesmen of Mr. Oke's old staff are retained.

British Mails.

Mail for transmission to Europe, is despatched from this city every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, and matter is received until midnight. Four mails a day are closed out at the Post Office, for transhipment to Great Britain. d-tf.

DEMONSTRATION OF CHI-NAMEL INTERESTING

Visit the Peterborough Hardware Store During the Balance of the Week and Realize for Yourself its Great Value

O-CEDAR POLISH MOPS

Commencing to-day and for the balance of the week a demonstration is being held at the Peterborough Hardware store, that should interest every householder in Peterborough. In the springtime the house wife's fancy turns to thoughts of house-cleaning, varnishing and, generally renovating the premises, but before commencing the annual clean-up, a visit to the Peterborough Hardware Store is advised, where many new ideas in the line of floor and woodwork graining are being exploited. A large number of people visited the store to-day and went away convinced of the worth and durability of Chi-namel for graining and varnishing purposes. Chi-namel is being demonstrated by Mr. Bishop, representing the Ohio Varnish Company of Cleveland.

Chi-namel is a Chinese oil varnish, and is water-proof, hammer-proof and heel-proof. It is shown in a variety of wood growths, the effects of which may all be imitated with the Chi-namel graining materials. During the demonstration days, with the purchase of a ten cent varnish brush, and the coupon appearing in the advertisement in another part of the paper, a twenty cent can of Chi-namel will be given free. Peterborough people should avail themselves of the instruction and generous offer at this store during the next few days.

In another part of the store Mr Hahn is showing the O'Cedar Mop and the O'Cedar Mop Polish. The O'Cedar Mops rob housekeeping of its hardest work. It is no longer necessary to get down on one's knees to clean dust and polish hardwood floors or to crawl under the bed to remove the dust under it. All this is done away with by the use of the O'Cedar Polish Mop. It is something that should be in every household as it is a great saver of time and energy.

IDENTIFICATION IS CONFIRMED

Brother-in-Law of Victim of Tuesday's Accident in City

Mr. Stubbs, of Toronto, was in the City last evening and positively identified the body in Belleghem's Undertaking Rooms, as that of his brother-in-law, Mr. Henry Lennox, of Bowmanville. This removes all doubt as to the identity of the young man who lost his life on Tuesday night on the Canadian Pacific Railway bridge. Although the body was horribly mangled by the train which crushed the young man to death, the upper portion of it was not badly cut, and Mr. Stubbs did not hesitate to say that he was certain the body was that of his brother-in-law.

It is likely that the remains of the late Henry Lennox will be taken to Toronto, where interment will be made in the St. James' Cemetery on Saturday.

OBITUARY

MRS. ANDREW MOORE.

Mrs. Jemima Moore, widow of the late Andrew Moore, died at 6:30 this morning at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. James Jackson, 232 Perry street. Mrs. Moore has been an invalid for the last two years, and her death was not unexpected. She was born in County Armagh, Ireland, in 1828, and was therefore in her 86th year at the time of her death. She came to Canada 65 years ago, first living in Cannington, afterward in Cobourg, where she was married. She came to reside in Peterborough fifty years ago, living on Smith street till about eight years ago, since which time she has been living with her son-in-law, Mr. James Jackson. Mrs. Moore was a Presbyterian in religion, a member of St. Paul's Church till Knox Church was built. She leaves behind her four sons and two daughters, John, William and George, of Vancouver, and James E. Moore, of New York city. The deceased was unmarried, and is survived by one brother, George, of Hastings.

The funeral will take place from Lot 12, Concession 2, to St. Joseph's Church and Cemetery to-morrow morning, at 10 o'clock.

BIG U.S. CARS WOULD TEAR UP THE ONTARIO ROADS

Hence Municipal Committee of Legislature Refused to Sanction Auto Licenses With States--No Increase in Speed

The proposed amendments to the Motor Vehicles Act were explained yesterday to the Municipal Committee of the Legislature by Geo. H. Gooderham, M.P.P. The principal change is the increase of the general speed limit from 20 miles to 25.

The first clause, however, was to exempt managers and sales agents from the necessity of securing a license. This however, failed to pass.

The discussion of lighting came up. Mr. Gooderham suggesting that the tail-light should be on the extreme left. This it was thought might cause trouble to manufacturers inasmuch as the rules of the road differ in other provinces. Some pass to the left. Some of the committee thought that the left side light in front must be kept lit despite Mr. T. E. Phelan's plea that it might go out. The chairman soon confessed himself dazzled by all those red and white lights and that detail was referred to a sub committee, consisting of Mr. Gooderham and Dr. Forbes Godfrey.

Interchange Unpopular.

Section four sought an amendment to the act by inserting after the word "Canada," the words, "or of some State of the United States of America," and by inserting after the word "province" the words "or state."

"We should have an interchange of licenses," stated Mr. Gooderham.

"Its a good reciprocity arrangement," opined Dr. Godfrey.

"It's the identical proposition that met with sudden death at the hands of this committee," declared Hon. W. J. Hanna. "It means ripping everything from stem to stern, and we get nothing for it. All the roads would be in the middle of the field."

"The idea is most unpopular down in our part of the country," stated Dr. Anderson, Essex county.

Hon. W. J. Hanna stated that the whole question of interchange of automobile licenses between the States and the Province of Ontario was considered by the Highways Commission. He thought the committee should not do anything at present.

When put to the vote the clause was lost by some 15 votes to 5.

Speed Goes Up.

"I am not particularly anxious to increase the speed limit myself," said Mr. Gooderham. "I don't think increasing it from 20 to 25 miles would make people travel any faster."

The section further provides that any city, town or village may reduce the legal rate within its boundaries to "not less than 15 miles." Mr. Gooderham mentioned the city of St. Catharines, which has a sign up; "Speed limit, 8 miles."

"You'd think you were in a park, but you find you are not," said he.

"Couldn't go five miles," laughed another member.

Mr. Gooderham asked that all places which had the lower limit must put up signs to that effect on every road.

J. C. Elliott pleaded for the 20-mile limit. "We have to protect the reckless motorists from themselves."

Mr. Phelan argued that nobody went into the country who didn't exceed the speed limit and that all law officials recognise this and allow some latitude.

Dr. Jessop made the observation that there are very few roads in the province where you can go more than 20 miles an hour. "If you did you'd be in the ditch," said he.

The temper of the committee was plainly opposed to changing the speed limit and the whole clause was killed.

It was attempted to protect owners for liability for things done by the car in the owner's absence. Mr. Elliott said that licenses should not be granted to drivers known to be reckless. "It is not when a man is learning to drive that he does the damage," he declared.

"I ran into a lamp-post the first time I drove one," corrected Mr. Jessop.

Even when a car is stolen many members think the owner should be responsible for any damage done by it. Mr. Elliott, thinking of the joy-riding chauffeur, said it might be all right to absolve the owner, "providing it was bona fide steal." The clause stood over.

Keep Out Child Drivers.

Mr. Gooderham next urged that it be made a major offence for a person under 18 to drive a car. The present penalty is so small it fails to deter youthful drivers. "If they could be fined $50 or given six months it might stop them," he figured. This clause also stood over.

The only suggestion adopted by the committee was that motor trucks, etc., may place their numbers and names where they will not be hidden when loaded.

ONTARIO RETAIL GROCERS SUCCESS TRADE BOARD

Mr. E. F. Mason Elected to the Executive Committee

It was pointed out by Mr. J. Rogers, Assistant Provincial Chemist, when addressing the Ontario Retail Grocers' Concention yesterday that adulteration did not always mean by any means that the food adulterated was poisened or made unfit for consumption, as is the popular idea. Some foods could be adulterated and retain their food value. However, according to the pure food act, when there is any adulteration, such goods must be sold as exactly what they represent they are, so that the public shall know beyond a doubt what it is eating.

Mr. H. C. Beckett of Hamilton advocated the appointment by the Dominion Government of a Trade Commission, which should possess similar powers to those of the Dominion Railway Board. Amalgamation with the Retail Merchants of Canada was again discussed. Mr. W. C. Miller of Toronto, the Secretary, saying he was not in favour of affiliation, because they would lose their funds. Hamilton local associations were also mentioned as being luke-warm on the subject of amalgamation. It was moved and seconded that the Executive of the O. R. G. A. in power take up the matter of amalgamation with the R. M. A.

The officers were elected for the coming year as follows. President, J. W. Millen, Brantford; First Vice-President, J. A. McIntosh, Hamilton; Second Vice-President, A. Palmer, London; Third Vice-President, E. Barnsdale, Stratford; Secretary, W. C. Miller, Toronto, (re-elected); Treasurer, Thos. Shaw, London (re-elected); Executive Comittee, E. F. Mason, Peterborough; C. McCausland, Paris; E. Hasell, Hamilton; F. Harp, Brantford; A. Phillips, Ottawa; J. D. Wisdom, Barrie; W. J. McCully, Stratford; G. Drake, London, and D. Maclean, Toronto.

Shortage Of $400,000

MADOC, April 15.—It is currently reported that the two auditors who have been investigating the affairs of the Dale private bank, which closed its doors two weeks ago, have about completed their labours, and have discovered a shortage of upwards of $400,000. This will be galling news to the twelve hundred or more depositors of the bank, who have been anxiously awaiting the result of the enquiry.

Farmers of the surrounding district were among the bank's chief patrons, but it also held the funds of the village and township, 18 cheese factories, 7 churches, all local branches of fraternal organizations and the Madoc Electric Light System.

It is rumoured that the funds of the bank were used in handling various real estate propositions, chiefly in the West, and that many of these deals were failures. Stock speculation is also said to have played a part in bringing misfortune on the institution.

The books indicate that nearly $100,000 was invested in Western lands, including lots at Port Mann, which, it is said, are of little value as yet.

It has been intimated that action may be taken against the management of the bank should the state of affairs prove as disastrous to the depositors as is now reported.

CHIEF THOMPSON ON AUTO RULES

The following is a part of the Ontario legislation regarding motor vehicles, which Chief Thompson says, is not regarded as it should be:

"The marker on the front shall be as far forward and as high raised from the ground as shall be necessary to render it distinctly visible, and the marker on the back shall be so placed that the lower edge thereunder, shall not be lower than the motor vehicle."

The Act further provides that "every motor vehicle shall carry a lamp so placed as to illuminate conspicuously, at all times between dusk and dawn, the number on the back of the vehicle. The numbers shall be kept free from dust and obstruction, and the marker shall be so affixed that the numbers at all times may be plainly visible. The penalties not hereinbefore provided being upon summary conviction, a liability to a fine, not exceeding $20 and costs.

This act is being almost totally disregarded, and with many new cars that will be upon the roads, a word of warning is timely.

Several cases have been reported, where the number plate has been hung on to mud guards, or other similar places.

Motor car owners are doubtless aware of the existence of this by-law, provided that they read their licenses. More care should be taken to observe the rules set out in legislature, in the future, or it may be possible that prosecutions will follow, in some instances.

British Immigrants Preponderate.

WINNIPEG, April 17. — The following are the immigration figures of Winnipeg for the week ending April 14: British 1,615, Italians 45, Russians 25, Germans 95, Norwegians 70, Galacians 375, Swiss 65, Roumanians 12. These figures constitute a record for one week's arrivals from all quarters this season.

The preponderance of the British over all other nationalities, which has been pronounced since the opening of immigration, is still very marked. The returns compare favorably with the same week last year.

C. N. R. AID DISCUSSED IN HOUSE YESTERDAY

A. B. McCoig Raises Issue in House and Expresses Strong Disapproval of Any Further Grants.

MR. BURNHAM SPEAKS

OTTAWA, April 17. — Five more speeches were contributed to the budget debate in the Commons yesterday afternoon and evening. Most interest centred in the first references on the floor of the House to the C. N. R. aid proposals. They were made by Mr. McCoig (Lib., W. Kent) and Mr. Burnham (Con., W. Peterboro).

J. A. M. Armstrong (Con., North York), resuming the budget debate, said that the Liberals were apparently appealing for support to the farmers on the prairie. These farmers were represented as being in a most distressed condition, yet the census returns showed that they were better off than any other class in the Dominion. If this western country is such a plague-ridden place, if men, women and children are starving because they cannot have free wheat and free agricultural implements, why do they not come back to Ontario and return to the United States? Mr. Armstrong went on to criticise the Senate for vetoing the navy bill, but was called to order by the Speaker.

A. B. McCoig (Lib., W. Kent), who followed, declared that a reduction of duty to be a benefit to the farmers should have been on plows, spreaders, harrows and corn implements. It was upon these implements that the farmer spent most.

Mr. McCoig said that he believed in free wheat. Canada produced 181,717,000 bushels of wheat over and above what she consumed. If the farmers were not allowed to dispose of their wheat to the United States, the result would be that the farmers of Western Canada would take up mixed farming, which would prove a serious blow to the farmers of Ontario.

He criticised the Minister of Militia, for having rented 65,000 acres of crown lands in the west at two cents an acre to a concern for raising remounts for the Canadian militia. This, said Mr. McCoig, was dealing a hard blow to horse-breeders.

In conclusion, he denounced the proposed aid to the C. N. R. He declared that the Opposition would oppose the giving of any more money out of the Treasury to Mackenzie and Mann. Personally, he would vote against aid of any kind being granted them.

At the evening sitting Dr. Edwards discussed the subject of agricultural implements. He said that Mr. McCoig was the agent of the McCormack Harvester Co. of Chicago, and was therefore interested in having American implements brought into Canada free of duty.

In conclusion, the member for Frontenac expressed the hope that Canada would soon do her share in Imperial naval defence.

"I wish no harm to any member of the Senate," he protested, "but I would like to see the Conservatives in control of the body at an early date."

Dr. Edwards was followed by Edward Devlin (Lib., Wright) who said that the Conservative party had abandoned the national policy of Sir John Macdonald and substituted therefore a policy of high protection. Sir John, he said, in 1878 had advocated not raising the tariff but readjusting it with a view to bringing about reciprocity between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Devlin advocated increased Government aid to the farmers. He said this should take the form of more experimental farms, free agricultural colleges, free books on agriculture and a fund out of which money would be loaned to farmers at two per cent., to enable them to build houses, barns, etc. He maintained that it would also be feasible for the Government to establish a fund for loans at two per cent. to laborers, so as to enable them to build their own homes, and thus relieve them of rent, which was an important factor in the present high cost of living.

Mr. Burnham (Con., W. Peterboro) following Mr. Devlin, took occasion to compliment Finance Minister White on the firm stand which he has taken regarding Government aid to the Canadian Northern. The Government of Canada had already given too much to the C. N. R. and similar enterprises.

"Anything that is done for the C. N. R.," declared Mr. Burnham, "will be done by way of salvage."

Mr. Burnham said the people who were crying for cheaper food did not seem to realize that great quantities of staple products were being brought into Canada in spite of the duty. Only a short time ago New Zealand sent a shipment of butter to Montreal, which immediately brought the price of butter down two cents per pound. He believed it was better to build up Canada than to build up the Antipodes.

CAMPAIGN IS URGED

Publicity Needed to Develop the North, Says Mr. Clarke

SHOULD APPOINT A STAFF

TORONTO, April 17.—Yesterday's principal discussion in the Legislature was devoted to the affairs of New Ontario and Sam Clarke (Lib., Northumberland) offered a resolution favoring the appointment of a commissioner of lands and a staff to make a more aggressive campaign for settlers.

Hon. Mr. Hearst, in reply, declared his belief that the present policy of the Government was keeping pace with the development of the country and reviewed the work of his Department.

In opening his address Mr. Clarke said he was not doing it in a spirit of censure but of suggestion for the agricultural prospects of the north. The Minister of Lands and Mines had too much work on his hands properly to look after northern farm lands. The Government should appoint a commissioner and a group of assistants—the best men that could be engaged — to take prospective settlers out and show them the land and help them to decide what locations they would take. The grant of two million acres to the Canadian Northern, who he said had not brought in one single settler up to this time had kept these lands "tied up." He enlarged upon the favorable opportunities which New Ontario offered for settlement and declared that 5,000 people in the city of Toronto would locate there if the proper inducements were offered. In addition there were hundreds of hardy, honest men in the rural portions of Old Ontario who would be far better off on the new land than on the sandhill farms which they now occupied. He believed it was a mistake to encourage immigration of mechanics and laborers to Ontario. What New Ontario needed was settlers, who would do for the new territory what the forefathers of the present generation had done for the older parts of the province. "When we have the settlers," he said, "on the land, like the father to the child, look after him until he is strong enough to look after himself.

Mr. Hearst, in replying, said he appreciated the manner in which the resolution was put and the kindly manner in which the subject had been treated. On a great many points he was in thorough accord with the West Northumberland member, but he took exception to some of his statements on the score of his limited knowledge of north country conditions. He maintained that practically every one of the suggestions mentioned by Mr. Clarke had been put into effect by the Government and were being carried out. Referring to a suggestion as to colonization along the Ontario route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, he pointed out that the line was still in the hands of the contractors. He had taken the matter up with officials of the road on his trip through the country last summer, and they promised to co-operate with the provincial authorities to bring in settlers as soon as the line came under their control. He declared that Mr. Clarke was wrong in his statement that vast quantities of land were tied up against settlement. He compared the present Government expenditures for bridges and public works with that of the former administration, and found the former 408 per cent. greater in the same period of time, while the road expenditure showed a like growth of 293 per cent.

In moving an amendment to Mr. Clarke's motion Albert Grigg (Con., Algoma) eulogized the work of the Government in the north but suggested that it might prove a good policy to check the large departmental stores which were being established in all parts and controlling the retail trade. The influence was felt in the north.

A further amendment was moved by Mr. Elliott (W. Middlesex), approving, in turn, of the $5,000,000 grant, and more if necessary, but expressing regret that the funds from this loan had been applied for other purposes than those set out in the act.

Mr. Grigg's amendment was adopted on division.

To Offset Roosevelt's Visit.

PARIS, April 17.—The contest for influence in Argentina between the United States and Germany is the subject of a despatch yesterday from Buenos Ayres to The Temps. The correspondent attributes the visit of Prince Henry of Prussia to South America to Germany's desire to counteract the effect of Col. Roosevelt's presence there. He avers that the raising of the United States legation to Argentina to the rank of an embassy was another episode in American-German rivalry.

Conan Doyle Believes Man Is Innocent

Creator of Sherlock Holmes Prepares to Solve a Peculiar Case

Conan Doyle has again undertaken to employ his power of deduction, made so famous in the stories of Sherlock Holmes, for an individual whom he believes to have been unjustly convicted. The subject of his solicitation is Oscar Slater, who was condemned to death at Edinburgh for the murder of Miss Marion Gilchrist in her flat at Glasgow, Dec. 21, 1908, and who is now in Peterhead Prison, the capital sentence having been commuted to prison for life.

Early in January, 1909, the New York police received a cable dispatch from Scotland Yard reading as follows:

"Arrest Otto Sando, second cabin, Lusitania, wanted in connection with murder of Marion Gilchrist at Glasgow. He has a twisted nose. Search him and the woman who is his travelling companion for pawn-tickets."

Oscar Slater, for that was the real name of the man mentioned in the dispatch, was arrested and extradited. The principal pieces of evidence against him were that he had in his possession a pawn ticket calling for a diamond brooch—a diamond brooch had been stolen from the dead woman; that he had been identified by three persons as the man who escaped from the flat after the murder, and that his departure for America under an assumed name had been in the nature of a flight. On this evidence he was convicted. In speaking of the case the creator of Sherlock Holmes said this week:

A SCANDAL.

"The conviction of Slater was nothing short of a scandal, and I am delighted to learn that the case is being reinvestigated. Never for one moment from the time I first read the case have I believed that Slater was guilty, and it is terrible to think that an innocent man should be lying in prison, so I shall always respect McKinnon Wood (Secretary for Scotland), for having the strength of mind and sense of justice to bring up the case again.

"The public conscience will not be at its ease until the case has been thoroughly investigated by an impartial commission, such as that which established the innocence of Edalji.

"To my mind the most important point for consideration is the manner in which Slater came to be suspected at all. The only article missing from the flat was a crescent diamond brooch, and shortly after the murder the police heard that Slater had endeavoured to dispose of the pawn ticket of a brooch that appeared from the description given to be the one which, presumably, had been stolen by the murderer. Consequently they came to the conclusion that he was the man, and at that time that was the only thing which caused them to suspect him.

"He was then on his way to America. He had weeks before announced his intention of going away. It was no sudden impulse or secret flight, and certain letters are stated to have been received by him which would explain why he rather hurried his departure.

"The police had him arrested on landing at New York, and they found on him a pawn ticket for a diamond brooch. This enabled them to recover the brooch—but it was not the one missing from the flat after all.

RIGHT MAN BY MISTAKE?

"Therefore, assuming for the moment that Slater was guilty, you are faced with the extraordinary, incredible coincidence that the police got hold of the right man by a mistake.

"It is utterly inconceivable that they should secure the right man by an accident like that, but it is certainly only human nature that, having once arrested a man, they should seize on other points—afterthought and quite secondary matters—and build their case on these points, abandoning entirely the original cause for suspicion.

"Another point of great importance is that a misstatement was made by the Lord Advocate in his speech for the Crown, a misstatement which does not appear to have been corrected at the moment by either the judge or the defending counsel.

"He spoke without notes — a most dangerous thing to do—and in the course of his very eloquent speech made an allegation that Slater's name had appeared in the Glasgow papers and that subsequent to that he fled from the country.

NO FOUNDATION.

"The point is of vital importance, and an examination of the dates will show that there was absolutely no foundation for the statemnt. His name did not appear in the papers until nearly a week later, and by that time he was far out in the Atlantic."

It will be remembered that the murder was discovered by Helen Lambie (Miss Gilchrist's maid) and Arthur Adams, the occupier of the flat below, who had been attracted by unusual noises. The two entered the flat together, and as they did so a man emerged and made his escape. A girl named Barrowman also saw the man presumed to be the murderer running away from the flat.

EXTRA—A Fresh Shipment of Huyler's Chocolates just arrived.

In Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's opinion, the evidence of identification given by those three witnesses only amounted to "half-hearted recognition," and he is at a loss to understand how any one could accept it as being enough to establish the guilt of the prisoner, especially in view of the fact that in the Beck case there were ten witnesses who had seen the real criminal under normal circumstances, and yet were all prepared to swear to the wrong man.

Other notes to which Sir Arthur attaches importance are that nothing really incriminating was found in Slater's trunk, and there were no bloodstains on any of his belongings; the evidence called by the defence to show that Slater could not have been at the flat at the time of the murder; and the failure of the prosecution to produce the least connecting link between Slater and the murdered woman.

Five out of fifteen jurymen voted for "Not proven," and another for "Not guilty"—a division of opinion which, under English law, would have resulted in a new trial.

EN ROUTE TO BROWNTOWN

There is one car on the Radial Railway line which appears to cause more annoyance and misapprehension to passengers than any other, viz., the C. C. E. car en route to Browntown. What between individual mix-ups, riding back and forth unnecessarily, from Park street to George street, and extra care fares, very few seem to be able to understand the latest official regulations, except the conductors and inspector. Couldn't the rules be somewhat simplified so that even the most dense could "catch on?"

"THE MAYOR'S WIFE"

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

The answer was a little sharp.

"It is Charity who is afraid of her," said she. She had evidently forgotten her own extravagant words to me on this subject. "Charity is timid; she thinks because this woman once hung over our brother, night and day, that she knew about this money and had persuaded herself that she has some right to it. Charity is sometimes mistaken, but she has some reason, if it is inadequate, for this notion of hers. That woman, since her dismissal after my brother's death, has never really quit this neighbourhood. Sh worked next door in any capacity she could, whenever any of the tenants would take her; and when they would not, sewed or served in the houses near by till finally she set up a shop directly opposite its very door. But she'll never get these bonds; we shall pay her what is her due, but she'll never get any more."

"That would make her out a thief," I cried, "or—" but I thought better of uttering what was in my mind. Instead I asked how they first came to hear of her.

Miss Charity showed some flustration at this and cast her sister an appealing look; but Miss Thankful, eying her with some severity, answered me with becoming candour:

"She was a lodger in this house. We kept a few lodgers in those days—be still, Charity! Just thank God those days are over."

"A lodger?" I repeated. "Did she ever tell you where she came from?"

"Yes, she mentioned the place,—it was some town farther west. That was when we were in such trouble about our brother and how we should care for him. She could nurse him, she said, and indeed seemed very eager to do so, and we were glad to let her,—very glad, till my brother showed such fear of her and of what she might do if she once got hold of his wallet."

"You possibly did her injustice," I said. "A sick man's fancies are not always to be relied on. What did your nephew think of her? Did he share your distrust of her?"

"John? Oh, yes, I believe so. Why do we always come back to the subject of John? I want to forget him; I mean to forget him; I mean that Charity shall forget him."

"Let us begin then from this moment," I smiled; then quickly: "You knew that Bess was a married woman?"

"No, we knew nothing about her."

"Not even the name she went by?"

"Oh, that was Brown."

"Brown," I muttered, turning for a second time to go. "You must think me inquisitive, but if I had not been," I added with a merry laugh, "I should never have found your bonds for you." Pressing both hands in mine I ran hastily out of the room.

At once I crossed the street to Bess' little shop.

CHAPTER XXVII.
RESTITUTION.

"Bess, why are you so white? What has happened to you in the last twenty-four hours? Have you heard from him?"

"No, no; I'm all right." But her eyes, hunted and wandering, belied her words.

I drew her hands down into mine across the table lying between us.

"I want to help you," I whispered; "I think I can. Something has happened which gives me great hope; only do me a favour first; show me, as you promised, the papers which I dug out for you."

A smile, more bitter than any tear, made her face look very hard for an instant, then she quietly led the way into the small room at the back. When we were quite alone, she faced me again and putting her hand to her breast took out the much creased, much crumpled bit of paper which was her only link to youth, to her life, and to her love.

"This is all that will interest you," said she, her eyes brimming in spite of herself. "It is my marriage certificate. The only thing that proves me an honest woman and the equal of—" she paused, biting back her words and saying instead—"of any one I see. My husband was a gentleman."

It was with trembling hands I unfolded the worn sheet. Somehow the tragedy of the lives my own had touched so nearly for the last few days had become an essential part of me.

"John Silverthorn Brainard," I read, the name identical with the one I had just seen as the early signature of the man who claimed a husband's rights over Mrs. Packard. The date—wish what anxiety I looked at it!—preceded by two years that of the time he united himself to Olympia Brewster. No proof of the utter falsity of his dishonourable claim could be more complete. As I folded up the paper and handed it back, Bess noted the change which had come to me. Panting with excitement she cried:

"You look happy, happy! You know something you have not told me. What? what? I'm suffocating, mad to know; speak—speak—"

"Your husband is a man not unknown to any of us. You have seen him constantly. He is—"

"Yes, yes; did he tell you himself? Has he done me so much justice? Oh, say that his heart has softened at last; that he is ready to recognise me; that I have not got to find those bonds—but you do not know about the bonds—nobody does. I shouldn' have spoken; he would be angry if he knew. Angry? and I have suffered so much from his anger! He is not a gentleman."

How differently she said this from the gentleman of a few minutes back!

"But he doesn't know that I am here," she burst out in another instant, as I hunted for some word to say. "He would kill me if he did; he once swore that he would kill me if I ever approached him or put in any claim to him till he was ready to own me for his wife and give me the place that is due me. Don't tell me that I have betrayed myself, I've been so careful; kept myself so entirely out of his eyes, even last night when I saw the doctor go in and felt that it was for him, and pictured him to myself as dying without a word from me or a look to help me bear the pain. He was ill, wasn't he?—but he got better. I saw him come out, very feeble and uncertain. Not like himself, not like the strong and too, too handsome man who has wrung my heart in his hand of steel,—wrung it and thrown it away."

Gobs shook her and she stopped from lack of power to utter either her terror or her grief. But she looked the questions she could no longer put, and compassionating her mysery I gently said:

"Your love has been fixed up on a very unstable heart; but you have rights which must yet ensure you his support. There is some one who will protect these rights and protect you in your efforts to substantiate them."

"His aunt," she put in, shaking her head. "She can do nothing, unless—" Her excitement became abnormal. "Have they found the money?" she shrieked; "have they—have they found the money?"

I could not deceive her; she had seen it in my eye.

"And they will—"

"Hardly," I whispered. "He has displeased them; they can not be generous to him now."

Her hopes sank as if the very basis of her life had been taken away.

"It was my only hope," she murmured. "With that money in my hand—some, any of it, I could have dared his frown and won in a little while his good will, but now— I can only anticipate rebuff. There is nothing for me to hope for now. I must continue to be Bess, the thread and needle woman."

"I did not say that the one to reinstate you was Miss Quinlan."

"Who then? who then?"

Mayor Packard."

And then I had to tell her.

We all know the results of the election by which Mayor Packard holds his seat, but few persons out side of those mentioned in this history know why the event of his homecoming from a trip he made to Minnesota brought a brighter and more lasting light into his wife's eyes than the news of his astonishing political triumph.

He had substantiated facts by which Mr. Steele's claims upon Mrs. Packard were annulled and Bess restored to her rights, if not to her false husband's heart and affections. There are times, though, when I do not even despair of the latter; constant illness is producing a perceptible change in the man, and it seems to me, from what Mrs. John Brainard told me one day after she had been able, through the kindness of the Misses Quinlan, to place the amount of one of the bonds in his hands, that his eyes were beginning to learn their true lesson and that he would yet find charm in his long neglected wife.

It was not to be wondered at, for with hope and the advantages of dress with which the Misses Quinlan now took pleasure in supplying her, she was gradually becoming an unusually fine woman.

I remained with Mrs. Packard till they left town for the capital; remained to enjoy to the full the joy of those reunited hearts, and to receive the substantial reward which they insisted on bestowing upon me. One of the tasks with which I whiled away the many hours in which I found myself alone was the understanding and proper mastery of the cipher which had played such a part in the evolution of the life drama enacted before my eyes.

It was very simple. With the following diagram as a key and a single hint as to its management, you will at once compehend its apparent intricacies:

AB	CD	EF	ST	UV
GH	IJ	KL	WX	YZ
MN	OP	QR

(The dot designated that the letter used was the second in the indicated division).

The hint to which I allude is this. With every other word the paper is turned in the hands toward the left. This alters the shape and direction of the angle or part of square symbolizing letters, and creates the confusion which interfered with my solution of its mysteries the night I subjected it, with such unsatisfactory results, to the tests which had elucidated the cryptogram in The Gold Bug.

FREE DRAINAGE SURVEYS

Farmers! Have you a field on your place that is too "wet, cold and sour?" Drainage will reclaim it and make it one of the best fields on the farm.

Drainage does four things. First, it removes the surplus water and makes it possible to cultivate and seed about three weeks earlier in the spring than on the same land when undrained. Secondly, it makes the land from 10 to 15 degrees warmer than if not drained, and this warmth germinates the seed properly and gives a good stand of grain. Thirdly, it lets plenty of air down to the roots of the plants, which is necessary for satisfactory growth. Fourthly, it makes the soil more porous, and this in turn causes the soil to store up more water for the use of the crops in time of drouth.

Frequently the increase of crop in one year pays for the drainage, and seldom or never does it take longer than three years, so that drainage pays from 33 per cent to 100 per cent per annum on the money invested.

Have you difficulties in drainage? The Department of Physics of the Ontario Agricultural College will assist Ontario farmers on application. They will make you a complete survey of the area to be drained, or run a single line of drain, and when done furnish you with a finished map showing location of drains, grades, sizes of tild, etc.—a detailed guide for the thorough drainage of the land in question. No charge is made for the services of these drainage advisers, nor for the maps, only the applicant pays the travelling expenses in connection with his survey, amounting usually to not more than a couple of dollars.

Drop a card to the Department of Physics, O.A.C., Guelph, for the regular application form.

One of the bosses at Baldwin's Locomotive Works had to lay off an argumentative Irishman named Pat, so he saved discussion by putting the discharge in writing. The next day Pat was missing, but a week later the boss was passing through the shop and saw him again at the lathe. Going up to the Irishman, he demanded fiercely:

"Didn't you get my letter?"

"Yis, sur, Oi did," said Pat.

"Did you read it?"

"Sure, sur, Oi read it inside and Oi read it outside," said Pat, "and on the inside vez said I was fired, and on the outside yez said 'Return to Baldwin's Locomotive Works in five days.'"

FROM JUNGLE TO ZOO

HOW WILD ANIMALS ARE CAPTURED FOR EXHIBITION.

The Collector of Specimens Only Aims to Bring Away the Cubs—The Hippopotamus and the Rhinoceros Are the Most Expensive to Capture—Giraffes Are Becoming Scarcer Each Year.

The killing of big game with an Express rifle at distances varying from fifty to two hundred yards is not, as many people are prone to suppose, the most dangerous pursuit in the world. There is another kind of hunting, not where one might encounter danger, but where danger is a necessary part of the business, and death and disaster things to be faced as "all in the day's work."

Capturing wild animals alive is unquestionably a more perilous occupation, and one which necessitates considerably more craft and skill than the pursuit of the same for the sake of their skin and ivory.

Packed with adventure, romance, and stirring incidents are the lives of the wild animal hunters, who go forth in search of fame or fortune, knowing not whether they will return to tell the tale of their travels and conquests. It is no uncommon experience for a European hunter and his huge cavalcade of native helpers to disappear into the wilds of Africa or Abyssinia, to reappear a twelvemonth or so later with animals sufficient to stock nearly half a dozen zoological gardens.

Even the late Mr. Hagenbeck, who was universally known as "The World's Greatest Zoological Purveyor," and who, probably, knew more about wild beasts and their capture than any other man, was frequently surprised at the remarkable success attending some of these hunting expeditions.

On one occasion he received a telegram informing him that one of his hunters had turned unwell in Suez, and asking the dealer to come and take charge of his caravan of beasts. "When I arrived at the hotel in Suez, where the hunter was staying, I saw a curious sight," said Mr. Hagenbeck. "Elephants, giraffes, antelopes, and buffaloes were in the court-yard tied to palm trees. Among them sixteen ostriches ran about, unfettered, while, in some sixty great packing cases, lions, leopard, panthers, striped hyenas, jackals, civet cats, rhinoceroses, and all sorts of birds moved restlessly to and fro."

A wonderful sight like this—hunted and harried from the depths of the forest primeval, and from the lairs where only courageous men might venture—touches the imagination as few things can.

In the case of big beasts it is, with hardly an exception, the young that are taken. This is only reasonable, as a wild adult beast is difficult to hold, let alone transport, many hundreds of miles, across barren country. Even in the case of lions and tigers, the modern hunter only aims to bring away the cubs.

Africa and Abyssinia are the great lion-hunting grounds to-day, and in either country the services of the natives are indispensable. With the ways of the "King of the Forest," none are so familiar. They search for their dens—guided by the spoor or trail of the mother-lioness — and should her ladyship not be at home, the task of carrying off the cubs is much simplified. If they are mere kittens, a few days' old, it is only a matter of taking them away. But cubs, four, six and eight weeks' old can offer a stout resistance with tooth and claw.

On the other hand, if the lioness is on the premises—well, things are not quite so simple. A lot depends upon the skill and experience of the native. Armed with a bundle of assegais or javelins, he cautiously approaches the neighborhood of the lair. The mother scents his approach and starts up with an awful growl. But she is too late. Before she can spring, even before she has caught full sight of the intruder, the assegais, whirled with unerring aim, have penetrated her body. She falls to the ground, gasping, dead. In the camp, the little lion whelps are nursed on tame goats' milk, and soon become quite fond of their foster-mother.

Tigers, also, are mostly recruited as cubs. Just once in a way full-grown tigers and lions are wanted. The craftiness of the natives robs the adventure of much of its danger, but it is always risky and exciting work at the best. They prepare large pitfalls for the reception of their victim, who finds himself ensnared in the strong net which closes about him as he sinks into the trap. A hypodermic syringe, charged with morphine, soon quietens his frantic efforts to burst his bonds. By the time the stupor wears off, he is safely "crib'd, cabin'd, and confin'd" in camp.

Leopards and hyenas are frequently caught fullgrown. They endure captivity a great deal better than other members of the cat family, and being less heavy and powerful, are more easily managed, even in their most ferocious moods. In order to capture them, huge traps are set. Sometimes these traps are made out of wood; sometimes they are cut out of solid rock. They act much on the same principle of the common mouse-trap—that is, they have a hanging door in front of the entrance, which is raised by a lever held down by a baited hook. The bait consists of meat.

Giraffes are exceedingly difficult to obtain. To begin with, they are rare, becoming more so almost every year; they are also exceedingly timid and swift-footed. It can scarcely be said that there is any fixed method of capturing giraffes, as almost every possible way has been attempted vainly again and again.

FRANCIS BACON'S HOME.

St. Albans is a Mecca for Lovers of Great Englishmen.

The town of St. Albans, which is the Mecca of the admirers of the great English statesman and scientist, gave him his peer's title. For this noted scientific spirit, this eminent lawyer, this scion of classical and scientific education and knowledge in Elizabeth's reign, was never really Lord "Bacon" at all, as he is so frequently miscalled to-day. He was "Lord Verulam," and it was from this old Roman name for his beloved St. Albans that he took his title, "Baron Verulam" and "Viscount St. Albans" were what he himself selected for his titles when the King (James I.) raised him to the peerage.

And from that time to this St. Albans, the charming ancient town which lies just within the borders of Hertfordshire, and is just far enough from London to be quite in the beautiful rich pasture lands of the country, has always been proud of her son and patron, Francis Bacon.

His name and fame pervade all St. Albans. You can hardly walk a hundred yards there even now without seeing or feeling it, although the great scientist and lawyer has been dead nearly three centuries. His family seat was at Gorhambury, which is only two miles distant from the centre of the city, and the way to which lies through some of the most delightful rich meadow land in England. The ruins of his house may yet be viewed when you reach Gorhambury, and all around is simply full of Bacon-lore, and Bacon-connections.

One of the most interesting of all the many attractive churches of the ancient city is St. Michael's, which lies at the foot of one of the quaintest old streets in England, and yet seems to be right in the centre of a real country village. For in this church stands the splendid tomb and effigy of Lord Bacon—if we may be forgiven for calling him by the familiar but wrong title—whilst beneath its chancel floor are buried the remains of one of the world's greatest and most learned sons. Hither, then, come pilgrims from all parts of the kingdom — nay, one may truthfully say from many lands afar also!—to pay homage at the shrine of him who gave literature and science so much that is remarkable, so great an endowments of genius as to make his name and fame immortal throughout the ages.

St. Michael's Church is itself a fitting spot to be the last resting-place of such a marvellous man. It dates back at least to 948, being one of the oldest churches existing in the land. It has yet intact the Saxon walls of nave and chancel, which were pierced later by the Normans to enlarge the church.

The immense thickness of these old walls still strikes the visitor with astonishment, though they have now become the pillars of the nave, so to speak. And, after the Normans had added the aisles, came along the Early English builders, who again pierced the Norman work, leaving their pointed arches to tell the story of the three successive improvements and building-styles of this ancient edifice.

In this church, too, are frescopaintings, with many curious pictures and prints which have come down to us from those far-off times. Here, too, is an old hour-glass in a fine Elizabethan pulpit; also excellent military brasses going back to 1380 and 1400.

It gives the admirer of Bacon a thrill to look at all these fine survivals of olden days in this prosaic age, and to remember that Francis Bacon himself must, as boy and man, many a time and oft have pored over them and noted their beauties and charms with loving eyes, though three hundred years have passed since those same eyes gazed on the venerable relics!

The monumental effigy which surmounts Bacon's tomb at the north side of the altar is really a fine piece of work, and is almost as perfect today as when first put up. The sculpture of the figure, the delicate tracery of face and clothes, are just as good as ever, and mark a high stage of artistic work in the way of carving.

World's Longest Poems.

A crony at the club the other night demanded to know which was the longest poem on record. Nobody knew. Well, isn't it "The Faerie Queene?" For, as a fragment, a quarter of the original plan, it is as long as Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" and Vergil's "Aeneid" put together, twice as long as Dante's "Divina Commedia" or Tasso's "Gerusalemme Liberato" and three times as long as Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Paradise Regained" in one. Had Spenser attained his object his twenty-fourth book, with "The Faerie Queene," he would have outdistanced all the others put together.—London Spectator.

What the Duke Meant.

His grace the Duke of Argyll was once addressing a select company in a London drawing room on the present state of things in South Africa. "I look forward to the time," he said, "when the Englishman will marry the Boer girl and have an English wife as well!" Respectable dowagers looked their surprise, and the men began to smile. Then the duke carefully explained that he meant, of course, that the Boer girl should become an Englishwoman to all intents and purposes.

Double Duty.

An English sportsman—they call a man sportsman in England when he has money and nothing to do—has hit upon a very clever idea. He owns an automobile and a yacht. When he wants to use his yacht he runs the automobile aboard and harnesses it to the propeller. Then he tips off the self starter, the auto gets busy, the propeller churns the water, and the plain yacht becomes a fast motorboat. When the sportsman gets where he wants to go he ties up the yacht, runs the auto ashore and gayly whizzes along the good roads. Of course, to be perfectly fair about it, the sportsman should take the yacht aboard the auto when he is on land, but up to the present time he has shown no willingness to display any such form of altruism. He's got a good idea, however. Pampered autos have too long been permitted to go aboard as stowaways. It's high time they were compelled to work their passage.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An "Absent Minded Beggar."

In "Bohemian Days in Fleet Street" is this anecdote of Phil May, the artist:

Phil was at one time ordered horse exercise. It was thought that this mode of progression would insure his safe and early return to the domestic hearth. But it did not always work.

One afternoon Phil was riding home from Fleet street to his house in Kensington, and, in passing through Leicester square, thought that he would drop in at the Cosy club. * * * He gave his horse in charge of an urchin to hold for him. It was then 4 in the afternoon. At 2 o'clock in the morning a police constable entered the club to inquire whether one of the members had left a horse in charge of a boy outside. The secretary remembered that May was the proud possessor of a steed. But May had left the club at midnight. He had forgotten all about his horse, and had driven home in a hansom.

She Remembered.

Aunt Jane is quite absent minded and when she started on a short journey, a few weeks ago, each member of the family labored to impress on her that she must not forget any of her parcels or belongings. When she reached her destination she wrote at once of her safe arrival and closed with the following postcript:

I remembered what you said about forgetting and tried to be as thoughtful as possible. I neglected, though, to have my trunk rechecked at the junction, and think I must have left my lunch at the window when I bought my ticket.

I must have forgotten my umbrella, too, when I changed cars, but I cannot imagine what could have become of my shawl. I suppose I neglected to put my comb and brush back in the bag after using them, but I feel confident that some one stole my jet brooch, as I do not see how I could possibly have mislaid it.

I got on quite nicely, though, and had a real pleasant journey.—Youth's Companion.

A Mean Man.

Medical Man—Jobson has done the meanest thing I ever heard of. He came to my house the other night, ate a big dinner, got indigestion and then went to another doctor to be cured.

The Dancing Disease.

The "dancing disease" was an epidemic nervous disorder, apparently allied to hysteria and chorea, occasionally prevalent in Germany and Italy during the middle ages. As it has been in every instance chiefly propagated by physical contagion, like chorea, there is every reason to conclude that it had a like origin. In 1734, during the celebration of the festival of St. John at Aix-la-Chapelle, the streets became crowded with men and women of all ranks and ages who commenced dancing in a wild and frantic manner, many losing entire control over themselves and continuing to dance until dropping down from fatigue. The mania spread to Cologne, Metz and Strasburg, and gave rise to much imposture, profligacy and disorder.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed efforts, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

How Diana Scored.

In "Milton and Homespun" is this amusing English fox hunting story:

"Hold hard, madam! For heaven's sake hold hard or that camel you are riding will be the death of some of my hounds!" cried the choleric master of one of the southeastern counties' packs of foxhounds to a lady who was riding rather too close to hounds.

Without deigning to turn her head she steered her mount a little to the left and clear of the hounds rode her own line like a centaur, led the van through a long and very fast run and was the first of the field to see the fox rolled over in the open.

Having recovered from his temporary fit of churlishness and delighted with the manner in which the lady had ridden, the master approached her, somewhat sheepishly it must be confessed, with the "brush" and an apology.

"Pray, don't apologize, sir," was the smiling reply. "You simply mistook my favorite hunter for a camel, and I your foxhounds for fox terriers. It seems we were both mistaken. Thanks awfully for the brush."

Limitations as to Time.

A well known preacher was making a pedestrian excursion in a wild rural district. Feeling rather hungry, he looked at his watch to see if it was nearly dinner time, but found the watch was stopped. Just then, happening to meet with a country boy, he asked, "What time is it, my lad?" The boy replied, "Just 12, sir." "Only 12?" said the minister. "I thought it was more." "It never is more round these parts," said the boy simply. "It begins at 1."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Gluck Devotees Organise.

A Gluck association for the propagation of the works of that master has just been formed in Dresden. The society calls itself "Gluck community," and intends, little by little, to bring out in print all the literary and musical works of the composer of "Orfeo" and to foster a wider love of and understanding for the great man's music.

POLICEMEN ON STRIKE.

Once a Quarter of a Million Citizens Offered Themselves as Constables.

Short of a wholesale mutiny in our standing army—a quite unthinkable thing—it is difficult to imagine any more serious situation than that which would be created by a general strike amongst policemen, says a London paper.

Yet, such a thing, or something very like it at all events, has happened in the past; may happen in the future.

The trade union, formed only so recently as last October amongst the Metropolitan Police, is gathering strength daily, and its leaders openly proclaim their intention of starting a strike as soon as they are strong enough.

London may well be uneasy at the prospect, for past experience has shown what a police strike may mean.

When, for example, some 200 constables refused to go on duty at Bow Street police station one night in July, 1890, the rougher elements of the population in the slum areas immediately adjoining got to know about it almost immediately, and rioting broke out within an hour. It was suppressed by the Foot Guards, who were hastily summoned, but not before considerable damage had been done.

In September, 1882, however, following similar strikes at Cork, Limerick, and elsewhere in Ireland, the Dublin police came out in a body early one morning, and the city, already seething with political excitement and unrest, was left absolutely unguarded. Instantly the shopkeepers everywhere put up their shutters, the jarveys stabled their horses, the trams ceased running.

Nor were the fears that these measures indicated groundless. In a little while the streets were filled with howling mobs, bent upon mischief. But the Government promptly took a hand in the game, and showed, too, that it meant business.

Battalion after battalion of infantry, each man carrying in his pouch forty rounds of ball ammunition, was [illegible] and later on, when dusk fell, violence was necessarily met by violence, the soldiers charging the rioters, with fixed bayonets. So was the city saved.

Next day thousands of angry citizens came forward to enroll themselves as special constables, and shortly afterwards the strike collapsed. The police authorities, however, took a stern view of what had happened, and of all the many hundreds who refused duty at the beginning, only a paltry 208 were reinstated.

A somewhat similar result attended a yet earlier strike of the Metropolitan Police in October, 1872. That is to say, numbers of the strikers were prosecuted under the Police Acts, and fined, while 109 constables were summarily dismissed, and sixty-five were reduced in rank.

It is difficult, indeed, to see how any police strike can end otherwise than in failure, no matter how great inconvenience, and even danger, it may inflict upon the community for the time being.

And for this very good reason; that experience has shown that private citizens are always ready to come forward and act as special constables on an emergency. It only remains, then, to swear them in, and serve out to them truncheons and armlets, and they are able to fulfil at once, and fairly efficiently, practically all the duties that fall to the lot of the ordinary uniformed policeman.

HAD INDIGESTION.

Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

When your food has not been properly digested, your body has not received the benefit it should. The exertions of the gastric juice have been confined entirely to removing the unmasticated, undigested portions of food, which they cannot properly digest as speedily as possible from the body, therefore only giving the blood a small percentage of nourishment with which to feed the tissues. No wonder then that Indigestion and Dyspepsia attack the stomach. No medicine can surpass Burdock Blood Bitters as a cure for this particular disease. It regulates the bowels, promotes perfect digestion, makes pure blood, tones the stomach, and thus restores perfect health to the debilitated system.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes:—"I was troubled with Indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several Doctor's medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

Byron's Proposal.

Lord Byron was led into an unhappy matrimonial alliance with Miss Milbanke, only daughter and heiress of Sir Ralph Milbanke, through being rejected by another young lady. He had proposed to the latter, and as he held her letter of refusal in his hand he said, to a friend, "It seems that it is to be Miss Milbanke after all." He sat down and wrote the fatal letter, handing it to his friend for perusal. "A very pretty letter," his friend remarked after reading it. "It is a pity that it should not go." "And it shall go!" exclaimed Byron, and thus opened one of the most tragic chapters of his checkered history.

Sayers' Famous Fight.

Jack Johnson's boxing with a broken left arm is a feat of endurance that may be compared to some extent with Tom Sayers' famous fight with Heenan in England in 1860, when his right arm was broken soon after the fight commenced. Both events ended with a draw. Not so, however, another memorable contest in pugilistic annals—the fight between Tom Cribb and Molineaux, the black, in 1811, in which the latter, who was beaten, fought nearly three rounds with the heavy handicap of a fractured jaw.—London Daily Chronicle.

Higher Criticism In School.

The teacher had told the class how the waters of the Red Sea were divided for the Israelites and what became of the Egyptians who pursued them, says The Manchester Guardian. A little boy with an inquiring mind put up his hand and said, "Please, teacher, if divers were to go down into the Red Sea would they find the Egyptians' chariots?" Another little boy instantly burst out laughing. The teacher asked him why, "Please, teacher," he explained, "'e thinks it's true!'

Something of a Curiosity.

"What made you send our friend, Mr. Bumshus, the Russian alphabet?"

"I thought it ought to interest him," replied Miss Cayenne. "It is the only thing I ever heard mentioned that he did not assume to thoroughly understand."—Washington Star.

Trapping a Coyote.

The coyote is one of the shyest and hardest of all fur bearing animals to trap. He delights in digging up traps springing them, eating the bait and otherwise disturbing the set without getting caught. His sense of smell is very acute. The best way to trap him is to build a bonfire over the set after the traps have been properly placed. Throw into the embers some bacon rinds, chicken bones or, better yet bones of sage hen or grouse. The coyote habitually searches about campfires for stray bits of meat and is therefore less wary. The fire obliterates the traces of the set, eliminates the tracks and smell of a human being, and the odor of the burned meat will attract him from a long distance. He is more likely to walk into the trap thus disguised with the remnants of a campfire than any other unless you have a carcass literally surrounded with traps with a severe winter on and no other carcasses within miles.—W. F. Wilcox in Farm and Fireside.

Meeting Mrs. Spider.

In "Insect Biographies With Pen and Camera" the author pictures the plight of the unlucky fly who has entered Mrs. Spider's parlor:

It is struggling to escape from the unexpected net which in some mysterious manner has suddenly enveloped it when a creature of terrible aspect hastily rushes out upon it. Eight dead-like eyes glare wildly upon the terrified fly. A large, hairy and bristly finger-like palpus on each side of this appalling face waves and flourishes with angry menace in the air, apparently quivering with malignant glee. Then one of those combed and clawed feet is stretched toward the hapless prisoner, and the threads that hold the fly are suddenly tightened up as the monster pulls them together. Then the spinnerets eject a shower of silken strands over the fly, and it is spun round and round on the threads that hold it until at last it is securely enveloped, still alive, in silken bonds.

A President in Shirt Sleeves.

The Swiss president's unassuming status has given rise to many stories. Edmund d'Auvergne, visiting the government buildings at Bern, "noticed the word 'Bundespresident' (president of the confederation) inscribed over an inconspicuous door, just as you might see the word 'Cashier' or 'District Registrar.' I called to mind how an important English railway contractor once knocked at this door and was answered by a man in shirt sleeves, whom he took to be a clerk. It was the president himself." In Sir Horace Rumbold's time (the sixties) the story was that a diplomatist, calling at the president's private abode, was admitted by a lady with tucked up sleeves and soap sudded arms—Mme. la Presidente straight from the washtub.—London Standard.

Pony Express Riders.

In the days of the pony express many wonderful, long rides were made by those engaged in carrying the mails through dangerous country. William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) made a round trip of 384 miles without stops, except to change horses and to partake of one meal. It is recorded that Robert H. Haslam (Pony Bob) rode 380 miles at one stretch. When the pony express ceased to exist Haslam became a Wells Fargo messenger, riding 100 miles every twenty-four hours, being ten hours on the road. Jack Keetley, a pony express rider, is credited with 340 miles in thirty-one hours, and Jim Moore, another rider, is said to have covered 280 miles in fourteen hours and forty-six minutes.—New York Sun.

"'Well, that's a shame. You tell me who the big boy was and I'll give him a talking to that he won't forget.'

"'It was th' Simpkins boy,' answered the abused youngster, with a show of interest. 'He's down there with all those other kids.'

"'Which one of that crowd is he?'

"'You kin tell easy enough. He's th' one with th' black eye an' th' bloody nose, an' he's cryin' too!'"—Chicago News.

"No. They're going to get a pack of bloodhounds on his trail tomorrow."

"Gracious! Won't there be danger that if the bloodhounds find him they'll eat him?"

"What if they do? His disappearance will no longer be a mystery."—Buffalo Express.

WANT MELLEN FOR CHIEF.

Railway Workers Have Offered Him Presidency of Federation.

BOSTON, April 17.—Charles S. Mellen, formerly president of the New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., may become the active head of a federated body, supreme among the various organizations of the United States, with 2,000,000 railroad employes affiliated.

It became known yesterday that Mr. Mellen had been approached on the subject, and that he was giving it favorable consideration. The new organization is to be known as the Federal Council of Railroad Brotherhoods, and will be formed at a meeting of delegates in this city on April 26, and the former director of the New Haven Railroad System will be nominated for the presidency. The idea of the council has been promoted by the Order of Railroad Station Agents, which met here in January and appointed a committee to invite the many independent societies of railroad men to send delegations to the forthcoming meeting. It is stated that favorable responses were received and 100 delegates have been elected.

PAINS THAT MAKE MISERY

A Talk With Our Lady Readers.

Have you ever noticed how miserable and unhappy the little pains and aches make one? A stinging cut, badly chapped hands, a nasty burn, a sore foot, a poisoned finger—any of them are just sufficient to take the edge off one's temper and give one a "grouch."

Zam-Buk is just the thing at such times. As soon as you put it on to a sore, a cut, a burn, or any skin injury, it stops the pain, and the smarting, and starts up healing. Don't make the mistake that because Zam-Buk is so widely used by medical men, by nurses, and for serious skin diseases and accidents, that it is only for serious cases. Keep it handy and use it immediately you get some trivial injury or have some little sore.

Mrs. Chas. H. Barrett, Harmony Road, Truro, N.S., says: "I had an ingrowing toe nail, which caused me acute agony. Sometimes the pain was so severe I could not sleep. It became so bad that I feared blood-poisoning had set in. I was advised to try Zam-Buk and bound up the sore toe with it. In a few days it was much easier, and I continued the treatment. The result is that to-day the toe is sound and I have no more trouble with it. We always keep Zam-Buk in our house, and I would strongly recommend it to every housewife."

Zam-Buk is just the thing, too, for the little ones. Pure in its composition, and herbal in nature, it is suitable for the most delicate skin. It also cures piles, eczema, varicose ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, blood poisoning, ring-worm, and all similar skin diseases. Sold everywhere at 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 16.—Immense sales of corn today broke the market. Other speculative articles all showed a setback—wheat ⅝c to ½c to 1c, oats ½c to ⅝c to ½c, and provisions 10 to 12½c to 42½c.

NEURALGIA

"NEARLY DROVE ME WILD, UNTIL I TOOK KEPHALDOL"

Mr. Thomas Cooper, Ludley, Sussex, England, was almost frantic with Neuralgia, when he first took a KEPHALDOL Tablet.

"I am nearly 74 years of age and have suffered with Neuralgia nearly all my life. A friend told me about KEPHALDOL and I had my people get me a 25c package. I took two tablets as soon as I got them and quickly received relief, it was joy."

So great became the fame of KEPHALDOL Tablets abroad that their reputation spread to this country. The demand for KEPHALDOL grew so rapidly that arrangements were made to establish a Canadian office and supply all the druggists. These wonderful tablets, the prescription of Vienna's famous nerve specialist, Herr Doctor Stohr, have brought welcome relief to hundreds suffering from Neuralgia and Headaches, the ravages of La Grippe, Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago, Pain in the Back, and in fact any pain.

If you cannot get the 50c. tubes at your druggist's, write Kephaldol Limited. 31 Latour Street, Montreal.

LINES GOT TANGLED.

Wireless Phone Ashore and Wireless Telegraph at Sea Mixed Up.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The ships of the Atlantic fleet on their way to Mexican waters were cut off from all official communication by wireless unintentionally yesterday by a passenger train speeding through the meadows of New Jersey. The official messages to the battleships which were interrupted were being sent from the wireless station at the navy yard in Brooklyn. The wireless waves of the Government's apparatus were confused and blurred by the waves sent out by the wireless telephone apparatus of the Lackawanna Railroad station at Hoboken, which communicated for the first time successfully to the Lackawanna Limited ten miles away. On further inquiry Supt. Phillips of the Lackawanna was informed by the Brooklyn Navy Yard that the wave length of the Government wireless apparatus installed on the battleships and at fixed stations was 600 metres. That is exactly the length of the waves sent out by the wireless telephone apparatus installed on the Lackawanna Limited.

The Lackawanna superintendent was requested to stop sending messages until the length of the wave used by the Lackawanna was changed, and this Supt. Phillips readily said he would do. Further tests of the wireless telephone on moving trains will be suspended until the apparatus can be overhauled for changing the wave length.

Eight Perish In Wreck.

NEW YORK, April 17.—The identity of the schooner which went ashore in a northeast gale near Long Branch, L.I., Wednesday night was established by life-savers at daybreak yesterday as the Charles E. Buckley, from Jacksonville, Fla., for New York. The schooner is a total loss, and Capt. Hardy, his wife and all members of the crew, except one seaman named Atchison, were lost while attempting to launch a lifeboat.

Besides Captain Hardy and his wife, it is believed that at least six members of the crew went down when the lifeboat failed to weather the waves.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid, which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds, and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure, and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

POPE BEFORE KING.

Arrangement of Toast List Caused Trouble at Winnipeg.

WINNIPEG, April 17. — On the toast list of the Western Canada Catholic banquet last night, the Pope was placed at the head, His Majesty the King was placed second. Because of this Sir D. C. Cameron, Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba; T. R. Deacon, mayor of Winnipeg, and other prominent men, refused to attend. Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, was also absent. Mr. Doherty's message of regret stated that under ordinary circumstances he would have been most happy to attend.

The affair created considerable discussion in religious, state and civic quarters yesterday, and the matter has not been improved by a mixup at the opening of the banquet. The Pope was duly placed first, and, replying, His Grace Archbishop Langevin, referring to the matter, said:

"We will render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." Following the toast to the Pope, the toastmaster rose and toasted "Canada," the third toast on the list, that of the King, being second. The banqueters rose, but the orchestra for some reason, struck up "God Save the King." There was some slight confusion and then the anthem was taken up generally.

TO TRAIN DEFENDERS.

New Zealand Will Drop Contributions To Imperial Government.

LONDON, April 17.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Col. Allan, New Zealand's Minister of Defence, in a speech yesterday, said that the Government conceived that its duty in the future was not to contribute five hundred thousand dollars a year to the Admiralty, but instead to utilize the money in training New Zealanders to serve both New Zealand and England. Was New Zealand, he asked, to rely for protection on a trade alliance with Japan? Was she to have no voice in the expenditure of her contribution and representation in questions of peace and war and also diplomatic relations. The thing was unthinkable to people grown to manhood.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MARTHENA'S DUTY

Marthena Judd locked the schoolhouse door with a little sigh of relief and walked slowly down the village street toward home.

There came a clatter of hoofs on the road, and Lionel Forbes rode gallantly around the bend and pulled his big black horse to a standstill beside Marthena.

"How do you do, Miss Judd?" he asked, smiling down at her from his brown eyes.

Marthena's eyes were dazzled by Lionel Forbes and his too evident beauty. The sudden interest of Sharon's richest young man in the humble school teacher was flattering. Marthena Judd was pretty in a pale, delicate way, but one always thought that she gave promise of greater beauty when she could have a rest from teaching the robust youngsters of the village school.

While Marthena smiled and blushed under the bold glance of Lionel Forbes, Miss Myra Finney, who kept the post office, peered from an unobstructed corner of the window and made comments to her sister Susan.

"If I had a child in Marthena Judd's school I would put my foot down about one thing!" said Myra after Lionel and Marthena had walked slowly on.

"What's that?" asked Susan lazily.

"I'd put a stop to her flirtation with Lionel Forbes. It sets a very bad example to the children. Why, Susan, she's all took up with him so's she's forgotten to come for her mail, and here's a letter from her brother Henry way out in Wyoming. He don't write very often; I wonder if there is anything the matter."

"Marthena writes to him every Sunday," remarked Susan. "Let me see—Henry lost his wife, didn't he?"

* * * * *

Marthena blushed and then paled when she read her brother's letter.

Dear Marthena—I am wondering if you can't take pity on me and come out here and keep house for me. You needn't do any real hard work; Lee Sing, the Chinaman, does that, but it does need a woman's hand out here, and I'm plain lonesome for you. It was different when Ida was alive, but you know how it is. I'll pay you what you get for teaching the Sharon kids, and you'll have a horse to ride and anything else in reason that you want. Do come. Send me a telegram and I'll meet you at Bitter Tree whenever you say. Your loving brother, HENRY.

Marthena's face paled as she read the letter. It was so plainly her duty to go to poor Henry, but her dawning love for Lionel Forbes held her back. If she went away now his too fickle heart would seek another. Yet, knowing this, she yearned after him. He had opened the rosy doors of romance to Marthena Judd. He would forget her if she went. And yet it was her duty to go to her brother.

She would let Aunt Hepsey decide. Aunt Hepsey was a large, capable woman who ruled her family of grown sons and daughters with an iron hand. She had spared a small gabled room for Marthena Judd, her orphaned niece, and Marthena's board money paid for music lessons for the three girls.

Aunt Hepsey read the letter and then settled her gold-framed spectacles on her nose.

"Marthena, it's your plain duty to go to Henry," she said. "He's doing splendidly out there on the ranch. He's getting rich, so Larry Barnes wrote to George. You know Larry went out there, and Henry gave him work on the ranch. Seems Larry's a foreman or something out there. I s'pose you're forgotten all about Larry Barnes now that Lionel Forbes is sweet on you! but, Marthena, you can't place any dependence on Lionel. He's a butterfly, always running after some pretty girl, and—now, don't get mad—you asked my advice and—"

Aunt Hepsey looked after Marthena's flying form with disapproval in her eyes.

"Don't it beat all," she asked of the empty air, "how folks will ask your advice and then fly all to pieces if it don't suit their ideas?"

It was a heavy hearted Marthena who packed her trunks and bade farewell to the little Maine village where she had lived all her days.

The train left Sharon and the old life far behind. While the ache of parting was still in Marthena's throat the novelty of travel interested and comforted her. Five days later Marthena entered upon the rolling prairie land that to her eastern eyes seemed like a dust coloured sea bounded by the purple hills rising and melting away against the horizon as they sped on.

At Bitter Tree her trunks were dumped out on the platform, and the train went on into the golden glory of the sunset, while Marthena stood there feeling strangely small and forlorn until Henry's big voice and Henry's strong arms greeted her.

She looked at him with wondering eyes. Henry Judd had gone forth from Sharon village a tall, lanky New Englander dressed in ill-fitting store clothes. The man before her was big and stout, and his cowboy hat and shirt and his corduroy trousers tucked into high heeled boots gave him the look of a stranger. But the old merry look was in his eyes as he put his little sister into the buckboard and took his seat beside her.

"Hold on to your hair, sis," he advised. "These bronchos are walking on their hind legs to-day."

Marthena Judd never forgot that wild ride across the prairie. The ponies actually pawed the air as they started forth, and then in a spirit of recklessness they galloped madly for miles and miles, while Marthena held her breath and Henry laughed as he put one arm around her and drove the ponies with the other hand.

"Home!" cried Henry as he turned in between two rail posts and with a last clatter of hoofs and scattering of sand and gravel the ponies stopped at the broad porch of a pleasant ranch house that overlooked the Bitter Tree valley with a glimpse of the shining river at the bottom and the everlasting hills beyond.

Henry made her go straight to bed and he carried her supper to her in the little room that he had furnished for her with all of a man's clumsy tenderness.

"Larry Barnes went to Chico with me, and we picked out the stuff. Larry said he remembered that blue was your favourite colour, so we got everything blue and white. Larry chose the pictures. He said the one of St. Cecelia there looked like you. Great fellow, Larry! Now, you close your eyes and go to sleep. Get up when you like and order what you want for breakfast from Lee Sing. Good night."

With Henry's kiss on her brow Marthena went to sleep with a little smile on her lips and awoke to the glory of a perfect morning.

After she had leisurely dressed she went down to the verandah, where Lee Sing, with many polite gestures invited her to breakfast. While she sat there she heard the mad clatter of hoofs and saw a horse galloping around the yard. From the distant corral came a shout as one, two, three, more horses leaped the gate and followed the first untamed animal. Three cowboys mounted on horses pursued the runaways, with lusty shouts and lariats held ready for action.

Marthena wondered vaguely if Larry Barnes was one of these cowboys who rode so fearlessly and so gracefully.

She went to the edge of the verandah and waved her table napkin at the vicious black horse that pawed the steps, and he sputtered away to fall a victim to the lariat of the most graceful rider of them all, a bareheaded giant with blue-black hair and a skin bronzed like an Indian's.

Then Marthena, when it was all over and the horses had been driven back into the corral, realized that she had displayed unwonted enthusiasm. She had not only waved her napkin frantically at the victorious riders, but she had cheered them on to greater efforts, so that she went back to her seat with scarlet cheeks and shamed eyes.

A step sounded behind her and she looked up to see the graceful, brown cheeked rider who had flashed white teeth at her as he captured the black horse.

There was a strange familiarity about him that puzzled her.

"Don't remember me, Marthena?" he asked, holding out a big hand.

"Oh, Larry—Larry Barnes!" cried Marthena. "What have you done to yourself? I didn't recognise you."

"I hope the change is for the better," said Larry gravely.

"It is. Oh, it is!" cried Marthena, with such evident admiration in her tone that both of them suddenly laughed outright in the pure joy of youth and perhaps in the discovery of something that both of them had lost.

"Henry's gone to Chico," said Larry, sitting down on the railing of the verandah, "and he has delegated me to give you your first riding lesson. Cherry is the prettiest little pony you ever saw, Marthena, and Henry and I picked out the saddle the other day, and—"

"Thank you for helping Henry choose the things for my room," said Marthena gratefully. And she wondered why Larry blushed so furiously and changed the subject. She felt very kindly toward him.

"Well, sis," said Henry that night at supper, "you look as rosy as can be. How do you like the sagebrush?"

"It's heavenly!" cried Marthena so heartily that Henry laughed aloud, and Larry, who had been invited to supper, blushed deeply.

"Then you don't want to go back to Sharon?" teased Henry.

"Never!" exclaimed Marthena. "I'll tell you when I do, Henry."

"I'll wager that will be never," said Henry, but he said it to himself so that no one could hear. He had read the signs of reawakened interest in the betraying eyes of his sister and Larry Barnes, and he was very glad. Larry was a capital fellow, and Aunt Hepsey's letter about Lionel Forbes had been disquieting.

Three months afterward Marthena and Larry came in from a long ride with the glory of perfect happiness shining in their faces. Henry, standing on the verandah smoking his pipe, smiled tenderly as they came up the steps.

"Blessings, my children!" he said heartily, for he had read that day in a paper from Sharon that Lionel Forbes had married a girl from the city, and he knew that Marthena would receive the news with indifference.

Marthena, standing in her little bedroom that night amid all the pretty blue and white furniture chosen by the two men who loved her devotedly, smiled through her tears as she knelt down to say her prayers.

"It's wonderful!" she murmured. "It's marvellous how the path of duty leads one to love and happiness!"

"Mrs. Shimmerpate wrote a great book called 'How to Become Beautiful.'"

"Did it have a big sale?"

"No; she made the mistake of publishing her own picture on the title page."

WOULD ABOLISH CORONERS.

American Medical Association Says Our System is Obsolete.

The American Medical Association, which numbers many thousands of members, has put itself on record, through its journal, as favouring the abolition of the ancient Coroner system.

"About a year ago," says the Editor, "The Journal of the American Medical Association commented on the inadequacy of the machinery in this country for proper conduct of the Coroner's office and stated that thorough rehabilitation along modern lines was urgently needed. It was also stated that so long as the Coroner remains an elective officer with a continuous tenure of at most four years, it is not likely that the office will be filled generally with properly trained men.

"A bill is now pending in the New York Legislature to do away with the ancient Coroner system and to substitute for it a system of medical examiners. The bill provides for a new officer to be known as the chief medical examiner, who must be a skilled pathologist with at least ten years' practical experience in the performing of necropsies, to be appointed by the Mayor and to hold office until he resigns or is removed for cause after a hearing. He will appoint assistant examiners, chemists, clerks, etc., as may be deemed necessary, subject to approval by the Board of Estimate and Appointment.

"The power of the present Coroner is limited so that this officer will hold inquests only in cases referred to him by the District Attorney, acting as a Magistrate. The new law also marks the abolishment of the Coroner's Jury, a body which is costly, useless and often ridiculous—which might be said, however, of the petit jury. The medical investigation of crime is to be the duty of qualified medical officers, capable and responsible.

"The bill is the result of a joint conference of committees of the New York Academy of Medicine, Trustees of Bellvue and Allied Hospitals, District Attorney's office, Professors of pathology in the leading medical schools, City Club, Citizens' Union and Short Ballot Association. Its passage would result in the removal of a pernicious, slow, inefficient system, which is a relic of obselete social conditions."

Was Confined To His Bed For Four Months With Rheumatism.

Mr. W. H. Riley, Ruddell, Sask., writes:—"It is with the greatest of pleasure that I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all suffering with rheumatism. I was so bad with this terrible disease, I was unable to get up from my bed for four months, and nothing seemed to relieve me until a friend recommended Doan's Pills. I had my doubts about them, but was so desperate I would try anything suggested to me. After taking half a box I was able to get up, and after taking two boxes could get around quite well. After taking six boxes I was completely cured, and able to work for the first time in five months, and have not had a touch of rheumatism since. Anyone who saw me then would not know me now, as I am strong and active since taking your valuable medicine."

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys to flush off the acid and poisonous impurities which have collected, and thus clean out the kidneys, and dispel the rheumatism from the system.

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SALUTE AGREED TO

General Huerta Will Comply With Demand of U. S.

OTHER NATIONS PRESSED HIM

WASHINGTON, April 17. — The United States Government last night accepted Gen. Huerta's offer to salute the Stars and Stripes as an apology for the arrest of American marines at Tampico a week ago yesterday. The Huerta Government salute to the American flag will be answered with a salute to the tri-color of the Mexican nation.

This arrangement, the details of which were being finally arranged last night in an exchange of official messages between Washington and Mexico City, ended, in the view of all high administration officials, the crisis that had arisen in the last few days, resulting in the despatch of American war fleets to Mexican waters. Executive quarters and congressional circles breathed a sigh of relief that the tension had passed.

No time has been set for the firing of the salute, and until the details are arranged no further orders will be sent to the American fleets now proceeding south. It is practically certain, however, that while many of the vessels will be turned back, others will continue south and a substantially increased naval force will be maintained in Mexican waters.

Huerta's offer and request for a return salute caused President Wilson to ask for an opinion from the counsellor of the State Department and Navy Department officials. All reported that it was the invariable custom in naval practice to return a salute and cited precedents. The President was also informed that Rear Admiral Mayo, in making his original demand for a salute, agreed to return the courtesy.

Mr. Wilson said a return of a salute under the circumstances did not involve recognition of the Huerta Government, but was merely an act of the same character as grasping the hand of an individual who was apologizing as he extended it. Secretary Bryan, too, took the view that the American salute would be given to the flag of the Mexican nation, just as much respected by the Constitutionalists as the Huerta Government, and no technical recognition was involved.

Enquiry as to the character of pressure which had been brought on Gen. Huerta to yield brought out the fact that foreign Governments had an active interest in the events of the last twenty-four hours. Both the French and German ambassadors, after conferences at the State Department, were in communication, it is understood, with their representatives in Mexico City. Another phase of the situation was a well authenticated report that the last instalment of a loan due by Huerta was about to be held up by foreign bankers if he did not comply with the American demands.

Eager To Avenge Insult.

LONDON, April 17.—Contrasting the action of President Wilson in connection with the arrest of American marines at Tampico, with what was done when Wm. S. Benton, the British ranch owner, was killed at Juares, The Manchester Guardian, one of the leading Liberal newspapers, said yesterday:

"Intervention which murder and robbery failed to bring about is apparently to be the punishment for a mere symbolic slight on American dignity."

"Why should Villa murder with impunity and Gen. Huerta be chastised with the whole strength of the right arm of the United States for a mere breach of international politeness?"

Two Hurt In Runaway.

Comb Sage Tea In Lifeless, Gray Hair

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the grey hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

LOCAL AGENTS FAVOUR BILL

Now Before Legislature to Make All Insurance Agents Take Out A License

There is a bill before the Ontario Legislature at present that should it become law, will provide that all insurance agents will have to take out a license. Licenses will be given only to those agents who are reputable, and the bill will cover all the cities and towns of Ontario.

If the bill, which has passed its several readings, becomes law, all the local insurance agents will have to take out a license. Seen in connection with this by the Examiner, the concensus of opinion among the large number of agents in this City seems to be that the bill is a step in the right direction. The result of it in this City, it is thought, will be to weed out any "spotters" that solicit insurance in the local factories and other places for authorized agents. It was pointed out by one of the local insurance men that under the present laws even a Chinese laundry had to have a license before they could 'wash a shirt,' and in his opinion, it was much more important that insurance agents should not be allowed to become authorized representatives of companies in a City until they understand the business. This can be more nearly secured under the provisions of the new measure. The harm done to the Insurance business is done, it is claimed, by the agents who do not understand the science of the business, and have to resort to deception to make their work successful.

Licenses will not be given to employees of factories, etc., who are not regular agents.

NOT A GOOD EXAMPLE.

Turkey Is Cited by Hotelkeeper as Anti-Prohibition Argument.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Addressing the American Hotel Protective Association here yesterday George Wright of the Walker House, Toronto, read a clipping from a Canadian paper in which it was said that the Turkish Government had solicited German brewers to establish breweries in Turkey and had favored the abolition of prohibition in the country as the best means of overcoming the drug evil. Mr. Wright added:

"The Ottoman Empire is the only prohibition nation in the world, and it is the poorest. The nations that lead the world — England, France, Germany, and the United States—have always been consumers of alcohol."

VIRGINIA'S UNSCHOOLED.

More Than 200,000 Children Getting Practically No Education. Not Always Fatal.

Civilisation Strides On.

Virginia educators have been studying the figures of school attendance in the State and the results are not pleasing.

There are 616,168 children of school age in Virginia. Of this number 409,397 are enrolled in the public schools, but only 262,241 of these are in daily attendance. Thus, of the total of 616,168 children, 312,927 or over half, are getting practically no benefit from the schools of the State.

Against these figures there are a few offsets that amount to little in the aggregate. There are 23,062 children enrolled in private schools in Virginia. Even allowing that 100,000 more get home training of some kind, there remains more than 200,000 who are entirely without school advantages.

The theory that the negroes are largely responsible for these figures are not borne out by these tables. White children of school age..398,408
White children of school age enrolled.....288,823
White children of school age in attendance.....217,760
Coloured children of school age.....217,709
Coloured children of school age enrolled.....120,564
Coloured children of school age in attendance.....73,957

Thus, there are 109,585 white and 97,196 coloured children entirely out of the schools.

Thin, Weak, Nervous Headaches, Indigestion

Was Easily Worried and Excited, and Generally Run Down —Marked Benefit From Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Thinness and nervousness usually go together and arise from the same cause—thin, watery blood. The digestive system is failing to supply the required nourishment to the tissues and the nerve cells.

A concentrated, easily digested tonic treatment such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is necessary in order to get the required nutrition into the blood stream. It is truly wonderful what this great restorative will do for thin, weak, nervous men and women.

Mr. Fred Carstens, farmer, Laird, Sask., writes: "I was very thin and nervous, and as I was continually growing worse, decided to give Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a trial. I would suffer from headaches and indigestion, was easily worried and excited and felt generally run down. The benefit obtained from this food cure has been very marked, and I can recommend it with the greatest confidence to persons who are thin, weak and nervous."

Paralysis, locomotor ataxia and even insanity result from neglect to heed the warnings which tell of an exhausted nervous system. Nervousness, irritability, frequent nervous headaches, tendency to worry, indigestion; such are the danger signals which come to warn you of approaching trouble.

While Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is frequently successful in curing nervous prostration, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia, it is wise to avoid these very serious diseases by keeping the nervous sytem in good condition at all times. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will help you as nothing else can. Fifty cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

MADDENED BY FIRE-WATER INDIANS FIGHT

Carried on the Battle Jon the Road to Buckhorn and Finished With a Combat in Hotel Barn.

THREE IN COURT

A party of Indians, who left the city yesterday morning about 9 o'clock for the north, and who got drunk before they had been driven many miles, created an unusual disturbance along the twenty miles of road to Buckhorn, and instituted a mild reign of terror for several hours when they reached that village. Maddened by the liquor which they had consumed, the Indians fought fiercely among themselves while being driven to Buckhorn, and made an effort to intimidate by words and threats all the people they passed along the road. When they reached Buckhorn they created a terrible disturbance in the yard of Eastwood's Hotel, and later two of the young Indians shut themselves up in the stable and fought each other for dear life. The battle went on unknown to the people in the hotel yard until the door of the stable was opened and revealed the two fighters striking and dodging like fiends. Just as the stable door was opened the elder of the two caught his opponent on the chin knocking him against one of the beams in the barn and the fight was finished. Mr. Jas. Montgomery then proceeded to announce his intentions of arresting the young men, but the victorious one tore off his shirt and commenced hostilities at once. Mr. Montgomery succeeded, however, in arresting him.

One of the young men, Joe Chubb by name, was drunk when the party left yesterday morning, in one of Gibb's outfits. He commenced at once to quarrel with the other red men, and when they themselves reached the same condition, Chubb was severely beaten up. When he had been pounded into submission the Indians set on him. But when Buckhorn was nearly reached he became militant again and was thrown out into the road. He has not been seen since, and his comrades as well as the County Police are at a loss to know where he could have disappeared to. He was very drunk and very badly battered when he was thrown from the vehicle.

This morning about ten-thirty o'clock the Indians, who were arrested yesterday afternoon by County Constable Jas. Montgomery, of Buckhorn, came before Magistrate Edmison charged with being drunk in a local option district. They gave their names as Albert Smoke, Richard Henry and Richard Perry, and all pleaded guilty to the charge against them.

Then the other two were excluded from the Court and Smoke was questioned as to where he got his liquor. His story was that yesterday morning about nine o'clock he was in the city and a stranger came up to him with a bottle of liquor. After Smoke had taken a few drinks the stranger handed him the bottle. He had no idea who the man was, and had never seen him before. The night before last a number of Indians were in the city. Smoke said that he got his liquor yesterday after he left the city.

Dick Henry said that a fellow named Dick Phillips gave him the liquor on Wednesday night in this city.

Mr. Cochrane—"Where is Dick Phillips now?

Henry—"He's on the way to Niagara Falls I guess.

"Did you see him go?"

"No, but he presented me with a bottle of whiskey and said he was going."

"You were in luck."

"Well, there's nothing like meeting an old friend."

Henry said that Joe Chubb supplied the booze for the spree on the road to Buchhorn.

Dick Perry, the third Indian, said that he came from Roseneath yesterday morning, and that he got his liquor from Joe Chubb and Tom Henry. He didn't know where Chubb was, but Henry had gone to the lumber camps.

Not believing their stories Magistrate Edmison remanded the young men until Tuesday morning. The lowest penalty that can be imposed is $20 and costs in each case, with the alternative of a period in the County jail.

FIFTEEN YEARS SENTENCE FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Thos Riley, Who Killed a London Bartender, Sent to Kingston Penitentiary by Justice Kelly

HIS WIFE FAINTED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., April 17.—Fifteen years was the sentence imposed by Justice Kelly this afternoon on Thos. Riley, the Grand Trunk brakesman, whose home is in Witchita, Kansas, for killing Geo. Blackburn, a bartender, last October, when the latter was trying to put Riley out of the bar room. The pretty little seventeen-year-old wife of the prisoner, who came from Kansas with her three-month-old baby, and her mother-in-law, to be present at the trial, tearfully caressed the prisoner and held their baby to him to be kissed before he started for the penitentiary. Then she fainted and was carried out. In pleading for leniency Riley said he was under the influence of liquor when he committed the crime.

CYCLIST COLLIDED WITH AGED LADY

Unfortunate and serious was the accident which befel Mrs. Weddup, a resident of the East Ward last night as she was returning home across the Wellington Street bridge to the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Ernie Wetherup.

While crossing from the northern platform of the bridge to the raised walk on the south side of the bridge, she was run into by a young bicyclist, knocked forcibly to the ground and sustained several serious injuries, including a broken nose, two fingers of the left hand fractured, a bruised limb and painfully cut face.

Following the mishap, despite the fact that he was badly shaken up himself. Mr. Flavelle called a rig and had the elderly lady carefully removed to the doctor's office where he gave instructions that she should be well cared for and her injuries attended to.—Lindsay Warder.

WILL BE PRESENTED NEXT WEEK

OTTAWA, Ont., April 17.—Owing to the fact that only a small portion of the members on both sides of the house have returned from the Easter recess, it has been decided by the Opposition that the amendments to Mr. White's budget will not be presented by Sir Wilfrid Laurier until next week. Premier Borden is still labsent from the capital on a holiday trip to the south, but is expected back on Monday next.

DR. CLINTON WAS DISAPPOINTED

Meagre Attendance at the Health Exhibit is Unfavourably Commented Upon by the Visting District Officer of Health

LITTLE INTEREST SHOWN

Another interesting lecture was delivered last evening in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, by Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health. Again the attendance was a very meagre one.

Dr. Clinton, to an Examiner representative, said he was very disappointed at the small attendance there were at the lectures.

This, he said, is a matter of public interest, where the public are asked to co-operate with the Health authorities, for the betterment of conditions, generally.

This is the first time, in all his experience, that he has met with so little encouragement in his work. In other places, crowded houses had met him. Belleville was very interested. At an afternoon lecture given in that town, the hall was crowded, and in the evening people had to be turned away. Madoc had also shown great interest in the lectures. Though not of an entertaining nature, there is a vein of humour introduced. The lectures are educative, and are intended to interest the children more particularly in matters of public health.

Th notices had been given out in the public schools, but no enthusiasm at all was shown. Even, members of the local Board of Health were not present, and last night, no one representative of that Board was there. As Dr. Clinton said, this organization should have been represented, also the Council, Board of Trade and other similar bodies, while it is believed that no one from the Health Association took advantage of the occasion to broaden their knowledge in such vitally important matters, matters not important to medical men alone, but to everyone.

The exhibit was brought here at the expense of the Health Department of the Government, and it was indeed discouraging to see so little interest shown.

Dr. Clinton also paid a compliment to Sanitary Inspector Spence, and said that the city had the services of a man who knew his business thoroughly.

STILL AN OLDER FAMILY BIBLE THAN MR. MIKEL'S

The Examiner is pleased to have information respecting an old family Bible, and its interesting history, as contained in the following letter:

Editor Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Referring to an account of an old family Bible, belonging to Mr. W. C. Mikel, K. C., of Belleville, published in your issue of yesterday, it may be of interest to you to know that Mr. J. L. Dunsford, at present in Florida, U. S., son of the late Hartley Dunsford, Registrar of the County of Victoria, possesses an old family Bible, printed in London, England, in the year 1677. This belonged to John Dunsford of Tiverton, Devon, who, in 1693, was sent by the family to South Carolina "to seek a safe and comfortable asylum from intolerance and persecution." His report of South Carolina, on returning to England, was so discouraging that none of the family emigrated at that early date.

To perpetuate his memory and voyage John Dunsford willed the old Bible mentioned to his nephew, Martin, and heirs, and as above stated, it is still in possession of a member of the family.

Yours truly,
W. H. Dunsford.

Peterborough, April 16, 1914.

If any other readers of the Examiner possess or know of others possessing rare old prints of family Bibles we shall be happy to give publicity to particulars concerning them.

TEN PEOPLE LOSE LIVES IN NEW YORK FIRE

Six Storey Tenement Building Swept by Flames and Inmates Are Trapped in Their Rooms

FIVE IN HOSPITAL

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 17.—Ten persons were burned to death, another is dying, and five more are suffering untold agony in the hospital here to-day as a result of a fire which swept the six-storey rooming-house in Eighth avenue, trapping the tenants in their rooms, and causing twenty-five thousand dollars' damage. Most of the tenants were theatrical people and cloak models. The police and firemen responded promptly and did heroic rescue work, but most of the victims were beyond help when they arrived. The fire originated in the basement.

DETAILS OF MEXICAN CASE NOT COMPLETED

Special to The Examiner.

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 17. — "The situation is encouraging, but it isn't finished," said Secretary Bryan to-day on his way to the White House with a bundle of despatches from Mexico, to lay before President Wilson. It seems there must still be more correspondence between Wilson and Huerta regarding the details of the proposed exchange of courtesies at Tampico. In the meantime orders for the fleet to mobilise off the Mexican coasts have not been countermanded.

Washington, D.C. April 16—The latest advices this afternoon are that the United States and Mexican Governments are still dickering in regard to how the salutes shall be fired at Tampico, Huerta demanding that the U. S. ships shall fire gun for gun to the Mexican salute. In the opinion of all the authorities this would be belittling to the U. S.

SAYS ANGLICAN CHURCH WILL SPLIT

MONTREAL, April 16.—The first of the series of addresses arranged by the Emmanuel Congregational Church to forward the church union movement was given by Rev. H. L. Symonds, D.D., LL.D., last night on "The Church of England and What It Stands For.' Rev. Dr. Symonds declared that he did not see how the Church of England could live without some break sooner or later. The tide of to-day was in favour of the church unity, which the Church of England opposed, and, as the church as at present constituted was divided into sections which the speaker termed the High Court party, the Low Church party and the Broad Church party, some split seemed inevitable.

The second address on "Presbyterianism" will be given by Rev. Bruce Taylor, D.D., pastor of St. Paul's Church, next Wednesday evening.

UPSET LAMP CAUSED TROUBLE

At Bridgenorth Gathering Last Night—Lamp Was Knocked From its Hanging by Chair Which was Being Moved to Permit a Little Square Hop

A PLEASANT EVENING

While the young people of Bridgenorth were clearing the chairs from th centre of the hall last night preparatory to a little square dance at the conclusion of a concert that had been greatly enjoyed, one of the coal oil lamps was knocked from its hanging bracket, and an incipient panic resulted. One of the young men was carrying or passing a chair along to one side when it dislodged the lamp. It fell to the floor with a clutter of glass, and some of the oil leaked out and soaked into the floor. The majority of the concert audience had left the hall, but there were quite a number of the young people, some of whom bolted for the door at the sight of the oil. Fortunately there were no serious consequences. The flutter of excitement passed as quickly as it had been created. Mr. J. A. Jobe was chairman of the evening.

Mr. Asa Huyeke, Mr. Chandler, Miss Flowers, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Telford, contributed largely to the programme. Dr. E. Stanley of Brantford, chief Medical Officer of the C. O. F., and Mr. J. Metheral of Peterborough, were present.

"S. S. Ascania" Nearly Foundered

Narratively Given by Passenger on Atlantic Liner Who Arrived in Peterborough Yesterday

Six sturdy Britishers arrived at the local immigration offices on Water Street last evening. They had all been placed with local farmers before noon to-day.

They left England on April second on the S. S. Ascania, and experienced exceptionally rough weather, during the much prolonged voyage.

How near they were to becoming victims of the angry deep, can be ascertained in the following narrative, related by one of the party to an Examiner.

"The rough weather started on the Sunday after we left port, and became gradually worse, until the climax came, on Wednesday. At 11 o'clock, 11 the forenoon of that day, we were al ordered below on account of the high seas. The sea moderated, however, some time later, and we were again allowed on deck. At six o'clock in the evening we were again ordered below and thought that something unusual had happened. No one went to bed with their clothes off; in fact it was almost impossible to sleep owing to the rocking caused by the huge waves. We never knew how serious the situation was until the following day, when we were informed by one of the firemen that we were lucky to be alive. He said that the ship had almost burrowed bows beneath the waters, and had she not righted herself before the next wave came, we should have all been at the bottom of the sea now.

Thinking that the story was somewhat exaggerated, we asked the chief mate, and he told us that what we had been told was absolutely true in every respect. We all thanked our lucky stars for the providential manner in which we were saved. Had we known how serious the situation was in which we were placed there would certainly have been a panic.

The strain so told on one of the passengers, a Dutchman, that the following day he tried most hard to throw himself overboard and it took many passengers and sailors to stop him destroying himself, and he was not secured until he was bound with cords, the remainder of the voyage being practically uneventful. We reached Halifax harbour the last out of three vessels, and we were the first to get away. We were pleased with the accommodation on the railway by the Cunard people. We came with a conducted party.

Two Boys Were Painfully Cut

Two boys named Murty and Cunningham sustained severe cuts about the head in an accident which occurred about 11 o'cloc this morning. The boys were playing baseball on Downey street, and both attempted to catch the ball as it came down. The result was a head-on collision. The former had a severe gash over his eye and on the forehead. He was attended by Dr. McNulty. The latter was also severely cut in the forehead and required medical attendance.

SILVER PLATE AND GOOD WISHES FOR MAJOR HAYES

Brilliant Military Banquet in Honour of the Judge Designate of Wellington County—One of Most Successful Functions in History of Local Garrison.

LENGTHY TOAST LIST

The officers of the 57th Regiment paid a splendid tribute to Major L. M. Hayes at a farewell banquet held in their mess at the armouries last night. It was an impressive expression of esteem and confidence engendered by long association, of friendship than which there is none more levelling than that linking the military whether it has been established during years of peace or in actual warfare, and of regret that one of the oldest and most prominent members of the mess was about to depart from the scenes which are dearest to the staff of the 57th.

To the civilian accustomed to witnessing the precision and sedateness of the officers on the parade ground, the extremely cordial relations exhibited at last night's function were something of a revelation.

The good will of brothers in arms has been told in song and story, but this side of their relationship is generally overlooked by the man on the street. In any case the disruption of long friendships strikes home to the officers as sharply as to any civilian. The intangible hoops binding them to one another and welded by long associations snap with the same keen pangs that twang the emotions of the average man.

Last night's brilliant affair rang with congratulations to the recently appointed judge of Wellington County and called up pleasant recollections firmly fixed in the memories of the officers. There was also the undertone of regret that the elevation of the popular paymaster of the 57th to the King's bench of Ontario necessitated his retirement from the activities of the Regiment and his departure from the City.

Among the guests were representatives of the Bar and the Bench, Trade and Commerce, Legislative bodies and others, all of whom joined with the militiary in their expressions of regret that Peterborough was losing a prominent citizen. But these same speakers emphasized their confidence that Judge Hayes in his new responsibilities would reflect honour upon Peterborough, would uphold the traditions of the bench and would fulfill his duties with great credit to himself. The spontaneous unanimity and enthusiasm which marked the references to the guest of the evening recalled Shenstone's lines:

So sweetly she bid adieu
I thought she bade me return.

A Splendid Banquet.

The banquet itself was a gratifying success. The catering was done by Hooper and not only were the various courses most acceptable, but the service was exceptionally good. The tables were appropriately decorated, and the bright uniforms gave the mess room a brilliant colouring befitting the function.

Major Walker, president of the officers' mess, proved himself a finished toast master. At either side of him were His Honour Judge Huyeke, Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education, Col. Halliday and Lt.-Col. Bell, who came down from Toronto for the evening. He was formerly the commanding officer of the 57th.

At the guest's table were noticed Mr. F. A. Peck, Mayor Buller, Mr. E. H. D. Hall, Mr. Basil Hall, Major Young, Col. Clegg, Col. Miller, Mr. F. F. Mason, Mr. F. G. Patterson, Mr. R. W. Trasers, Rev. F. J. Sawers, Mr. R. R. Hall and others.

During the evening a number of mess songs were sung as a reminder of former days and to uphold some of the traditions of the mess. Lieut. Morris Park sang a pretty solo, but it was not messed with time, nor did it bestir the memory of the officers to somewhat similar occasions in the past.

The outstanding feature of the affair was the splendid feeling that prevailed, a feeling that speaks well for Col. Clegg and his present capable officers, and especially includes the same old traditions with which the names of such officers as Col. Miller, Col. Edwards, Lt.-Col. Bell and many others who have shared in the vicissitudes and glories of the 57th are inseparably connected.

The Toast to Major Hayes.

After the toast to the King, proposed by Major Walker, had been honoured in the usual manner, Col. Clegg offered the toast of "Our Guest" and paid a splendid tribute to Major Hayes. "So close to us has he been that we feel we ourselves share in the honour that has been conferred upon him. Major Hayes joined the Regiment in '89, and had come to Peterborough several years previous to that as a youth and stripling. After taking his lieutenancy and captaincy he was raised to the rank of major in 1905, when he was appointed pay master of

TRIED TO KILL MAYOR MITCHELL OF NEW YORK

Disappointed Office Seeker Fires Revolver at Mayor and Corporation Counsel Receives Bullet in Chin

GUNMEN CAPTURED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, April 16—Mayor Mitchell was shot at by a disappointed office seeker, this afternoon, as he was leaving the city hall in an automobile in company with Corporation Councillor Polk. The bullet missed Mitchell and hit Polk. The Mayor leaped out of the car and grabbed the would-be assassin as he was about to fire again. The streets were thronged with the noon-day crowd and there were threats of lynching, but the man was quickly slipped away to the cells by the police. Polk was hit in the chin, but not fatally hurt. A pedestrian was wounded slightly in the arm. The gunman's name is given as Divid Rose.

DARING RESCUE AT G. T. R. STATION

Last night about 9 o'clock a serious accident was narrowly averted at the Grand Trunk station. Had it not been for the alacrity of a bystander the horror of Tuesday night's accident might have been repeated and another life might have been taken by the railways in this city.

It seems that a lady who intended to be a passenger on the train to Port Hope, which leaves about 9 o'clock, waited with friends on the station platform until the train started to move before attempting to board it. Then she made a hasty effort to enter the train, but missed the first step and fell between the weeks. Eye-witnesses state that a man near by rescued her with wonderful quickness, succeeding in getting her clear of the wheels. Had it not been for his proximity to the place where the lady slipped, and his presence of mind, she must inevitably have met with a serious, and perhaps fatal accident. The position in which she fell made it impossible for her to save herself.

The rescuer deserves more praise in that in attempting to save the woman he put himself in extreme danger of falling under the train also.

LEHIGH AND MISSOURI BOTH HIT NEW LOW

The market developed an afternoon weakness that seemed to centre on some of the rails. Missouri dropped from 24 1-2 to 18 3-4, the lowest figure of the year, and the lowest since 1904.

Lehigh dropped from 141 to 135, with most of the selling during the half hour prior to the close. The decline through the last four pots were practically by whole points at a time according to the Board. This is another low level and is the lowest since 1910. Union Pacific showed a marked weakness on opening at 155 and closing at 153 7-8.

Reading loked weak in the closing figures and showed no strength during the day. C.P.R. showed a tendency to recover.

Liquidation in Missouri Pacific causing a break of 6 points to 18 1-2, was a feature of the market. M. O P's. notes fa due in six weeks, were offered at 25. This indicated a belief that the notes would not b paid off at par and interest on June1st, and that probably the only plan to provide for their maturity was a proposal to extend them so that the question arose whether some of the note holders would not be likely to accept these terms.

Erie is recommended as a purchase around 28. New Haven is around 68 and U. P. is a good purchase at the present level.

CANADA'S FIFTIETH.

An Ottawa gentleman suggests that the fiftieth anniversary of Confederation be celebrated at Ottawa in some spectacular way. This idea is worthy of consideration, as Confederation is worthy of the idea. It will set us thinking. Fifty years ago come July 1st, 1917, Canada entered upon the status and experiment of home rule—autonomous existence. It was an experiment, but in the half century that has passed we have passed far beyond the experimental stage, and have achieved success in self-government. In all departments of national action and development Canada has "made good." Of course the material element of our progress is the more conspicuous. As a confederated Dominion we have been making history only fifty years, but we have written our history for that period in bold characters. Anything like detail of our achivments, would be voluminous, but there are millions still living, so young are we as a country, who have, themselves, seen the progress we have made and they will not be astonished at one little concrete evidence of the growth we have made in the past half century. For instance in 1867, the year of Confederation, the total trade of Canada amounted to only 132 millions of dollars. The total recorded trade of the last year was 1,100 millions, a nearly ten-fold increase. This growth is only an indication of general growth; and we have only fairly begun, in all the elements of nationhood, material as well as aesthetic. Our achievements actual and relative, would be great for a long established country, but for a new country—a country in the making — they have been phenomenal. Canada has made self-government a success, and has demonstrated the practicability of imperium in imperio—a nation autonomous yet attached, bound yet free, sovereign yet subject.

Ottawa is the natural centre of a celebration like that proposed; and we are sure that every province, every person, who is a Canadian, will lend cooperation, without impairing the local celebrations of Dominion Day, which will take a new importance on the semi-centenary of Canadian Confederation. It is true that 1917 is still three years away, but Ottawa has a good deal to do in the way of preparation before she will be in ship-shape—for staging a worthy celebration of the semi-centenary.

IMMIGRATION DECEPTION.

"John Bull," not the portly gentleman of the cartoons, and the emblem of the might of the mightiest Empire, but the publication of that name, is indignant with "the lying immigration agents" who are "luring people to Canada and Australia with lies." In the last number of "John Bull" to hand appears the following under the heading of "The Great Immigration Lie":

Now that the Board of Trade has firmly grabbed one of the several lying emigration agents who induce people to go out to the Argentine on the statement that the Labour Bureau there finds work for all, we have hopes that it will not less firmly grab some of the emigration agents who are luring people to Canada and Australia with similar lies. We agree with the Bow Street Magistrate that the case of Frederick Wallace Hetherington, passenger brokers' agent, of the Strand, is "extremely important," albeit it is strange that the Board of Trade have had to wait for the advent of Mr. Burns as President to discover the fact. Notwithstanding the heavy fine of £135 and costs, Hetherington's pamphlet is not a whit more flagrant in its lying audacity than pamphlets and advertisements issued by other agents who live out of the Argentine, Australian and Canadian immigration traffic. We look to Mr. Burns to bring them to the bar of justice also.

It is difficult to see in what way John Burns can circumvent the swindling tactics of the unscrupulous immigration agents. The touter we shall always have with us, in immigration as in other activities. The evil of luring immigrants to any country by audacious lying cannot be altogether suppressed, but it can be confined to a few individuals and entirely eliminated from official government advertising for immigrants. Under the very best conditions, with nothing bu the truth respecting any country offered as an inducement, there is bound to be disappointment among the emigrants to a new country. It all depends upon the individual. A man of industrious disposition, willing to work, willing to accept conditions though they may reverse the habitudes of a life time, will succeed in Canada; but the thriftless, the lazy, the man whose dream of life is only of beer, will be sure to go to the wall, in spite of all coddling and propping. New countries like Canada need immigrants; but they must be of the right sort, both in their own and Canada's interest. There are endless acres of land to be occupied in Canada; there's a good living for everybody that will work. There is no room for new-comers in a congested labour market. The enterprising and capable immigrant who can make a "job" for himself, or take any job that offers till he gains a foot-hold, and gets his bearings, will get on. The disappointed immigrant from the Old Country may lay a great deal of blame upon lying immigration agents, but if we could get at the bottom of the facts, we should many times find that the man himself is no small contributor to the conditions upon which his disappointment and failure are founded.

DO WOMEN VALUE THE VOTE?

Now that the smoke of battle has cleared away, it is possible to estimate with greater accuracy the results of extending the municipal franchise to women in Illinois. In some respects they must be disappointing to the advocates of equal suffrage. For example, the female vote polled in Chicago was not what was expected. Opportunity was last Tuesday afforded 317,458 women of casting their votes in that city, and less than 160,000 availed themselves of the privilege. Figures may be offered to show that the women were only a little less neglectful than the men of their civic duty, the latter casting but 328,987 votes out of a registered possibility of 455,439, but this will not satisfy the critics. As a matter of fact, the non-voting women of Chicago constitute a much larger percentage than this, for many thousands eligible to the franchise refrained from registering. The women of Illinois outside of Chicago appear to have made better use of their opportunity, and their activity has been rewarded by the sweeping of saloons out of 23 additional counties, making the number of "dry" counties in the state 52, and by the complete overturning of the liquor interests in such important communities as Bloomington, Decatur, Freeport, Galesburg, Joliet, Monmouth, Kewanee, Lockport, Elgin and East Galena.—Brantford Expositor.

NO MONOPOLY FOR THE CONSERVATIVE "GRAFT" HUNTERS

Liberals To Do a Little Transcontinental Investigation on Their Own Account

The Liberals in the Commons are starting to do a little investigation on their own account in connection with the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway under the present Government. It will be remembered that Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton, although their commission from the Crown instructed them to investigate the whole work of construction up to the present time, stopped short in their investigations with the advent of the Borden administration. Otherwise, they might have found some real charges as to "waste" reflecting on their own party friends.

There is a prima facie case at least of the "waste" of $400,000 of the people's money in payments made for over-classification and over-break which, if it had been done under a Liberal Government, would, according to Messrs. Gutelius and Lynch-Staunton, have been played up as a huge scandal. The Liberals in the public accounts committee have started an investigation into the settlement effected last year by Major Leonard, the present chairman of the National Transcontinental Commission, with Mr. J. D. McArthur, the contractor for the Superior Junction to Winnipeg section of the road. Under the late Government a board of arbitration was appointed to consider the amount which should be deducted from Mr. McArthur's accounts because of over-break and over-classification. This board of arbitrators after careful investigation found that the amount to be deducted should be $550,000. Mr. McArthur protested the finding, but the former commissioners and the ex-Minister of Railways, Hon. George P. Graham, declined to allow Mr. McArthur anything beyond what the board of arbitrators were willing to allow. After the Easter recess Major Leonard will be called upon to testify before the committee as to why he went behind the award of the board and gave Contractor McArthur $400,000 more than the Liberal Government was willing to allow him.

"KEEP THE BOY ON THE FARM IS NONSENSE" SAYS MR. D. WALKER

In His Address at the Big Educational Convention in Toronto Yesterday---Let Farmers' Sons Into Professions and Children Do Not Enjoy Learning

"This question of keeping the boy on the farm is more or less nonsense. I mean no reflection by this on the instruction of agriculture, which is most important. But I do not see why we should attempt to keep the boy on the farm. We want good teachers and good lawyers as well as farmers."

Speaking thus before the Training Department of the Ontario Educational Association, at the University yesterday morning, Mr. Duncan Walker, B. A., of Peterborough, was greeted with several "hear hears."

"What I believe is that an attempt should be made to place before the city boy the opportunities of the farm. This reverse action would relieve city of a large part of its increasing burden of unemployed men, and replenish the population of the farm.

"Another fault with our educational training system is that many of our students are being allowed to leave the High and Normal Schools with a spirit of relief, as if they had completed an odious task.

"Tis lack of desire for learning can be remedied to a great extent by the proper use of our public libraries. Each student is interested in some particular subject. By supplying him with the best books on this subject the pleasure of acquiring knowledge by reading can be inculcated in him.

PRESENTATION TO MR. A McNAB

C. T. R. Station Agent at Lindsay Who Has Been Transferred to This City is Honoured

Lindsay Warder: After a residence of five years in Lindsay as Depot Agent for the Grand Trunk Railway, Mr. A. McNabb leaves this week for Peterborough to assume similar duties there. During his sojourn in Lindsay he has endeared himself to his fellow men on the system, and yesterday afternoon he was the recipient of a beautiful leather club bag, a gift of the ticket office and freight office staff. The address was read by Mr. Jas. Doran, and the presentation by Mr. D. Dillon of the freight office department.

Mr. MacNabb, who is quite capable of making suitable and appropriate replies at all times, but thanked the pietaly by surprise, but thanked the boys heartily for their kind remembrance. He greatly regretted leaving Lindsay, but duty called. Nevertheless he would carry with him the very best thoughts of his pleasant stay in Lindsay.

Another Presentation.

It is understood that Mrs. MacNabb was a few days ago presented with a rich and well cut vase by the Talent Workers of St. Andrew's Church.

To keep the lower crust of a pie from becoming soggy, rub the lower crust over with the white of an egg before putting in the filling.

$75,000 Pier Destroyed By Militants

Special Wire to The Examiner:

GREAT YARMOUTH, Eng, April 16—Britannic pier, one of the finest in England, was totally destroyed, at a loss of $75,000, by fire, at 4 o'cock this morning, following a terrific explosion of bombs planted last night during a concert by militant suffragettes. Suffragette literature was scattered about the place.

SAYS PERLEY WILL GET THE COMMISSIONERSHIP

Examiner Special:

LONDON, Eng., April 16—The Birmingham Post claims to have authoritative information that Hon. George A. Perley will undoubtedly succeed to the High Commisionership in London.

OTTAWA, April 16—A cabled report from England to the effect that it has been settled that Hon. George E. Perley, Minister without portfolio in the Government and the confidential adviser of the Prime Minister, will succeed to the position of Canadian High Commissioner in London, lacks official confirmation at Ottawa. Questioned this morning in connection with his reported candidature for the position, Mr. Perey laughed in a manner which might either have been taken to mean a negative or to have been intended to evade an answer.

Hon. Mr. Perey is a United Statesser by birth and parentage.

AN ELECTRIC CALL REMINDER

Mr. Alexander Humphries of Syracuse, N.Y., has installed in the Oriental Hotel a unique call alarm that has for its purpose the automatic ringing of a bell, caused by the fixing of a brass tag to the stem on the switchboard, corresponding to the hour desired. Thus, if number 36 desires to be called at 6.15 a.m., the tag for number 36 room is placed on the 6.15 stem and the bell will ring at that time. A local "wag" complained that the only improvement needed was to fix the switchboard so that at any certain hour, the sleeping guest could automatically be supplied with a Manhattan or gin rickey, but Mr. Humphries, who is a total abstainer, refused to entertain the proposition.

GETTING A START

By NATHANIEL C. FOWLER JR.

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Practically speaking, there is no sharp dividing line between common self-respect and ordinary conceit. Each merges into the other. Most self-respect is tainted with conceit, and there is very little pure and simple conceit, for conceit, as it runs, is not entirely devoid of proper self-respect.

Fine analysis is not necessary, provided one is assured that the composition of his self-respect contains not more than a small percentage of the alloy of conceit.

Absolutely pure self-respect, unadulterated with conceit, is, of course, preferable to any mixture of the two, but I doubt if human nature has reached a plane which will enable it to possess self-respect 100 per cent. pure.

Commercially speaking, I am inclined to feel that a moderate amount of conceit, like a small percentage of alloy in gold, works for wear and utility.

Conceit, if properly handled, may add working strength to self-respect, provided, of course, that it does not predominate.

My investigations prove to me that there does not exist a successful man in business or in a profession, who is not conceited in some etxent, who does not at times overestimate his ability. This conceit or overestimation, if not immoderate, may act as a carrier for genuine self-respect. At any rate, we are not sufficiently intelligent to diagnose ourselves or our qualities accurately, and many who pride themselves upon their alleged lack of conceit are carrying a heavy burden of this despised article.

Self-respect is indispensible in the making of success. Unless one respects himself, he accomplishes nothing. If, on the other hand, his self-respect is heavily adulterated, with conceit, he is pretty sure to fail, and he does not occupy an enviable position in business or in society.

A proper amount of conceit may be considered as self-confidence and not as an objectionable possession; and self-confidence, even if there is too much of it, is often better than extreme modesty.

If you do not believe in yourself and manifest this belief, no one will believe in you or trust you. Your humility, although it may be appreciated by your friends, and although they will honour you for it, does not, as a rule, inspire them with confidence in your ability to act.

There must be something more than modesty and humility, something which rises to the surface and commands attention.

Therefore, I say to you, young men, do not attempt to rid your system of every particle of conceit. A little of it, provided it is accompanied by a large amount of self-respect and justifiable confidence, may enhance your value. Avoid, however, predominating conceit. It is sure to lead to disaster and make you disagreeable to every one.

If you are conceited—and you probably are—instead of eliminating all of this conceit, attach it to proper self-respect and confidence, and let it work for you.

Don't be afraid of yourself, provided you have reason to believe that you are well grounded in ability and experience.

Self-confidence, even if adulterated with a moderate amount of conceit, is a commercial and social commodity, a vehicle for the successful conveyance of profitable energy.

MR. A McNAB OF LINDSAY NOW IN CHARGE HERE

Mr. A. McNabb of Lindsay, took charge of the local G.T.R. station today and Mr. F. Sandy of this City, is in Lindsay, where he will assume the duties of station agent. The transfer, which was announced some time ago, has taken place.

Mr. A. McNab has secured a residence in Peterborough and will live here henceforth. He leaves behind him in Lindsay a large number of friends and will no doubt become deservedly popular here. Mr. Sandy was seventeen years station agent here and that experience will make it easy for him to attend to the responsibilities of his position in Lindsay.

If you have a dark silk dress that has worn in one spot or pulled out at a seam and you find in mending it that the stitches pull out of the silk, paste a piece of black court-plaster on the under side. This makes a neat smooth patch, almost unnoticeable.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

April 19, 1914.

(Copyright, 1912, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Cost of discipleship. Luke xiv: 25-35.

Golden Text—Whosoever would save his life shall lose it, and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake shall find it. Matt. xvi:25.

(1.) Verse 25.—What, if any, reason is there to believe that the crowd drawing power of the gospel is a thing of the past?

(2.) Verse 26.—What is essential on our part before we can become real Christians?

(3.) If doing the right means loss of life, and doing wrong saving our life, why would it be essential for us to forfeit life if we would be followers of Jesus?

(4.) If it is a choice between the rejection of our nearest relation and the violation of conscience, which is essential, and why, if we would be followers of Jesus?

(5.) Verse 27.—Why are self denial and willingness to die for the right essential to becoming a disciple of Jesus?

(6.) Verses 28-30.—Which is the better way and why to induce people to be Christians, to picture the gain and say but little of the cost or to put the cost to them bluntly, as Jesus does here?

(7.) If a person starts to be a follower of Jesus without counting the cost and subsequently learns what it involves, will he be likely to turn back or to follow on? Why?

(8.) In what respects does the building of a tower resemble the building of a Christian character.

(9.) What is the general opinion of a man who commences a Christian life and keeps up the profession, but who has failed to build a Christian character?

(10.) Verse 31.—How does being a disciple of Jesus resemble a king going to war with another king?

(11.) What are the influences represented by the world, the flesh and the Devil which a Christian has to conquer?

(12.) Verse 32.—Why is it impossible for a Christian to make peace with the Devil or any wrong?

(13.) Verse 33.—Why is it reasonable, right and essential that Christ must have the first place in our affections?

(14.) What proportion of church members do actually give Christ first place in their affections, and do you do so?

(15.) Verses 34-35.—What are the characteristics of salt?

(16.) In what way does a Christian resemble salt?

(17.) Of what use is a professed Christian who lacks Christianity?

Lesson for Sunday, April 26, 1914. The Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin. Luke xv:1-10.

AFTER SICKNESS

Mrs. Gardner Tells How to Restore One's Strength.

So many people are asking how to recover their strength after severe sickness that we are publishing this information for their benefit.

After grippe, pleurisy, pneumonia, or any illness what you need is new strength and better blood.

The most certain way to get this is by taking Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation.

Mrs. M. T. Gardner, Chicago, Ill., says: "After a very serious operation I was a total invalid for nearly a year and a convalescent for months thereafter, I gave the remedies of a number of eminent specialists a thorough trial, but without deriving the slightest benefit. Vinol was recommended. Without the least faith in the merits of the medicine, I took it faithfully, and it seemed to bring back the colour to my cheeks and the elasticity to my step which I had despaired of ever recovering. I can say, conscientiously, that for nervous and run-down people, Vinol is an excellent remedy."

Try a bottle of Vinol. Your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength.

WOMANLY MAN AND MANLY WOMAN DEFINED AT MEETING IN I.O.O.F. HALL

Women's Suffrage Was Subject Discussed—Some Men Said They Should Be at Home — Others Called Them Fools—A Description in Verse—Old Solomon to the Rescue.

BRIEF OUTLINES

The local Council of Women have, at meetings held in the Public Library, discussed Women's Suffrage. The subject, which has caused such excitement in England during the past two or three years, has evidently made the women of Canada think that they too have as much right as the man to vote. The matter was introduced into the I.O.O.F. circles last evening, when an open meeting, to discuss the question of the day, was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall, at the junction of George and Hunter street. Owing to the large number of speeches, but brief outlines of each can be reproduced.

Manly Woman Is Detestable.

Mr. D. Hilliard, in giving the opening speech, took an opposition, and said that "Imitation was the sincerest form of flattery," and gave that as the reason why women wished to have the vote.

"A manly woman is detestable, detested by man, disregarded by woman. It is her duty to transform the house into a home. The time is far distant when women will secure the vote. If they were to secure it, they would be sinking to the level of ward politicians. We must all conclude that this line of life was never intended for women.

No Business to Mind.

It has been said that if these women would only mind their own business, everything would be all right, but they have no mind to look after business, and no business to mind. Women were never distinguished in the line of science as much as men. We have no great women painters, no women sculptors, no women scientists. Women taking part in the government of our country, would only leave us in a non-progressive stage. Women's Suffrage is like pitch.

Who Made Politics Dirty?

Mrs. Jones, replying to Mr. Hilliard, said that the last speaker had likened methods of women politics to pitch, and asked: "Who was it made politics so dirty, was it the men?" There would be no solution to the world's problem, until a mutual settlement between the men and women was arrived at. Men talk of genius. "Isn't gumption better than genius?" Politics and economics go hand in hand. Politics have invaded the home, and therefore women must mingle with politics.

Man Is Protector.

Mr. Sills—"Women never can, and never will, be the protector of the affairs of womanhood. All through the ages, man has been the protector. The very best thing that women can do, is to interest themselves in the home, and make the house a home."

"They Are Fools."

Mr. McDonald, in taking the part of the men, asked why the women should have the vote. Men must consider whether or not it would be for the good of the country, to allow them to have the vote. I do not think that they show ability, in fact they are fools, but they would like to be martyrs.

Give them the ballot, and they would turn the House of Commons into a fashion house; the Senate would be a divorce court, and the Navy a yachting club, and instead of having one tiny policewoman, we should have a whole army of policewomen. We must think of them as the weaker sex, and ask ourselves, why should they wish to force themselves upon the arena of the world. Therefore I say, the women should not have the vote.

A Womanly Man.

Mr. Dormer, a womanly man, expressed himself as follows: "Who is more interested in the making of proper laws, than our women. If they had the power, they would bring the same care and management into the government, as they display in the home."

Not Revolutionary.

Mr. Gillespie, another ladies' man, said: "I would like to calm the fears in the minds of two previous speakers. Women are the most conservative force in society. They are progressive, not revolutionary. They have ability; the which has been proved in the home, the church, and the social world. It seems to be that it would be best for the human race, if the women were given the vote. Why should women not share in the government of our country, that they might excell in their efforts.

Mr. Billy McLaren is a woman hater, at least he hates the suffragettes. He said that women were right when they said they could accomplish things that men could not. It has been said, he continued, that a woman in London, Eng., in the year 1861, lost 168,000 hairpins. That was surely something no man could accomplish. People have said that they have money to burn, but now, in this age, it seems tha they have men to burn.

He expressed his version of the suffrage movement in poetic verse, which, modified, is as follows:

Solomon to the Rescue.

Mr. Hillier has ably defended our sex, but we always know, women, the ablest perplex. Old Solomon, famed for his wisdom and power, could never hold out 'gainst a maid for an hour. His kingdom back yonder, you can take as a test, was guided and lost there at the women's behest. The women ruled then and you can hardly wonder, that we scarce want the same to tear all asunder.

Wis God of Odin.

Mrs. Jones, who so ably and fluently spoke, seems to want us to think that the angels awoke, when the suffragettes guided the great ship of state; and almost would lead us, to the white pearly gate. While others they think, the women down trodden, unconscious was she that the war god of Odin was a woman, who donned the breast plate of battle, and to-day, as of old, the war club can rattle.

What She Does.

There is nothing down-trodden in women to-day, for unshaken, she still holds the power of her sway. There's a swell dame I think of, lives in the City, a maker of speeches, both fluent and witty. A suffragette meeting on Monday, she attends, the poor little heathen on Tuesday she amends, on Wednesday to the prayer meeting she piously goes. On Thursday, the Y.M. sees her poking her nose.

And Then Some.

And on Friday the African children of Shem see her sewing, and planning and thinking of them. Her little son Peter, unkempt, torn and soiled, once met her down yonder, as onward she toiled. Her poor little boy, she had seen him so seldom, she knew not the lad when she stopped and beheld him. She said, "Little man, pray go tell your mother, I am speaking to-night on children who suffer."

The Craze of the Vote.

Why, mother, I'm Peter. She stared there above him. He hungered for some one to kiss and to love him, but the cold mother heart had long ago died there. While she screamed for the votes that fate had denied her. Some think they are rising, while deeper they're falling, unheeding the message that's calling, and calling. The heart of women, for ages hath blessed her, 'ere the craze of the vote so largely obsessed her.

We Do Draw the Line.

Fair queen of our homes, we love them, we love them, and ever around them, beneath them, above them, the strong heart of man shall aye love them and shield them. This militant thought, it never appealed to them. We grant them all honour; wives mother, and pets, but we do draw the line when they turn suffragettes.

"Let Them Die."

Mr. Boyd, in part sympathy with the suffragettes, said he believed that the women who paid taxes should have the vote, both municipal and parliamentary and said that he was convinced that such would be the case. But there are a certain class of these women, who have gone mad. Women who burn churches, destroy treasured paintings, etc., should be treated as criminals and should be placed in jail, and, further, allowed to die, if they refused to eat.

In the States, women in Chicago have got the vote, and at the last municipal election of the great city, 80 1-2 p.c. of those eligible to vote did so, and their vote was instrumental in closing over one thousand saloons. One vote in each house, he considered, however, was quite sufficient.

Improvements in Women?

Mrs. Watts, the nex speaker, made a splendid plea for the cause of the women. After all the arguments, she said, it just comes down to the simple quest ion of justice. Fully one-half of the conscience and intelligence of the community is not represented. What might be the outcome of equal suffrage no one knows. Where the experiment has been tried, the results have been favourable. We could expect to see improvements in woman herself. Political rights of women are fast coming. When man and woman wandered far, the gates of Eden were turned against them, and they can only return, hand in hand.

They Do Not Want It.

Mr. Young was the last speaker. He said that he did not believe that the women wanted to vote at all, and if he had his way, it it was imperative that women have the vote, he would give it to the woman, who produced the large families.

At the opening of the evening, Mr. Bard gave a piano selection and Mr. H. Paterson, P.C., sang two songs. It is not known, but believed, that the worthy arm of the law was there in the interests of public peace. No disturbance however, arose and his services were not required. At the conclusion of the programme he again rendered two Scotch songs, in a delightful manner, which can be best summed up in the words of Mr. Elliott. "I particularly wish to call attention to the manner in which the Scotch songs were sung by Mr. Paterson. It is on very rare occasions that we have the opportunity to hear them, in the true Scottish Dorrech. The Scottish character at first seems to be rough, it seems to be like the emblem of their country, the thistle, which is rough and harsh on the outside, but when you get to the centre, the heart is white and soft within.

The singing of the National Anthem concluded the programme.

SUFFRAGETTE SMASHED CASES IN A MUSEUM

LONDON, April 16.—With a butcher's cleaver, which she had concealed under her cloak, a suffragette started to demolish a glass case and its contents, consisting of valuable porcelains(in the Asiatic Gallery of the British Museum. At the time there were few visitors in that section, and on this the suffragette doubtless counted for long enough freedom from interruption to complete the work of destruction. But the sound of splintering glass carried far, and before she had struck many blows two attendants reached the spot and seized her and turned her over to the police.

Of the contents of the case only a saucer was damaged to the extent of about fifty dollars, and a few dollars will suffice to replace the eight broken panes in the case.

At the police station the woman refused to give her name or address, but it was said she was recognized by detectives as a member of the Women's Social and Political Union.

To the Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment was delegated the honour of proposing the toast to Major Hayes.

OBJECTS TO THE BREAD BY-LAW

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—Will you please publish the following re bread by-law. Will Mr. C. Spence be willing to pay for bread wrapping. would he like to wear a smock in a bakeshop, and would he like to drive a baker's rig and deliver bread in the winter when it is 30 below zero with a pair of white gloves on? I guess not. I am sure the Peterborough bakers are as clean as any in Canada, and I for one don't see where we need the bread wrapped. Times are hard enough now, and the cost of living high enough with out making by-laws to raise the cost of bread. I think the bread by-law is a fad like the bottled milk by-law was. Hope Mr. Spence will get his bread wrapped and charged 12c., but give fe my bread without being wrapped for 10c. Hoping to see this in your paper, I am,

Yours truly,

FAREWELL RECEPTION TO OFFICERS OF LOCAL Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT

Messrs. Hainsworth and Thompson Guests of Honour at Very Enjoyable Affair

SORROW EXPRESSED

About seventy-five people were the guests of the Mothers' Club in the Y. M. C. A. last night, at a farewell reception given in honour of Messrs. A. A. Hainsworth and J. J. Thompson, respectively General Secretary and Physical Director of the local branch of the "Y," both of whom are severing their connection with that institution within the next couple of weeks.

The ladies of the Mothers' Club received the guests and made all acquainted during the first half hour of the evening, after which a very enjoyable social time was spent. The guests made good use of the pool tables and other means of amusement with which the large game room on the second flat of the "Y" is so generously provided. The ladies and men competed in contests and the chief competition of the evening was won by Mrs. Devens. In this Mr. and Mrs. B. Shortly carried off the "booby" prize, each scoring "0" in the contest. The prizes were presented to the winners by Mr. G. Galley, Secretary of the Boys' Department.

After an hour had been spent in games the guests were invited into the Banquet Hall of the "Y," where so many historic feasts have taken place, and a splendid repast was served by the ladies of the Mothers' Club. The good things were provided in plenty, and were of the choicest order. The ladies who had provided so generously for the guests served in a charming manner.

At the conclusion of the banquet brief addresses were given by the Revs. H. J. Keith, R. G. Peever, and J. R. Webb. Dr. J. Carruthers also spoke on behalf of the Mothers' Club, and Messrs. Hainsworth and Thompson spoke briefly, thanking the speakers and all present for this demonstration in their honour.

Mr. Keith said that Mr. Hainsworth and Mr. Thompson stood for all that was best in the Y.M.C.A. work, and all were sorry that at the gathering last night they must say good-bye to them. He spoke of Mr. Thompson's splendid accomplishments in the physical work and wished the two God-speed.

Mr. Webb felt that all were sorry to have the two gentlemen pass from among them, not only for their good works, but for their good temper. They were not only leaving our City but our country, but he felt that although they would be in the United States they would not really be absent, for their influence would still be present.

The Rev. R. G. Peever said that the two gentlemen had made an investment of their lives in the boyhood and young manhood of this City that would be eternal. He felt sorry for their departure and wished to join with the rest in wishing them God-speed.

Messrs. Thompson and Hainsworth in brief speeches, expressed the feeling that if they had assisted one young man in this City to think better thoughts and lead a better life they were amply rewarded.

The banquet was brought to a close by three rousing cheers for the two gentlemen and the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. Hainsworth has been in charge of the local "Y" for four years, and during that time he has won not only the respect of the boys of the institution but the cooperative sympathy of many of the parents.

Mr. J. J. Thompson, who has been here for a longer period, is a great favourite with the boys and has exerted a tremendous influence for good over all those with whom he has come in contact. In their departure it is the opinion of a great many citizens that the City is losing two men whose efforts in the interests of the young people of Peterborough have been invaluable.

BRITISH NAVAL PAPER CRITICIZES FIRST LORD

LONDON, April 16.—The current number of The Naval and Military Record, the most popular of the service papers on this sire, has the following comment on Winston Churchill and Ulster: "No Minister has been treated more generously by the naval service than the present First Lord, and therefore the regret of the navy is all the more keen now that Churchill has exhibited himself on more than one occasion as a reckless party politician. He has eaten some of the last of the solemn pledges which he gave to the navy, and then he has proceeded to embroil the fleet in party politics. A series of orders which were given for naval concentration against Ulster has seriously impaired the prestige of the First Lord and of the Board of Admiralty. It may be said that Churchill himself was mainly responsible for these decisions, but responsibility must rest with the whole Board of the Admiralty, and in particular with the First Sea Lord, who has to do specially with the disposition of the fleet. If in time of real danger from a foreign enemy the Board of Admiralty is going to lose its head in this way and send wireless orders over the sea to be cancelled almost immediately afterwards there can be little doubt as to what fate will overtake us."

Young Lad Fined For Assault

Ira McMullen was charged with being found drunk in a public. Guilty was his plea, but he was allowed to go on the understanding that he would go out to a farm to-day.

Four local young men were charged with conducting themselves in a drunk, disorderly manner, on Aylmer Street. All pleaded guilty, and each will contribute $2, together with $2.60 costs, to the City Treasury.

Robert H. Engleton, aged 16, charged James Murpy, aged 17, with assaulting him. Murphy was fined $2 and costs, $2.60, to be paid in ten days.

RILEY FOUND GUILTY

Manslaughter Verdict Found Against Slayer of Bartender.

LONDON, Ont., April 17.—Thomas Riley, who shot and killed George Blackburn, bartender of the Hotel Cecil on the evening of Oct. 3 last, was last night convicted of manslaughter. Riley was charged with murder, and an effort was made by the crown to prove that Riley's deed was premeditated. The prisoner will be sentenced by Mr. Justice Kelly to-day.

The verdict was received with mixed feelings by Riley's mother and wife, who were among the relatives present, and who were accompanied here from Kansas by friends who yesterday testified to the good character of Riley before he came to this country.

Riley was the twenty-first person in as many years to be tried in the London court house for homicide; only one was hanged, "Peg Leg" Brown, who paid the death penalty in 1899, though there were others convicted and sent to asylums. Riley's trial was perhaps the shortest of any, the evidence being commenced yesterday morning and being ended late in the afternoon.

William Burrows, a bartender at the Cecil Hotel, Howard Beattie, Wm. H. Morgan and Chas. Holliday were the chief witnesses for the crown, along with Hear. An rews, who had been Riley's mate braking on the Grand Trunk for a short time before the shooting.

TURNBULL'S

the Regiment. During all those years he has faithfully fulfilled the duties of that position as well as other positions in the mess, of which he was Vice-President for a number of years. The qualities which have endeared him to his brother officers have been likewise appreciated by his fellow citizens. On the Council of the Regiment his advice was looked forward to and his counsel was always trusted. His elevation to the bench necessitates his departure from Peterborough. The 57th is losing a good officer, whose place will be hard to fill in the Regiment and in numerous other activities in the City. He takes with him the heartiest congratulations, the best wishes of his fellow officers and of the citizens in general.—Judge Hayes, I wish that in your new home, yourself and your esteemed family will have every happiness, and that you will live long in the honoured position to which you have been elevated.

Major Geo. W. Bennet.

Major Bennet remarked that if the militia list were examined, he did not think a better record would be found than that of Major Hayes. He joined the 2nd Regiment of the Queen's Own Rifles in Toronto as a private, and had he continued as a combatant would have been years ago at the head of the 57th.

"He chose the position of Paymaster, and it is a matter for congratulation that since he took it over we are in one of the most excellent positions of any regiment in Canada. We have an excellent financial standing, and this is largely due to the manner in which Major Hayes conducted the affairs of the Regiment and of our mess. Were it not for the fact that he is being honoured with a position higher up perhaps than any other, this might be a sorrowful occasion. It is not often given to a soldier to be appointed to the bench, but you know it has been said that in the knapsack of any private there is a marshall's baton."

Major Bennet then presented Major Hayes with a beautiful silver tray and service, "in the name of your officers and comrades." "I hope yourself and your wife and family may long live to enjoy the life you are entering. I am sure you will be an honour to the bench, and I hope that you will try to recall a few of the happy times spent with us in the 57th."

The presentation was greeted with prolonged applause and a chorus of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" sung with all the enthusiasm which springs from the friendships of the local officers.

Major Hayes' Reply.

"I can't express in words the deep pleasure your presence to-night gives me," said Major Hayes after the demonstration has subsided. "I can only say 'I thank you' and that comes from the bottom of my heart. I have had the very good fortune to have been an officer of the 57th Regiment for twenty-five years, and during all that time I have received nothing but good will from my brother officers, the non-commissioned officers and the men of the Regiment."

Referring to the past accomplishments of the Regiment, Major Hayes stated that one of the secrets of the Regiment's success was and still is the wonderful esprit de corps which permeated the ranks from the commanding officer down to the private in the ranks. The 57th had been fortunate in having at its head men of ability, tact and common sense.

An Outline of the Past.

The late lamented Lt.-Col. Rogers was in command when I was gazetted. Under him the Regiment attained a high degree in shooting. I recollect that the fine old silver challenge cup before me was established in those days for company shooting, and is was a singular fact that No. 5, then under Col. Miller and Major Bennet, won the cup often enough to keep it. They had also the reputation of taking things other than silver cups. They usually had plenty of clothing and other necessaries. In short they kept the ten commandments and anything else they could get their hands on.

Then came Lt.-Col. Bell, who I am so delighted to see here this evening. Under his command some of our best officers were attracted to the Regiment I remember Major Walker, Capt. Ritchie and Capt. McPherson joined during that time.

Col. Edwards was next and the 57th maintained its high degree of efficiency. In all those days we had with us the dean of the non-combatants, Lt.-Col. Halliday, who was our guide, philosopher and friend. We also had our veteran chaplain, young in years and still young, Major Davidson who guided us by his example and his associations with the men.

Then came my dear old friend, Lt.-Col. Miller, a gentleman we all looked up to and one of the best drilled officers the Regiment ever had. Under his regime the Regiment greatly prospered.

Lt.-Col Arthur Stevenson followed and under his command occurred the epoch marked by the laying of the corner stone and the erection of these armouries. It was something of a trying time.

Many pleasant times had been spent in the old wooden drill shed, and it took the officers and men some time before they found themselves. After Col. Stevenson came our dearly beloved Colonel, and his works speak for themselves. Col. Clegg has attracted a number of young, keen, alert officers who have the best interests of the Regiment at heart. There is not the slightest doubt but that the 57th will continue in the future to be one o fthe best drilled, best equipped and best all round regiments in this district. I cannot express the deep pleasure and gratification you have given me in the presentation of this magnificent set of silver. It touches me very deeply. When I bear it to my new home, many memories will cluster around it and will serve to remind me of the happy days spent with you. I will always be proud of the 57th Regiment, my connections with it, and this night in particular. I will never forget the motto of the 57th—Quis Separabit.

Col. Miller.

Col. Miller made one of his dashing speeches that are always listened to with pleasure. The City is losing in Major Hayes an exemplary citizen. He had filled many positions of trust and had proved his capabilities. It was a pleasure to hear that those appointed for the calling of judges had thought well to appoint a man of the qualities of Major Hayes. There was no stronger bond than that which held together the men who wear the King's uniform. Major Hayes, Major Bennet and I are the remnants of the old staff. It is a pleasure to know that one of our comrades is going to fill the honourable position of judge, but there is going to be a vacant chair around the 57th board. Major Hayes leaves a warm spot in the heart of every officer of the 57th and he must know how each officer feels towards him.

Col. Halliday.

I am glad of this opportunity of joining in this function, said Col. Halliday, and of congratulating Major Hayes upon his elevation to so high and honourable a position as that of Senior Judge of the County of Wellington. Our friendship has been long and well tried. I know he will faithfully fulfill the duties of the position to which he has been called. We will miss you Major Hayes, and we will cherish your memory. But Judge Hayes, we wish that you will be blessed with a long life, prosperity and happiness.

Capt. McPherson's Song.

Major Walker called upon Capt. A. W. McPherson to sing the song for which he is famous in the mess. It was none other than "Drill Ye Tarriers Drill," and Capt. McPherson said he offered it so that Major Hayes would not feel bad when he was called upon. "I hope that some will learn the song Major Hayes has sung so long and so faithfully.

Toast of Our Legislators.

Lt.-Col. Bell proposed the health of "Our Legislators." It is 14 years since I retired from office, he said, after a service of 25 years. Major Hayes was with me in the corps five years and he proved himself a most useful officer. I have no hesitation in saying that he will be an honour to the bench. Next to the County of York, I do not think there is a better county than that to which Major Hayes has been appointed. Referring to the Legislators, Col. Bell said Canadians could hold up their heads and say that our Legislators compare favourably with those of any other country.

Mr. E. A. Peck.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., referred in a humorous strain to the Legislature and its working. Nearly twenty-seven years ago there drifted into Peterborough, then a town, a tall, fine-looking young fellow from a little village on the shores of one of our inner seas. He was a lawyer, and still is a lawyer by the way. He hung out his shingle alongside E. H. D. Hall. We lawyers took an interest in him and as a result he developed into one of our prominent lawyers. Three essential qualities that go to make up a judge are civility and respect to the members of the legal profession, a good deal of common sense and the knowledge of a little law. We know that Judge Hayes is possessed of these qualities in a marked degree. He has been uniformly courteous. He has a wealth of common sense and tact, and he is a profound lawyer. I am glad to say that although we have had differences in questions of fact and law, yet Judge Hayes and myself have never had the slightest personal difference. I trust that he will have a long and successful career on the bench, and that he and Mrs. Hayes will have many years of happiness in their new home.

Mayor Buller.

His Worship laid claim to being one of the oldest members of the 57th. I started, he said, as a private and wound up as a drummer and felt proud of the position, and proud to be with the battalion. On behalf of the citizens I may say that it is with regret and pleasure that we have learned of his departure to fill the high position which he has earned so well. The citizens are all proud of Major Hayes no matter whom they may be, and I feel that he will be an honour to the bench.

The Bench and the Bar.

Rev. Canon Davidson, in proposing the Bench and the Bar, spoke of the reverence and respect which the British people have always shown for law, the courts, and other representatives of authority. Of Major Hayes he said one side of his character had not been mentioned. The Government knew the development of his head, or they would not have appointed him, but we know that he has the heart development. If he makes any mistakes they will be on the side of mercy.

Judge Huycke.

His Honour Judge Huycke said that it was with mingled feelings that he referred to Judge Hayes. Four years ago, when he came to Peterborough, the first official welcome was extended by Judge Hayes, who was then President of the Bar Association. From that time the closest fellowship had existed between them.

"I have never known of such an unanimous expression of goodwill than that extended to Judge Hayes since his appointment was made known. He has been one of the most popular citizens in Peterborough. You officers of the 57th Regiment are losing a fellow officer; I am losing a local friend, but I am gaining a brother. He is a brother Judge. You must remember, too, that while he doffs the uniform of one branch of His Majesty's service, he dons another, not less honourable, not less distinguished, and not less important. Judge Hayes is a King's Judge, appointed by the King through his regularly chosen officers who perform the King's business.

Judge Huycke sketched the development of the judiciary from the Norman and Saxon times, when the King was Judge. "I am not sure but that the new service of Judge Hayes is of more abiding importance than that which he is leaving. I feel he will bring no discredit upon those who appointed him and that he will in a dignified way uphold the traditions of the bench.

E. H. D. Hall.

Mr. E. H. D. Hall, as business partner of Judge Hayes, paid a splendid tribute to him. His association with the guest of the evening had shown that he always acted up to the best traditions of the bar in his interest an dattention to clients. Mr. Hall was satisfied that on the bench he would continue in the same way.

"Our association covers the past twenty-seven years and the fact that we never had a falling out was entirely due to Judge Hayes. (Judge Hayes—"Oh, Mr. Hall). I regret that his appointment necessitates the severance of our interests of the past quarter of a century. The County of Wellington is to be congratulated upon the appointment. They will find Judge Hayes courteous, gentlemanly and faithful to his duties."

R. R. Hall.

"When you find two members of the legal profession carrying on business as Hall and Hayes have done, the very fact of their long association is strong evidence of their mutual trust, confidence and honesty," said Mr. R. R. Hall. "This is one of the strongest recommendations Judge Hayes can carry away with him. I am perfectly satisfied that the County of Wellington will find in Judge Hayes all the qualities to be found in a good judge."

The Board of Education.

Before this toast was proposed by Major Walker, Rev. Canon Davidson was pressed to sing the particular song which his brother officers always looked forward to with pleasure It was greeted with a round of applause.

Major Walker briefly proposed the toast referring to the fact that at the last meeting of the Board that usually sedate assembly had burst into song when reference had been made to the departure of Mr. Hayes, who had been a member of the Board for nineteen years.

Dr. Merrison.

In responding, Dr. Morrison, Chairman of the Board of Education said that the Board distinctly felt the loss of Judge Hayes. For years he had held the honorable position of Chairman of the Finance Committee. When he first became a member the expenditure of the Board was $33,000. It is now $81,000. (Officers—"Oh, Major, how could you," and "that's our Paymaster) rounds of applause). You cannot hold him responsible for the expenditure, however. The finances of the Board are in good shape, thanks to Mayor Buller and the City Council. Judge Hayes was Chairman of the Board for two years. There were 41 officers when Judge Hayes first became a member. To-day there are 88 teachers, janitors and other officers. The property was worth $81,000 and to-day it is worth $360,000. Not only was Judge Hayes a good member but he gave valuable counsel when at times knotty problems came before us. He will take away with him not only the best wishes of the members of the Board of Education, but of the citizens at large.

The Guest's Song.

The next feature was Major Hayes' song, an old chestnut he called it, but when the officers joined in the chorus it made a fine effect.

Trade and Commerce.

Major V. Eastwood proposed the toast "Trade and Commerce," incidentally paying his respects to Judge Hayes and his family.

Mr. R. W. Travers made a capital response. Speaking of Judge Hayes he remarked that the appointment was one of the most popular Peterborough ever had.

M. E. G. Patterson expressed his congratulation to Mr. Hayes, and stated that in business he had knowledge of his abilities.

Mr. Basil Hall, as President of the Board of Trade, struck a note for the advancement of the City.

Col. Miller recited "Glencoe" in splendid style.

Our Sister Corps.

Major Mills proposed this toast, and paid a neat compliment to Major Hayes, who, he said, was the last of the active officers of the 57th Regiment when he first joined it.

Col. Young, Officer Commanding the 10th Field Battery, C.F.A., responded for the artillery.

Major Medd also spoke for the representatives of the field armaments, both referring to past associations with Judge Hayes.

Another Song.

Captain R Watt sang "My Old Kentucky Home" with full chorus. It was a very effective interlude.

The Press.

The toast to the press was proposed by Honorary Major Dr. Eastwood and responded to by the representative of the Examiner.

The War Song.

Then followed the war song, around which are linked memories of Major R. M. Dennistoun. It is termed the Bold McIntyres, and in ordinary words was the "hit" of the evening. It was worth waiting until past one o'clock to hear and see it.

Auld Lang Syne, God Save the King, and the usual cheers concluded one of the big events in the history of the officers' mess of the 57th Regiment.

DOINGS IN THE BIG LEAGUES

CHICAGO, April 16.—Joe Benz's clever pitching with bunched hits by his team mates, enabled the Chicago Americans to shut out Cleveland here to-day by 1 to 0, and win their third straight game from the visitors. The game was a pitchers' battle between Benz and Blanding, with the former showing the better form and doing his best work in the pinches. Weaver was presented with a large silver bat and ball by some of his friends.

Batteries for Chicago: Benz and Schalk. For Cleveland: Blanding and Carisct.

ST. LOUIS, April 16.—The Pittsburg team won from St. Louis to-day by 4 to 1. Pittsburg tallied its first run in the second innings when Wagner got his first hit of the season, a single over second base, and took third on Whitted's throw past first in trying for Vlox. He scored for Mitchell's single.

Batteries, for Pittsburg: McQuillan and Gibson; for St. Louis, Hogeman and Wingo.

COULDN'T STOP BROWNS

DETROIT, April 16.—Three Detroit pitchers were unable to stop St Louis to-day and the Browns won 8 to 5. James, who pitched his first complete game of major league ball, was also hit hard, but only in the fourth innings, when they scored two runs, were the Tigers able to bunch their drives. Batteries, for St. Louis: James and Severoid; for Detroit: Dauss, Hall, Cavet and Stanage, Baker.

FEDERAL LEAGUE

KANSAS CITY, April 16. — Chicago defeated Kansas City by 3 to 2 in the initial game of the season to-day as a result of Hendrix's effective pitching. The visiting pitcher allowed but one hit up to the eighth inning, after which he eased up a bit. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Chicago	3	7	2
Kansas City	2	6	1

Hendrix and Wilson; E. Packard and Easterly.

ST. LOUIS BEATEN

ST. LOUIS, April 16.—Indianapolis defeated St. Louis in the first game of the local Federal League by 7 to 3. Most of the runs were scored in the first half of the game. A home run by Dolan in the third innings brought in Kauff and Scheer, and gave the visitors a lead that the locals could not overcome. In the first inning Kommers of St. Louis drove the ball over the right field fence, for a home run, bringing in Boucher. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Indianapolis	7	11	2
St. Louis	3	7	2

Falkenberg and Rariden; Groom and Simon.

BASEBALL.

The Erie, Pa. Times says: Billy Kelley and Eddie Flanagan, the two local boys who have become stars on the baseball sand lots of Erie, reported to Manager Curly Blount of the Peterborough club of the Canadian League at Youngstown to-day. That being Blount's home time he desired to have his players work out there. Kelley is a candidate for honours behind the bat while Flanagan will endeavour to hold down the initial sack for the Petes. Erie fans will watch their success with much interest in the hope that they make good.

MAY BE BEFORE MAGISTRATE

Two local youngsters will probably be up before the magistrate this week on a charge of disorderly conduct committed last week. We understand that the boys persisted in misbehaving themselves while Inspector Lees was visiting the school, hence the charge. Other boys who have been making a nuisance of themselves around Old Havelock will also have a chance to defend their actions before a J. P.—Havelock Standard.

TWO LIGHT WORKOUTS FOR THE PETES NO NEW PLAYERS REPORTED YESTERDAY

Manager Blount Had His Squad Out Bright and Early Yesterday---Limbering Up Exercise in the Morning and Batting Practice in the Afternoon the Order of the Day--First Exhibition Game Will Be Played on Sunday

Examiner Special:

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 17.—The Peterborough Canadian League squad commenced their training operations here yesterday, with light workouts both morning and afternoon. The first day's drill was more or less of a limbering up process, as Manager Blount does not believe in too strenuous work during the first few days, realizing that the sore arms and stiffened muscles that generally result from such a course cause more damage than no practice at all.

A LIGHT WORK-OUT.

The weather was dark and threatening in the morning, and Wednesday's rain had left Wright Park in bad shape, the infield being muddy and the outer gardens wet and soggy. However, Manager Blount thought that one day lost on account of the weather was enough, and he chased his squad out in uniform early. An hour and one half was spent in light work, the players tossing the ball around and generally loosening up. No one took any liberties with his throwing arm, and the work was not of a nature to give any line on the capabilities of the new members of the squad. Blount kept them going for ninety minutes and then cried "Enough." The players finished up the work-out by jogging around the muddy park four times.

BATTING PRACTICE.
